Ceremony in April Is Legally Possible

Copyright, 1936, by The Washington Post.

King Edward VIII of Great Britain plans to marry the glamorous American, Mrs. Ernest ("Wally") Simpson, The Post learned last night.

He may not be able to make the erstwile Baltimore belle his Queen, but he is said to be determined to make her his wife, according to cabled advices to The Post, even if it costs him his throne.

Mrs. Simpson's suit for divorce from her ship-broker husband, coming at this particular time, is considered significant. It indicates that the 42-year-old British monarch plans to have a showdown before his coronation in May.

Under English civil law, a divorced person may not remarry until six months after the decree.

Could Marry in April.

Mrs. Simpson's suit, which her husband will not fight, will be heard October 24, or shortly thereafter, and the decree is expected to be granted promptly. Allowing for the six-month interval required by law, she and King Edward could marry late in April or early in May before the coronation ceremonies.

Contrary to a general impression, there is nothing in English law to prevent the King from marrying a commoner. Royal marriages are governed by the royal marriage act of 1772, passed by Parliament on orders of King George III, who was angered by the secret marriage of two of his brothers.

The act of 1772 provided that all descendants of King George II, in order to marry legally, had to obtain the consent of the King, "signified under the great seal and declared in council."

It would appear, therefore, that King Edward VIII could give himself permission to marry Mrs. Simpson. Of course the privy counsel, which includes all cabinet officers, could resign as a protest, but even that would not alter the status of Mrs. Simpson as Queen.

Always a determined young man and never a slave to precedent, King Edward, according to The Post's advices, is ready to abdicate in favor of the Duke of York if that step should be necessary.

The King, it is known, wanted to step aside in favor of York at the time of King George's death, but was persuaded to take over the scepter because of the grave international situation.

Those familiar with the temper of the English people are not at all certain that King Edward would have to abdicate in order to marry Mrs. Simpson.

The King, it is pointed out, is tremendously popular with the British people, particularly with the middle and lower classes. And one reason for that popularity is his genuine democracy, his delight in getting out and mingling with farmers, coal miners and other commoners.

These people have seen a score of foreign princesses thrown at their bachelor ruler, and if he did not choose to marry any of them they did not blame him much.

Kept Up Friendship.

When Edward ascended the throne, there were many in government and court circles who hoped he would break off his friendship with Mrs. Simpson. They had looked on tolerantly while, as Prince of Wales, he and the vivacious brunette toured the night clubs of London and the continent. But the weighty responsibility of ruling over a quarter of the globe's surface, they thought, would bring a change.

As King, Edward made it very clear that there would be no change so far as Mrs. Simpson was concerned.

He included her in his yachting party when he went on a holiday cruise to the Adriatic, and invited her to a royal house party at Balmoral Castle in Scotland immediately thereafter.

By this time it was apparent to many who were not already aware of it that King Edward was deeply in love with Mrs. Simpson, and was determined to have the world know it.

Mrs. Simpson, born in Baltimore 40 years ago, was comparatively poor at the time of her debut as Wallis Warfield. However, she

Here incognito for a secret visit with her old friend, Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, she was accompanied by her stalwart son-in-law, Prince Torlonia, and his Bourbon wife, the Infanta Beatriz, daughter of the Queen. The mother of the prince, the former Elsie Moore, of New York, was in the party.

The Queen's highly rouged face smiled with enjoyment as the American press gave her a typical reception, and at the same time she tried to soothe the embarrassment of Lady Lindsay, who had made all arrangements to keep the visit secret. Sir Ronald is in London, and is not expected back until next week.

Strife Flares, Indianan Quits A. F. L. Council

Green Denies Hutcheson's Resignation Is Due to Stand on Campaign.

By Felix Bruner.

Internal strife flared anew in the American Federation of Labor yesterday with the resignation from the executive council of William L. Hutcheson, of Indianapolis, president of the Carpenters Union.

Hutcheson now is in charge of labor organization activities of the Republican National Committee and it had been reported that in event of the election of Gov. Alf M. Landon he would be in line for appointment as Secretary of Labor.

Persistent reports that Hutcheson was leaving the council because of the forthcoming "appraisal" of candidates for President by the federation were denied yesterday by William Green, federation president. Hutcheson has not been present at any of the sessions of the current meeting of the council.

Green revealed that the carpenters' president had submitted his resignation a week ago, but it was not acted upon until yesterday. He said that in a telephone conversation Hutcheson had told him he was resigning because it did not believe it right that two members of the same union should be members of the council, Frank Duffy, vice president of the carpenters, is the other member of his union to whom Hutcheson referred.

The federation president said Hutcheson also was quitting because he could not be present at the council meeting and, therefore, did not feel he could sign the report to be made to the federation convention

'Overtravel' Margin Rules of District Are Not Met, Brown Declares.

Operating certificates are being withheld from 178 elevators in Government buildings because they do not comply with safety regulations of the District elevator code, Joseph M. Brown, District elevator inspector, revealed yesterday.

All of the elevators are in constant use daily and his office is powerless to force compliance with the District regulations, Brown said.

The majority of the elevators are modern machines in the new Triangle buildings. Brown refuses to issue certificates for most of them because "overtravel" safety margins in the shaft have been reduced below the minimum required by the District code.

Mechanically the elevators are in good condition, Brown emphasized, and there is no immediate danger in riding on them. But the "overtravel" safety margin is called for in the District code to guard against an unforeseen mechanical failure which might cause the elevator to run away.

Nine are at G. P. O.

Brown revealed he has condemned nine elevators in the Government Printing Office, which are still in operation. If the lifts were in a private building the shafts would be sealed shut, Brown said.

Augustus E. Giegengack, public printer, said the condemned elevators are in the old printing office annex, which is used as a ware-

Soviet Arms Are Reported Sent to Spain

War Developments.

A Norwegian steamer loaded with ammunition consigned for the Spanish government sailed yesterday from a Russian Baltic port, according to a Norwegian telegraph bureau.

At Moscow, officials denied the Soviet government was sending the Spanish loyalists anything other than food and clothing, but observers saw indications of a change from the present policy of rigid neutrality.

Insurgent troops advancing on Madrid were halted by government forces at Brunete, 19½ miles from the capital. As rebels planned a drive on Madrid by three converging columns, the loyalists sent fresh troops to the front and bolstered defenses in the city.

Arms Reported Shipped.

Oslo, Norway, Oct. 16 (AP).—A Norwegian steamer loaded with ammunition consigned to the Spanish Madrid government sailed from a Russian Baltic port today, the Norwegian telegraph bureau reported.

The Norwegian foreign office promptly announced that strict neutrality regulations prevented it from halting the shipment aboard the vessel, the Bjoernoey.

Said the foreign office:

"Norway scrupulously maintains neutrality, but has no judicial power to prevent a Norwegian ship from transporting ammunition from another country. Therefore, there has been no breach of neutrality by Norway. The land from which the transport eventually goes should prevent the shipment."

Ship in North Sea.

The Nazi organ Prittfolk said the Bjoernoey tonight already was in the North Sea.

When the vessel was off Kristiansand, Norway's south coast, the newspaper said, it was met by a small craft which took off the Bjoernoey's skipper and put a new master aboard.

The landed skipper was isolated by the vessel's owner on the pretext that he was dangerously ill, the newspaper said.

The Bjoernoey, a 1,700-ton vessel, is listed as being owned by Trygve Skogland, of Haugesund, who was reported to have pur-

Rebel Drive Halted.

Spain, Oct. 16 (AP).—Retreating government forces, falling back on this ment forces, falling back on this bleak village only 19½ miles west of Madrid, tonight halted a Fascist attack.

Capt. Jernimo Sitjar said his men would be able to hold off the insurgents until their positions could be consolidated for a strong counter-attack against the spearhead of the insurgent drive on the capital.

Villages in the mountainous area were evacuated hastily as cannon fire moved nearer and nearer to Navalcarnero, strategic government-held city on the Maqueda-Madrid highway running into the capital from the southwest.

Fresh troops were brought up from Madrid, as high government leaders in Madrid waited hopefully to see if sympathetic European governments such as Russia would break away from the neutrality pact and aid their cause directly.

The new recruits were mainly rough and untrained peasants, virtually drafted as the capital heard reports that the Fascist advance had speared to within 20 miles of the city.

Laborers in Madrid speeded construction of defenses of the capital. Trench diggers furrowed the city's streets, and workmen spun barbed wire barricades across street intersections.

Premier Francisco Largo Caballero took over personal direction of the war ministry.

On all but the direct western front, the war ministry reported, government forces were holding their enemies at bay more than 45 miles from Madrid.

Democrats Using Mails Free To Send Out Landon Attacks; Hoover Assails Fund 'Deceit'

Former President Says New Deal Is Guilty of 'Juggling.'

Aid Fund Diversion Charged in Speech

Defends Own Rule, Avers It Was Not Cause of Depression.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 16.—Former President Herbert Hoover tonight accused the Roosevelt Administration of "juggling" fiscal reports of the Government to make "expenditures look less than they are."

Addressing a Republican rally, the former President scored what he described as "an entirely new system of double bookkeeping" introduced by the New Deal to keep "emergency" expenditures separate from "ordinary" or "routine" expenditures.

Assailing the system he asserted: "Such double bookkeeping never has been used for honest purposes by Governments. Its very motive is intellectual dishonesty. That is pernicious deceit.

Reckless Increase.

"Mr. Roosevelt in his 1936 Pittsburgh speech implies that his gigantic increase in expenditures during the past four years has been necessitated by relief in some form.

"You may, however, be surprised to know that a large part of the burden the people have willingly assumed for relief was used in hundreds of millions of reckless increase of ordinary routine expenses of Government.

"This waste has been bad enough. But morally worse has been a continuous juggling with this double bookkeeping to cover this up. But the New Deal has a great sorrow to hide. You remember Mr. Roosevelt promised that he would reduce expenditures 25 per cent. The skeleton of that promise has rattled in the New Deal closet until they have tried to quiet it by juggling the double books."

Three Formulas.

The New Deal, he said, has "three formulas for making these expenditures look less than they are." These he listed as:

Omitting certain items from its list of regular expenditures and placing them in the appendix of the budget.

Deducting certain expenditures before the total is made up, which is announced to the public.

Using money from relief funds for other purposes.

"If an income-tax payer or any corporation kept books like this Administration," Mr. Hoover said, "that is, if they showed similar morals in juggling their accounts, they would be put in jail."

Other Figures Juggled.

He asserted that the "juggling" did not apply to the records of the last four years alone, but that New Deal leaders "juggle their own juggling rules" to make expenditures in the Hoover Administration "look six or eight hundred millions to the bad."

"Thus the Republican regular expenditures," he continued, "are juggled up and the New Deal expenditures are juggled down. And, presto! The New Deal regular expenditures for the first full New Deal year of 1934 are a billion less than the Republican."

He charged that the New Deal's "bookkeeping for political purposes" also "is misleading the people through implication as to what their expenditures are likely to be in the future."

The President, he said, "seeks to convey the impression by the accounts that his ordinary expenditures of Government outside the bonus are still running at less than four billions per annum," whereas "the regular running expenditures of the Government have jumped to about six billions per annum."

He said the New Deal claims there will be no need for increased taxes "opens another field of intellectual dishonesty."

"The Government income for 1936 was about four billion after we omit repealed taxes," he stated. "That leaves a deficit of two billion for regular running expenses even without continued unemployment relief. Present taxes may stretch up another $500,000,000 or even a billion with full prosperity. And it still leaves a huge deficit. Those taxes are as inevitable as night."

In conclusion, he offered two suggestions to remedy present conditions:

Denies Causing Depression.

"Resume Congressional control of spending by the election of Republican Representatives and Senators.

"Drive these expenses down toward the Republican levels, balance the budget, put back the integrity of Government accounting, and above all restore truth and morals in Government by the election of those two honest gentlemen, Alfred Landon and Frank Knox."

Mr. Hoover devoted the first part of his speech to a discussion of President Roosevelt's recent address in Pittsburgh. He denied his Administration was responsible for the depression or that the Roosevelt Administration brought about recovery.

"The origins of this depression,"

Franked Cards Aid New Deal

A typical piece of campaign literature sent out under Congressional frank.

Yesterday's Politics.

Gov. Landon announced a campaign dash to California, beginning tomorrow, to be followed by a trip across the country to New York City.

A deluge of 6,000,000 postal cards, quoting Landon's earlier statements on the New Deal, started flowing from the Capitol under the franks of several Democratic members of Congress.

William L. Hutcheson, Landon supporter, resigned from the executive council of the A. F. of L. as the council prepared to make public its "appraisal" of the candidates' labor records.

The Lonergan campaign funds committee was challenged by G. O. P. Chairman John Hamilton to hold immediate public hearings on charges of WPA political intimidation in Pennsylvania.

President Slaps At 'Propaganda' Of Wall Street

Financiers Wasting Money of Stockholders in Drive, He Says in Ohio.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Roosevelt train en route to Niagara Falls, Oct. 16.—President Roosevelt told a Cleveland audience tonight the "great financial district of New York" is "flooding" stock and bond holders with literature "warning" them against returning the New Deal to office.

Speaking to thousands of people jammed around his campaign train on Cleveland's lakefront, the President wound up a rapid-fire campaign through Ohio with an assertion that stockholders' money was being wasted on anti-Administration literature and that the "waste" was "being perpetrated" by those who in depression days "brought business as a whole to its knees."

He pounded away on a theme that had run through his informal addresses all the way across the State—that the Administration had brought recovery.

"I repeat here," he said, "that the record shows that no administration in the history of the United States has done so much to encourage the business of the Nation."

Drizzling Rain Falls.

Drizzling rain fell as the train, an hour late, arrived, where a crowd estimated by Police Chief George J. Matowitz at 35,000 to 40,000 persons had gathered.

His hearers yelled when he mentioned "smiling faces and happy crowds" and contrasted them with those he said he saw four years ago.

Back in 1933, he contended in his address, the entire system of free and private enterprise had been

Will Speak in Los Angeles and New York Garden on 2-Week Tour.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Oct. 16.—Details of a final campaign tour striking the Pacific Coast and spanning the continent were charted by Gov. Alf M. Landon today as Union Partyists announced a write-in Kansas campaign for their Presidential candidate, William Lemke.

With the same unexpectedness of his surprise dash to Portland, Me., Landon announced upon his return from a Lake States campaign swing that he would leave Sunday night to go first to Los Angeles on a two-week trip embracing at least half a dozen major addresses and including a long-planned appearance in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Immediately, the Republican nominee began preparations for winding up his contest against the New Deal. Leaving his special train at 7:20 a. m. (C. S. T.) after an eight-day drive through Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio, the Governor drove to the executive mansion for breakfast and was at his capitol office at 8:30. He spent the afternoon working on speeches at home.

In New York, the Republican State committee announced that Alfred E. Smith, Democratic candidate for President eight years ago, and Gov. Landon would meet for a talk when Landon arrives in New York October 28.

Although Smith is supporting the Kansas Governor and has been speaking in his behalf, the two men have never met.

May Confer With Knox.

Some advisers foresaw possibilities of a conference before Landon heads westward Sunday between the Governor and his running mate, Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago. Knox was scheduled to spend a week-end

Six Million Cards Giving Past New Deal Views Sent From Capitol.

Literature Bears 4 Members' Names

'Nothing Irregular' in Procedure, Declares Senator Guffey.

By Robert C. Albright.

A veritable deluge of campaign literature, including 6,000,000 cards quoting Gov. Alf M. Landon's early utterances on the Roosevelt Administration, yesterday was pouring out of the Capitol and into the mails under franking privileges of United States Senators and Representatives.

The Landon cards, addressed to no specific individual in most cases, but subject to wide distribution under simplified mailing privileges, were being handled from quarters in the Senate Office Building, apparently under orders of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee.

Taken From Speech.

One card bore the bold type inscription, "Gov. Landon said?" The reverse side carried ten quotations attributed to the Republican Presidential candidate, from March, 1933, to November, 1935, in an apparent effort to show he was favorable to some New Deal activities at that time. The quotations were taken from a speech by Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, printed in the Congressional Record. These bore the frank of Senator Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Senate Democratic campaign committee.

Other cards were sent free under the frank of Representative Matthew J. Merritt (Democrat), New York. These quoted from a speech by Representative Brent Spence (Democrat), of Kentucky, in which he said "if Gov. Landon had been President during the banking crisis, there would have been no Federal deposit insurance law." These cards also quoted from a speech by Landon criticizing bank deposit guaranty.

However, at Olean, N. Y., Representative Merritt said he knew nothing about the mailing under his frank, according to the Associated Press.

"I don't know what it's all about," he said.

He declared he intended to make inquiry to find out what the cards said, adding he thought it possible his secretary might have "seen some available stuff and picked it up to send out under my frank, just as we send out farm books and other matter."

Others Distributed.

It was learned that other cards were being distributed under the franks of Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, and Fred H. Brown, of New Hampshire (Democrats).

A staff of 14 workers was busy mailing the cards, and the supervisor of the group said he was working for Emil Hurja, assistant to Democratic National Committee Chairman James A. Farley. Spokesmen for the Democratic National Committee said they had nothing to do with the distribution—that it was being handled by the Senate Democratic campaign committee.

Senator Guffey, chairman of the committee, admitted in New York that Democrats are doing much franking "legitimately," and said there was "nothing unusual" about the distribution.

Associated Press dispatches quoted him as saying that "both parties have been doing it for years."

"We pay for the literature itself, but avail ourselves of the franking privilege under the law," dispatches quoted Guffey as saying. "Unquestionably, much Republican campaign literature also is going out under frank."

Mailed to Voters.

Guffey told the United Press in New York he was sending out 2,000,000 cards under his frank to reach the rural voters of Pennsylvania. He said that today he was "going to give out the list of Republicans who did the same thing when they were in office."

Attaches of the office of Senator Guffey in Washington insisted they knew nothing about the distribution.

Mailing of the 6,000,000 cards bearing the franks of the four Democratic members of Congress was being handled from special quarters on the first floor of the Senate Office Building.

A group of newspaper reporters blundered into the office by mistake in the early afternoon, and talked to the supervisor. Later in the afternoon the office was kept locked. The foreman refused to divulge any in-

Weaknesses Exposed in District Adoption Law; 25% of Children Under Care Are Illegitimate

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Almost 25 per cent of the children now under public care in the District were born out of wedlock.

The latest annual report of the child welfare division to the Welfare Board brought to light the need of new provisions for them. Amendments to the welfare law, now being drafted by the corporation counsel's office include a protective plan that should be an important factor in solving problems of both illegitimates and their adoptive parents, believes Miss A. Patricia Morse, chief of the child welfare division.

A part of the plant, she pointed out, provides for the care of unmarried mothers and babies for six months after birth and prohibits an infant's permanent transfer from the mother to other persons at any time, without the consent of the court, Miss Morse holds.

"The complicated task of finding a proper home for the illegitimate child should not be left to any one person's intuitive impulse, unaided by expert knowledge. There are too many opportunities for error. The combined judgment of a trained social investigator, the court, and a physician should be taken into consideration before any child is placed in a new home. The proposed law now being sponsored by the Juvenile Protective Association would eliminate many pitfalls in the present adoption system.

Consisting of a single paragraph, elastic in interpretation, the adoption law now in effect in the District was drawn up 30 years ago. Believing that it should be changed because it contained too many loopholes, the Juvenile Protective Association two years ago appointed a committee to make a study of the situation and to draft a proposed new law. Prof. H. G. Spaulding, of George Washington University, was chairman. After the committee had made an intensive survey of the laws in a number of States and had consulted perts of the United States Children's Bureau, the draft was modified and approved by a joint committee made up of representatives of nine other social agencies.

Discussing the present adoption law and the need for a new one at that time, Prof. Spaulding called attention to the fact:

"All the present laws says about the child's welfare is that the adopting parent must be a proper person. Those are the words, 'a

D. C. Girdler Reveals His Goal—He Was Hunting a Place to Park!

With pride—and relief—The Post announces the termination (applause) of the record-breaking District-girdling trek of Mr. Sidney Olson. His expense account was $8.40, subject to audit.

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

Ellipse Road, Oct. 16.—It is high time to reveal the motive for the first circumnavigation of the District, which I have just finished by passing Zero Milestone, at least 4,000 miles ahead of all other District-girdlers. Maybe not 4,000 miles, but quite a ways anyway.

When I left the office Wednesday noon my orders were simply to find a parking place. "Spare no expense. Find a parking place if you have to go all the way around the District."

Well, I've been all the way around the District and I haven't found a parking place yet. As a matter of fact I am still driving round and round the Ellipse, tossing these dispatches out to an office boy named "Sleepy-foot," as I can't park the car.

I've sent for an ax, however, and intend to double-park while I cut down a tree. I'm afraid to go back to the office as a failure. I'm a little afraid to go back anyway.

The final dash today was the most hectic of all, a grueling grind every foot of the way, and without any rest except a little two-hour nap I had on Nichols street southeast while waiting for a red traffic light to turn green.

Leaving Camp Petunia, or "Very Little America," early this morning, Photographer Bill Klemm and I trekked desperately forward, hoping to maintain our two-day lead over other District girdlers.

Knox Declares Roosevelt Late In Trade Stand

Chicago Speech Ridiculed as New Low Point for Hypocrisy.

By the Associated Press.

Tulsa, Okla, Oct. 16.—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, charged President Roosevelt tonight with "political hypocrisy" in the Administration's attitude toward business.

He quoted the President as having told a Chicago audience Wednesday night, "behind the growing recovery of today is a story of deliberate Government acceptance of responsibility to save business—to save the American system of private enterprise and economic democracy."

In an address prepared for delivery before a party rally here, Knox assailed this statement with the charge:

"Political hypocrisy reached its lowest point in Chicago Wednesday, when the President came out for free enterprise, two weeks before election, after a three-year record of relentless and savage assaults on businessmen, on competitive enterprise, on private business, and on production, in defiance of common sense, economics, States' rights and the Constitution."

New Order Ridiculed.

The Chicago publisher's address capped a half-day of campaign touring in Oklahoma, which he entered from Missouri. He was traveling aboard the special six-car campaign train which has carried him approximately 15,000 miles.

From his attack on the President, Knox turned his fire on the belief the Roosevelt New Deal has launched a "new order" in the Nation.

This Knox called the "most ridiculous nonsense" and an "incredible falsehood." He said in part:

"The New Deal has not altered the American way of life. It has not changed the American system. It has not created new instruments of power. * * * I freely concede that it has tried to reorganize the American system of enterprise and the American system of government. For a time it played dictator to Congress. For a time it threatened the majesty and the ordained authority of the Supreme Court.

"But in all these efforts to regiment industry and create scarcity and destroy constitutional government, it failed."

Appeals to Democrats.

"It is a sad thing to see the party of Jefferson and Cleveland and Wilson led by men who revile the Supreme Court, who attempt to violate the Constitution, who coerce the Congress into passing laws it does not approve, who openly declare their intent to destroy the American economic system."

"The Administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt was the first one in American history that thought the American system was a failure. It was the first in America that attempted to destroy it."

32 Killed, Hundreds Hurt in India Riots

Bombay, Oct. 16 (AP).—At least 32 persons were shot to death and hundreds injured today in the second day of widespread religious rioting.

Comparative calm prevailed throughout Bombay tonight after a 10 p. m. curfew virtually emptied the streets.

Police fired into two mobs during the day and scores of pedestrians were stabbed and beaten.

Street car service was halted and business houses closed as British troops were held in readiness.

The disorders were precipitated by construction of a Hindu place of worship near a mosque in a Bombay suburb.

More than 50 persons have been arrested.

Kiss by Queen Marie Heals Rumanian Rift

Bucharestt, Rumania, Oct. 16 (AP). A royal kiss was big news throughout Rumania today. Queen Mother Marie bestowed the kiss upon her son, King Carol. The occasion was the monarch's forty-third birthday, and Rumania immediately saw in the Queen Mother's gesture of affection an indication of reconciliation in the long-divided royal house. Queen Marie never has approved of Carol's friendship with Mme. Magda Lupescu.

Festivals were held over the nation in honor of the brithday.

Roosevelt's Campaign Utterances Would Astound the Legendary Man From Mars.

By Franklyn Waltman

IF the legendary Man from Mars, whom many writers enjoy bringing on visitations to this earth, should come to see us during this Presidential campaign, he would undoubtedly be a very perplexed man. Indeed, it is doubtful whether he could make any sense out of it at all, especially if he had been here, say, during the spring of 1935.

WALTMAN.

Our Man from Mars—who possesses a very logical mind—undoubtedly would be surprised if he listened to several speeches by Gov. Alf M. Landon. For instance, he would be unable to understand how the Republican nominee possibly could balance the Federal budget if, as he promises, he continues relief activities, grants the farmers all they are now getting plus another billion or two in additional subsidies and does not impose any new taxes.

But if the Man from Mars would be surprised by the Landon speeches, he would be amazed and astounded by the campaign utterances of President Roosevelt. Having been here in the spring of 1935, the Man from Mars would immediately ask if this Mr. Roosevelt was the same Mr. Roosevelt who occupied the White House at that time.

Memories of his visit to this country in the spring of 1935, came back vividly to the Man from Mars as he listened to President Roosevelt's melodious voice over the radio from Omaha and from Chicago. The Man from Mars thought that in the Omaha farm speech Mr. Roosevelt had greatly changed his ideas since the spring of 1935—but the President in that speech assured him he had not.

And the Chicago speech on free business enterprise left the Man from Mars dumfounded. Here was Mr. Roosevelt proclaiming his love of the businessman and financier, asserting that all along he had fought to save the profit system by "encouraging" them to pay higher wages and shorten working hours and "discouraging" the recalcitrant minority and that "above all, we have fought to break the deadly grip which monopoly has in the past been able to fasten on the business of the Nation."

And when the soothing voice over the radio declared that "we cherished our system of private property and free enterprise" and that "I believe, I have always believed and I will always believe in private enterprise as the backbone of economic well-being in America," the Man from Mars would have fallen out of his chair if his feet had not been braced on the library book shelf.

The Man from Mars remembered when he was last here—in the spring of 1935—that businessmen who wished to sell cigarettes or books a little cheaper than the prices fixed by their competitors were called "chiselers." He recalled that poor taxicab drivers were deprived of a higher price for their used cabs—even though the dealers were willing to pay it—because the NRA code stopped that form of "free enterprise."

He recalled a pants presser was thrown into jail because he pressed pants for a few cents less than the NRA code said he should charge and how a Texas oil man was put in jail for violating a section of the oil code which did not exist, in order to "discourage" him from being unfair.

One particular observation of that former visit stood out clearly in the mind of the Man from Mars, because its was so quaint. It was the custom, required by the NRA, of steel makers submitting identical bids for the Government's business. And he remembered a shipyard owner telling him that under an NRA code no new shipyards could be started. The Man from Mars then thought that such things were an abandonment of "free enterprise" and an intrenchment of monopoly—but he must have been wrong.

The Man from Mars also remembered a cotton planter who owed a goodly sum on his mortgage, which could be paid only by producing so much cotton, being told that it was against the law for him to plant that much cotton.

But the biggest thrill the Man from Mars experienced on that former visit was a White House press conference. It seemed to him that it took place a few days after the Supreme Court unanimously said that all these NRA codes were unconstitutional. He remembered Mr. Roosevelt, solemnly asserting that the Supreme Court decision was a terrible catastrophe, that it relegated the country back to the "horse and buggy" days of 1875.

It was not just the invalidation of the NRA that worried him, the President said, as the Man from Mars recalled. It was the sweeping nature of that decision—why that decision would mean that the AAA was unconstitutional and the country had to keep the AAA—if it lost AAA crop control, why the price of cotton would drop to 5 cents a pound and wheat would sell for 36 cents a bushel.

The Man from Mars explained he was deeply impressed but felt that Mr. Roosevelt would propose an amendment to the Constitution and prevent the Supreme Court from ruining the country. He said he left this country shortly after that time but planned to come back this fall to witness the political battle of the age when Mr. Roosevelt would fight for a constitutional amendment against the "chiselers," the advocates of free enterprise and stodgy old lawyers.

"So here I am," he said. "Having heard that the Supreme Court invalidated AAA and many other New Deal laws, too, I expected to find a terrible condition here. But I am stupefied. They tell me that since the NRA decision, business started to improve until now it is back to what you used to call normal. They tell me that cotton is selling for 12 cents a pound and wheat for $1.15 a bushel and now—why now (and the old fellow choked), Mr. Roosevelt says he did it all and that he was for free enterprise all along. I guess I'll go back to Mars."

Italian Poison Gas Kills Ras Nasibu

Davos-Platz, Switzerland, Oct. 16 (AP).—Ras Nasibu died today from the effects of poison gas he choked down while leading Emperor Haile Selassie's southern army against the Italian invaders of his country a year ago.

Physicians who attended him attributed the actual cause of his death to tuberculosis induced by the poison gas.

Nasibu was 42, and loyal to the defeated Haile Selassie to the end. The former Emperor sent a letter to his faithful commander when he learned Ras Nasibu was dying, but it arrived too late.

At Ras Nasibu's bedside was his brother-in-law, Capt. Popitsef, the "White Russian," who settled in Ethiopia after the Russian revolution and flew for Emperor Haile Selassie during the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Delayed by Typhoons, Clipper Off to Manila

Guam, (Saturday), Oct. 17 (AP).—The China Clipper, bearing five newspapermen from New York, took off at 5:58 a. m. today (2:52 p. m. Friday E. S. T.) for Manila. The plane had been held at Guam for two days by typhoons across the course ahead.

Capt. Ralph A. Dahlstrom said he intended to add about 23 miles to the 1,600-mile Manila flight by veering slightly south of the regular course to avoid the worst disturbances. The prospects, however, he said, were for headwinds during the whole trip, necessitating more than the 11 hours usually required.

We Don't Want Model T Rule, Roosevelt Says

"dragged" to the "edge of ruin" by the "same leaders who are now trying to scare you." He added:

"Few of the public are being fooled this year."

Then, as in a major address Wednesday night at Chicago, the Chief Executive asserted that "we fight only against that kind of concentrated wealth and economic power which in the old days used to dictate not only to the business of the Nation but to Government itself."

It was a small minority of financial interests, he said, whose concern was not the welfare of the Nation or business, but merely an "extension of their own power."

Says Fight Will Be Won.

"We are now coming to learn," he said, "that the interests of the few were best served when the interests of the many were best safeguarded. That is our fight now. It will be won now as it has always been won in America * * *."

From Cleveland, the Presidential special was scheduled for an overnight run to Niagara Falls, N. Y., and stumping stops tomorrow at other up-State New York cities during the final day of his present political trip.

At Galion, the President, explaining he had farms in Georgia and New York, said one reason he knew the farmers are more cheerful is because corn and hog prices are higher.

"Of course the improvement in agricultural prices was one of the vital parts of the plans we started three years ago. I'm not making one kind of a speech to farm people and another to city people because I believe in the last few years the people have begun to thing in national terms."

He thanked the crowd for flowers presented to Mrs. Roosevelt and, smiling, said "there hasn't been a sunflower put aboard the train yet."

Under a dripping gray sky, the President stumped politically pivotal Ohio today with pronouncements that "we don't want a Model T government" and that the Administration has brought "greater security" to the people of America.

From Cincinnati on the southern edge of the Buckeye State, the President campaigned northward to Cleveland for the climax of his drive for the State's 26 electoral votes in the last of seven Ohio speeches.

Tomorrow he will wind up his 5,000-mile stumping expedition in his own State of New York. He is to rest a short time at his Hyde Park home before starting down the campaign homestretch.

Today he talked informally to thousands of voters and children who assembled, despite rain or threat of it, to shout him along the 263-mile route through Ohio.

At Springfield, where he paused early in the afternoon in his bid for Ohio's important 26 electoral votes, he asserted:

"Government ought to improve every year. We don't want to keep on using a 'Model T' government."

Applied to Farms Previously.

It was a simile which he had used repeatedly on the current campaign trip. Always before, however, he referred to agriculture, for which he contended it was a good idea to bring out a new policy model every year.

Mr. Roosevelt told a platform audience at Columbus, estimated by by Police Chief John Dunn at between 35,000 and 50,000, that he was "going back home" with great confidence that the verdict in November would be a "true expression" of what America thinks.

"We have seen much improvement during the last four years," he added. "It is true that the Government has spent some money to put its people back to work. That money, in turn, helped stimulate private business and put others back to work."

Gov. Martin L. Davey, accompanying the campaign special through Ohio, introduced the President at Columbus.

Mr. Roosevelt opened his political foray into Ohio with a brief address to students and townspeople gathered in the University of Cincinnati Stadium where students on either side of the umbrella-dotted bowl, intermingle shouts for "Landon" and "Rosevelt."

Stresses Security.

The New Deal, he said, is attempting to "give a greater security to the Nation in the days to come." He added that by security he meant living "according to the American standard," with time for pleasure and recreation, and not merely having enough to eat and a place to sleep.

On November 3, he said he was inclined to believe, this issue would arise: "Shall we continue in the future, as we have been doing, trying to attain greater human security?"

"I'm not the least bit worried about the results," he concluded, amid a salvo of applause.

At Middletown an hour later, he was on the rear platform of his train again, asserting that "I'm inclined to think things are better," and repeating that the Administration was trying to provide greater security—the kind that would make America a decent place in which to live.

Sees a "Great Change."

Then at Dayton, in the Miami River Valley, he said a "great change" had taken place since he had come through four years ago. Then, he said, the region had been hard hit, with banks and building and loan associations "in a bad way."

"But today," he said, "as I come here I see the same kind of a smile on the face of you good people that I've seen in every part of the Nation.

"One of the principal reasons is that in the last three and a half years we have striven to raise the purchasing power of the country."

At Dayton, James M. Cox, who in 1920 was the Democratic Presidential candidate when Roosevelt was the Vice Presidential nominee, greeted the President. Cox introduced the President to a cheering station audience as one who had always worked for "the welfare of the average man."

The Campaign Arena

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 16.—The national Jeffersonian Democrats, anti-New Deal organization, announced today that John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for President in 1924, would take an active part in the campaign beginning with a 45-minute radio talk on Tuesday night, October 20.

Spokesmen for the organization said Davis would "attack the New Deal" in his radio talk scheduled for 10:15 to 11 p. m. Tuesday on the N. B. C.-Red network.

They said he would probably make other speeches during the campaign.

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, tonight followed up his prediction of President Roosevelt's re-election with a plea to workers to support the Socialist ticket.

He professed to see a Roosevelt victory in an afternoon interview, adding:

"Not because I wish it, but because the people are going to vote for him. All Roosevelt has to say is 'Remember Hoover' and the voter cries 'Papa, save me.'"

Thomas said Gov. Landon "talks * * * a reactionary, individualistic capitalism. The business interests behind him want Coolidge back again."

* * * *

Ottawa, Kans., Oct. 16 (AP).—Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War under President Hoover, asserted here tonight at a party rally that "the fiscal policy of the New Deal Administration conforms strictly to the pork barrel system."

Hurley mentioned the tree belt, Passamaquoddy power and Florida ship canal projects, termed them large sums have been expended on them before they were abandoned.

"The taxpayers must yet pay these bills."

Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 16 (AP).—In a speech here tonight, Secretary Wallace cited what he called a "terrible conflict" in Republican farm policy and traced it to "two short-sighted groups which have long controlled the Republican leadership."

"No Republican President or candidate since 1920 has been able to reconcile these two 'conflicting groups,'" he said. "The present candidate doesn't attempt to. He offers us a farm program which incorporates the views of both, and he has recklessly committed himself to both."

Wallace said the Republicans "propose first to block any tariff policy that will get our export markets back, and second, they propose to encourage unlimited production for export outlets which they would, meanwhile, close up."

* * * *

Dan Wallace, of Iowa, farm paper editor and uncle of Secretary Wallace, declared in a radio broadcast last night that administration of AAA and of the soil conservation program raised "both fear and doubt" in his mind. He repeated his previous announcement that he intended to vote for Gov. Alf M. Landon.

Wallace said the Administration intends again to control farm output and that it is turning the administration of this control over to the States in 1938 because the Supreme Court has ruled that the Government cannot do it directly.

"I can not support a Presidential candidacy which praises American ideals and fundamentals in principle and deserts them in practice," he said.

Citing an Agriculture Department report on imports of farm products for August, the Republican National Committee said last night the figures "contradict statements by New Deal spokesmen to the effect that there is very little importance" in the increase of such imports.

The Republican statement said increased imports for that month over August, 1935, included the following percentages: butter, 693.9; canned beef, 55.7; tallow, 77.7; wool (except carpet), 173.6; wheat (except for milling in bond), 144.9.

Detroit, Oct. 16 (AP).—United States Senator James Couzens, (Republican) Michigan, returned today to the hospital bed he left last night to keep a dinner engagement with President Roosevelt.

Senator Couzens entered the hospital two days ago. The President offered to come to his bedside, but the Michigan Senator not only dined on the Presidential train, but appeared with President Roosevelt during his Hamtramck and Detroit speeches last night. At the Detroit City Hall gathering Couzens was introduced to the crowd.

Cincinnati, Oct. 16 (AP).—President or no President, workers on Federal Works Progress Administration project had to work today or get "docked."

L. A. Gillett, WPA Administrator, said the day "will be just like any other day for our outfit. If any of the 14,000 men and women working on WPA projects fail to show up or leave the job to see the President, they will be docked for the time lost."

Rome, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, Vatican secretary of state, will call on President Roosevelt before election day as an indirect apology for the attacks of Father Charles E. Coughlin, it was reported in Catholic circles tonight.

The same sources said there was no intention on the part of the Vatican to curb Coughlin's political activities.

Named in Temple Case, Boy, 16, Found in Jail

Atlanta, Oct. 16 (AP).—Arraignment of 16-year-old Frank Edward Stephens, charged with mailing an extortion letter to the mother of Shirley Temple, was delayed today when Federal officers seeking him for the hearing found him under detention at police headquarters in a city case. The extortion case will be called tomorow.

City Detectives Fred Battle and J. W. Cory said tey detained the youth last Monday in connection with their investigation of the case of M. V. Parks, who said he was struck on the head by a rock and robbed of $4 by three youths.

WPA Refuses To Tell Name Of Jersey Aids

Hopkins Rejects Request Made by State G. O. P.; 'Fears Politics.'

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, refused yesterday to turn over to the New Jersey Republican committee the names of WPA administrative workers in that State and the amount of their pay. At the same time he repeated that his administration was willing "to make available to any person or group complete statistics concerning its operations."

This information, Hopkins said in a letter to former Senator Walter E. Edge, chairman of the committee, would include the number and total salaries of administrative and non-administrative employes, broken down into "any reasonable classification which may be desired."

"It is obvious, however," he continued, "that the object of your letter is to secure the names and salaries of individual workers. We absolutely refuse to give out the individual names, salaries or addresses of workers for commercial or political purposes. Experience indicates that such demands are nearly always made for the purpose of solicitation and coercion.

Offers to "Co-operate."

"Let me repeat that the American public is entitled to and will receive full facts and figures concerning operations of the Works Progress Administration. We insist, however, on protecting our workers from commercial and political exploitation."

Commenting on the Hopkins letter, Edge indicated in Newark, N. J., that another move would be made to obtain the information. The Associated Press quoted him as saying:

"Any observation by me now might block our objective or interfere with our program. Apparently there is no possible relief to be voluntarily obtained through Government officials. Their custody and disbursements of the taxpayers' money are nobody's business but their own."

Republicans have complained repeatedly that the kind of information asked for by Edge is in the hands of Democratic Party workers, many of whom they say are connected with the WPA, and that this information is being used by the Democrats for "the purpose of solicitation and coercion." The first request for detailed information concerning WPA costs came from the Kansas State relief office. To this Hopkins replied that the information would be available for "legitimate" purposes.

A recent analysis of administrative costs, through August, made by Hopkins, showed his organization has 1,113 administrative employes in New Jersey and that it has spent $2,487,720 in administering $66,804,017 in relief in that State. This makes administrative costs in the State 3.7 per cent of the total. In Kansas the WPA has spent 5.4 per cent for administration, with 512 administrative employes. The Government has spent $20,969,380 on relief there at a cost of $1,142,933.

Prepares Landon Answer.

Hopkins yesterday was busy preparing a speech for broadcast tonight in which he will reply to charges by Gov. Alf M. Landon that the relief administration has been a failure. He is expected to quote statements made by the Republican Presidential nominee earlier in the Roosevelt Administration indorsing Government relief activities.

The WPA also is preparing a progress report which is expected to show a further decline in the number of persons it employs as relief workers. The last report, as of September 5, showed 2,404,824 relief workers on the pay roll, compared with 3,034,000 at the peak last spring. The latest figure includes about 284,000 added because of drought relief activities. Its report estimated that about 750,000 WPA workers have been absorbed into private industry, while others from the farms have been added to the rolls.

A forthcoming report of the United States Employment Service is expected to show an increase in placements in industry and a reduction in the number of applications for jobs.

Appeal to President.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP).—An officially estimated 2,500 WPA strikers organized today to talk over the matter of their 24-hour-old walkout with President Roosevelt.

Scheduled to deliver a campaign address here tomorrow, the President will be asked to settle the trouble.

The strike began Thursday afternoon when 850 men walked off WPA jobs at the Municipal Airport and a stone quarry. It spread in the wake of a motorcade of strikers today to 4,700, strike leaders claimed.

Immediate demands laid down by the striking WPA workers included 30 per cent increases in pay from the $60.50 per month rate, free transportation to and from work, discontinuance of docking for overtime, Red Cross service on all projects and reinstatement of 14 workers alleged to have been discharged for "talking too much about their wages."

5,000 Teachers Strike For More Pay in Mexico

Reynosa, Mexico, Oct. 16 (AP).—About 5,000 teachers in the State of Tamaulipas went on strike today for higher salaries. Red flags appeared over the schools.

Manuel Collado, Tamaulipas State secretary, said the State did not recognize the strike. Renosa officials said Gov. Enrique Canseco would study the problem. Strike leaders said 36,000 school children were affected.

Grueling District Girdling Grind Explained; Olson Hunting Parking Spot—Still Hunting

We had not traveled more than a block before I noticed a recurrence of the sharp shooting pains in my feet, which had forced us to an early halt on the night before.

In studying my feet to account for this painful mishap, I noticed that I had forgotten to put on my shoes.

Evidently I had left them in Very Little America.

There were six courses open to us at this point, as follows:

1. For the photographer to carry me.
2. To retrace our steps and find the shoes.
3. To plunge on, hoping to find either a pair of shoes or a shoe store.
4. To make me some shoes, out of birch bark, or something.
5. To give up and catch a street car back to the office.
6. To toughen up my feet with salt water, so that I wouldn't feel anything.

None of these ideas appealed to me except that of having Photographer Klemm carry me. I urged this idea very persuasively, but he refused, rather sullenly.

Rules for Girdlers.

Finally he agreed to go back for the shoes. In the meantime I decided to go over all the scientific data and observations that I had collected so far. All globe-girdlers do this, and since District girdling is more difficult, these scientific observations should have great value for the girdlers of the future.

The primary thing is this: Maps are no good. I have been using the best map available generally—that published by the American Automobile Association—and have repeatedly found that numerous streets and roads which are beautifully pictured on the map are actually nonexistent, or absolutely impassable. Many streets that are maped as joining other streets are dead ends or don't exist.

There are also a number of new streets which plunge off in odd directions, none of which are indicated on the map. I don't want to start anything with the AAA, what with another payment on my dues coming up right away, but I could tell their mapman a thing or three, all right, all right. I could show him a nice bruise I got in pushing my car out of a mudhole where his map shows Overlook road, near Bolling Field. And if he says he "overlooked" it, I'll kill him.

I somehow mislaid the rest of the scientific data I've been collecting, so readers needn't fear any more dull, stuffy paragraphs full of facts.

Lost: An Avenue.

Klemm and I returned now to our car and began a fruitless search for Southern avenue, which supposedly bounds the District on the southeast side. Residents of this neighborhood collapsed into violent paroxysms, closely resembling laughter, when we asked them about Southern avenue.

Observing one old settler sitting on a rock, we made over a boulder-strewn field of high weeds and brush on our way to him.

"Where is Southern avenue?" we asked politely.

"This is it," he answered. "It's a little rough right here, though. President Cleveland promised us that he'd have this stretch paved pretty soon, though."

"President who?" asked Klemm.

"Grover Cleveland, the President," explained the old settler. "Of course, he's a Democrat, and you can't trust them very much, but I expect he'll see to it pretty soon."

Doffing our hats to this venerable dreamer, we tiptoed carefully away, leaving him to his thoughts.

The District line from here on is a mess, speaking frankly. Over hill and dale it cuts across the end of Pennsylvania avenue southeast, crossing the gates of Cedar Hill and Lincoln Memorial cemeteries, through a lot of scrubby second-growth trees, across the District National Guard's rifle range and out to the Blue Plains Home for the Aged and Infirm. There we complained to Mr. Bradford, the gate keeper, that a sign on Nichols avenue clearly states "Alexandria Ferry." There is no such thing.

"There was a ferry there," said Mr. Bradford. "It was started by a fellow with a boat. He charged 15 cents a ride. Didn't last, though. Sometimes he only made 15 cents a day, and his crew wouldn't work for 5 cents each per day. I've been trying for years to get the police to take down the sign, but they can't do it without orders from headquarters, and headquarters won't do it without orders from the District Commissioners, and they're too busy. Lots of people get pretty disappointed about it. They don't want to ride on the ferry. They just come out of curiosity to see what a ferry to Alexandria would look like."

On the way back we sneaked over and tried to jerk down the sign, but it wouldn't come off. (Attention, No. 11 Precinct.)

After trying to find Overlook avenue and South Capitol street, neither of which exist in the Southwest section, we headed out to the river. There I abandoned the car and took a rowboat in order to follow the District line.

After five minutes' rowing I abandoned the rowboat and took to the car. Rowing is all right until your arms start coming out of their sockets, and then it loses its tang, as it were.

Besides, we were on controversial ground now. Everybody differs on whether the District line is across the river, along the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard, in the middle of the river or deep in Arlington County. My opinion is that it's along the Hains Point Speedway.

It was great to be nearing the finish, back in the District once more, with the smell of gas fumes and Foggy Bottom mingling in that delightful aroma so typical of the Nation's Capital.

We gradually picked up speed and, roaring down along the Potomac at 22 miles per hour, we reached Constitution avenue once more and turned back up to the Zero Milestone.

The finish! What a moment! Back again after braving the perils of unknown lands, where we had plunged across lands on which no white man had ever set foot before!

Sweeping past the Milestone we continued around and around the Ellipse. We are still there. Sometimes it seems as if we had always been there, eternally searching for a place to park. Let us draw a veil over anything more—a good strong veil—shaped like a strait-jacket.

Leon Kroll Wins Carnegie Contest

Leon Kroll, who has been trying to win a Carnegie Institute prize since 1913, finally succeeded yesterday when he took first place and $1,000 for his painting entitled "The Road from the Cove."

Kroll has been living in Washington during the past year painting a mural for the Justice Department. His home is in New York.

His painting, done in semi-realistic style, depicts a half-nude laborer fallen in an open road in a ploughed and planted countryside, with a figure of a handsome peasant woman kneeling beside him and another woman approaching. The technique is half modern, half classical.

Kroll said yesterday his long-awaited victory at the famous show, which takes place annually in Pittsburgh, and is the only international competition for contemporary paintings, came unexpectedly, as the painting was done merely as relaxation from his work on the Justice Department murals. He has been entering paintings in "the Carnegie" since 1913. His victory was over some of the world's best.

Pierre Bonnard, of France, won $600 second money for his "Breakfast Table," and Pedro de Valencia $500 for "Spring," third place winner. Eve Kirk, of London, took fourth and $400; Henri Dezire, of Paris, fifth and $300; Alberto Salietti, of Italy, sixth and $200, and Paul Sample, of Pasadena, Calif., seventh and $100.

Party Member Says Coughlin Wastes Funds

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 16.—A dissenting member of the National Union for Social Justice charged in a circuit court bill today that the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin dissipated the union's trust funds "in preaching and propagating fascism and undermining democracy, the United States Constitution and the American form of government."

John H. O'Donnell, of Pittsburgh, asked the court to end what he termed a "wasteful dictatorship," to order an accounting of funds and appoint a receiver. He asked removal of Coughlin and six trustees, who, he said, permitted the radio priest to expound "economic theories of which he possesses only a superficial knowledge."

O'Donnell, who cast the only vote at the N. U. S. J.'s Cleveland convention against indorsement of William Lemke, Union Party Presidential candidate, charged trust fund losses were "in excess of $1,000,000."

No comment was forthcoming from the Royal Oak headquarters of the National Union, which Father Coughlin has claimed embraces millions of members in every State of the Union.

Makes Several Charges.

Describing himself as a contributor to the funds of the National Union, O'Donnell, in his bill of complaint, charged Coughlin and the other trustees with "mismanagement, unlawful conduct, bad faith negligence and breach of trust in performance of their duties," and asked that they be held individually and jointly liable.

Named as defendants were Father Coughlin; the National Union, a Michigan corporation; B. F. Stephenson, leader of the organization for Michigan; E. Perrin Schwartz, editor of the union's newspaper, "Social Justice;" Marie W. Rhodes, Eugenia Burke and Dorothy Rhodes, secretaries to the priest, and Mrs. Robert E. O'Brien.

O'Donnell was escorted by police from the Cleveland convention hall after a commotion when he announced his vote against the Lemke indorsement which Father Coughlin had urged. The Pittsburgh man asserted the priest had "sold out" to William Randolph Hearst and the American Liberty League.

Abandons Coast Trip.

Father Coughlin recently abandoned a campaign trip scheduled to take him to the Pacific Coast, and announced he would follow the trail of the President during the weeks before the election November 3.

He organized his National Union for Social Justice in November, 1934, setting up 16 points of action he said were necessary to save the United States from political and economic chaos. In his weekly radio broadcasts from Royal Oak during the winter and spring, he said the N. U. S. J. members were pledged to support candidates and not parties in the election campaign.

O'Donnell's complaint today charged that the trustees allowed the priest "to usurp an absolute and despotic control over the organization," and that "the N. U. S. J. and the funds for which the trustees were responsible were converted into instrumentalities for Coughlin's personal aggrandizement and for the furthering and nurturing of his own egomanias."

The bill listed the present total of the trust funds at $648,444.30 and said they were growing at the rate of $50,000 a month.

Benjamin F. Sacharow, of Cleveland, who acted as attorney for plaintiffs in a similar suit against the Cleveland unit of Dr. Francis E. Townsend's old-age pension organization, filed O'Donnell's bill in the Wayne County clerk's office.

Woman Dead at 107, Was Oldest Virginian

Bristol, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Diana Bowman, 107 years of age, believed the oldest woman in Virginia, died this morning at the home of her son, John Bowman, near Lebanon.

Mrs. Bowman was born in Floyd County in 1829.

Eastern Air Lines Give Merrill a Gold Medal

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—H. T. ("Dick") Merrill, veteran Eastern Air Lines pilot, tonight was awarded a gold medal and scroll by the concern in recognition of his round-trip Transatlantic flight to Great Britain with Harry Richman, night club singer.

The award was presented by Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, general manager of the air line, at a ceremony attended by more than 500 employes. Rickenbacker said the award constituted the first presentation of an honor which it is planned to present annually to an employe of the company for "achievement outside the line of duty."

Miss Hutton, Gibbons Luncheon Guests Today

Ina Ray Hutton and Edward T. Gibbons, brother of the radio commentator, Floyd Gibbons, will share guest honors at a luncheon today of the Democratic League of Washington in the Burlington Hotel at 1:30 p. m.

During the luncheon, plans will be formulated for the pre-election dance of October 24 and for the proposed victory ball on November 3.

Experts Stress Weaknesses in Adoption Law

proper person.' But that gives the judge very little on which to base his decision and puts far too much responsibility on him. He needs the benefit of an investigation and report by trained social workers as to the character of the home the child is to go into, and the child's own fitness for adoption."

The proposed law protects the child, the natural parents and the adoptive parents by providing:

That the child must be six months old at the time the parents or guardian consent to the adoption.

That the reason for this consent shall be given. (This, so that if poverty is the underlying reason, help may be provided in order for the natural parents to keep their child.)

That there shall be an investigation by the Board of Public Welfare into the moral character and social and economic stability of the petitioner.

That the child's suitability for adoption shall be investigated, to prove that the child is mentally and physically up to par.

That, except in unusual cases, there shall be a trial period of adoption for at least a year.

The proposed law in the form of a bill was presented on the floor of the Senate by Senator King but was not carried beyond the first hearing because it has not yet received the approval of the District of Columbia Bar Association.

Adoption cases brought to the attention of the Juvenile Protective Association in the past two years have strengthened this agency's conviction that the old law is inadequate. "This year, therefore, we are working harder than ever to get the proposed law through," said Miss Mildred Terrett, executive of the Juvenile Protective Association.

"Something must be done to protect the interests of the child, the adoptive parents, and the natural parents, by providing for an investigation by a public agency of the suitability of the adoptive home, of the child's fitness for adoption, and of the reasons for the surrender of the child by its natural parents. The proposed law we are sponsoring gives protection to the mother against being asked to give up her child before it is six months old, and provides for a trial placement in the adoptive home before the adoption becomes final."

Full Data Lacking.

According to information now on file at the Juvenile Protective Association, the court has required extensive investigation of only a few cases involving adoption in the past. If the natural parent or guardian consents to the transfer, the fitness of the adopting parents seems to be determined largely by written references presented at court. "References are not always a sure protection to the child," Miss Terrett pointed out. "Almost anyone, worthy or not, can obtain them."

Bearing out this statement she told of one case in which a woman presented three references and adopted a child without being subjected to any further investigation. Later, it was discovered she had a police record and was engaged in keeping a disorderly house. "In her case, references meant nothing," Miss Terrett said. "If a thorough investigation had been carried out, she would never have been allowed to sign an adoption paper."

Further illustrating what can happen under the existing law, Miss Terrett cited the case of a man and his wife who petitioned the Supreme Court to be allowed to adopt a 9-month-old baby, who had been left in their care by its mother. The order was signed two weeks later and the court, obviously unaware that six months before the family had been referred to an agency for relief, asked no further questions. In inquiring into the family's circumstances, a welfare worker discovered that the adoptive father had never been steadily employed, that he was mentally deficient and had "a terrible temper." The adoptive mother admitted to the worker that she "had never been well."

"It seems fair to conclude that this man and woman were not suitable adoptive parents and that even the slightest investigation into their circumstances would have prevented the adoption," averred Miss Terrett. "Furthermore, if a trial placement under supervision had been required, the inadequacy of the adoptive father would have been brought to light and the final adoption paper would not have been signed."

Many Cases Show Need.

Another case in point pertained to an unmarried man almost 70, who went to the Supreme Court and asked to be allowed to adopt a 10-year-old girl who was in no way related to him. He presented one reference. Consent to the adoption was signed by the child's uncle. Two days later, the adoption proceedings were closed. Two years later the child's position of danger in living with a man to whom she was not related was established, and an agency found it necessary to refer the child to the public welfare department as being destitute of a suitable home.

If the proposed new adoption law should go into effect, it would eliminate such proceedings as those described in still another case brought to the attention of the Juvenile Protective Association. A woman went into a maternity hospital here and talked to a very young prospective mother who was not married. The woman described the beautiful adoptive home she would find for the baby if the mother would agree to give it up immediately after it was born. In her fright and anxiety before the baby was born the girl agreed to do so. The baby was removed from the hospital by the woman before the mother was discharged. When it was less than two weeks old, she signed a paper permanently relinquishing it. After the mother was stronger and had regained more of a normal perspective on the situation, she had no chance to reconsider her decision to give her baby away for good. She will never know who adopted her baby. And the baby will never know who its own mother was.

"The most vigorous protesters against the proposed law are persons who operate commercial adoption homes," Miss Terrett said. "The proposed law would, of course, curb their transactions considerably, since it provides that no child under 6 months of age can be adopted."

* * * *

(What alternative to "baby markets" do unmarried mothers now have in the District? How have some of the States successfully solved the problem of illegitimate child adoption? These questions will be answered tomorrow.)

Democrats Prepare Literature for Mailing on Frank

A scene in the Senate Office Building as Democratic workers get ready for the mail 6,000,000 pieces of campaign literature to be sent out under free mailing privileges of members of Congress. The material contains purported quotations of Gov. Alfred M. Landon favorable to the New Deal and made before he came a Presidential candidate.

in Tampa, Fla., beginning November 16.

Hutcheson, who recently has been traveling on the Landon campaign train, became a member of the council in 1934, when its membership was increased from 8 to 15. His was the third resignation during the last year. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America and head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, quit shortly after the A. F. of L. convention last year. The resignation of David Dubinsky, president of the Ladies Garment Workers, was accepted a little more than a week ago.

The council replaced Dubinsky and Hutcheson with George A. Brown, of Washington, president of the Theater Stage Employes and Motion Picture Operators Union, and Edward Flore, of Buffalo, president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Union. They become fourteenth and fifteenth vice presidents of the A. F. of L., respectively.

Standing Not Affected.

Green explained the resignation of Hutcheson would in no way affect the standing of the carpenters in the federation, nor would it affect Hutcheson's own standing. Hutcheson, as an active Republican and a proponent of craft unionism, has been an opponent of Lewis since the present controversy between the industrial union plan and the craft union plan started. He and Lewis exchanged blows on the floor of the A. F. of L. convention in Atlantic City last year. Hutcheson is known by his associates as "Big Hutch" because of his unusual size.

The resignation of the carpenters' president from the council added to the political tangle within the ranks of labor. While Lewis is actively campaigning for President Roosevelt, the federation itself is attempting to maintain its traditional nonpartisan attitude, although Green has personally declared for the President and the forthcoming appraisal is expected to be distinctly pro-Roosevelt.

Three-Way Aspect.

Thus the split in the ranks appears to be assuming a three-way aspect, in spite of denials that politics is involved in the latest resignation. Lewis and his C. I. O. followers are actively in politics on the Roosevelt side; Green and most of the council members are somewhat less active for the President, and Hutcheson represents the outright Republican point of view.

Green yesterday again denied reports that Hutcheson, "or anyone else, living or dead," had suggested that the appraisal of candidates be withheld, or delayed. He said the report is later than usual this year because the council meeting is being held at a later date than usual.

Peace Stalemate.

Meanwhile, no progress was made in moves to bring about peace between the federation and the C. I. O. George M. Harrison, chairman of the committee appointed to meet with C. I. O. representatives, was in Cincinnati yesterday. Green explained that Harrison left to keep an appointment but that he would be in Washington when the council resumes its sessions Monday.

The peace committee made public a telegram to Max Zaritsky, head of the Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers Union, in which it denied a report published in New York yesterday that it was attempting to plit the C. I. O. by urging individual unions to desert it and return to the ranks of the federation. The committee told Zaritsky that it was ready to confer with "any one or more or all" the C. I. O. unions.

Landon Charts Trip to Coast

in Kansas City after a drive across Missouri.

The Union Party move was announced by William Lemke, jr., son of the North Dakota Representative, who said orders had been placed for printing 100,000 circulars containing names of Presidential electors pledged to the candidate who has been supported by Father Charles E. Coughlin and Dr. F. E. Townsend.

Attorney General Clarence V. Beck told reporters write-in ballots would be counted under Kansas law.

Townsend recently advised supporters to vote for Landon in States where Lemke's name did not appear on ballots.

"I think Dr. Townsend will change his mind when he sees what we are doing," young Lemke said, adding that a similar campaign was planned in Oklahoma.

Tentative Trip Schedule.

Other points were under consideration for appearances as aids sketched this tentative trip schedule:

Leave Topeka October 18, about 7:30 p. m. (C. S. T.) stop in Albuquerque, N. Mex., Monday afternoon for a talk. Arrive in Los Angeles Tuesday evening, speak and remain overnight.

Leave Los Angeles Wednesday, October 21, stopping in Phoenix, Ariz., Wednesday night or Thursday. Arrive in Oklahoma City Friday and leave that night.

Speak in Indianapolis Saturday night October 24, and spend Sunday in Marietta, Ohio, where the Governor attended school as a boy. Leave Marietta soon enough to reach Philadelphia for a speech Monday night, October 26. Speak in Pittsburgh, Tuesday night and arrive in New York Wednesday, October 28, for an address there the night of Thursday, October 29.

Heading homeward, possibly make rear platform appearances in Maryland, West Virginia and other States before an address in St. Louis Saturday night, October 31. Arrive in Topeka Sunday morning and go to Independence, Kans., Monday evening to vote Tuesday, November 3. Return to spend election night in Topeka.

Wife May Accompany Him.

Aids said they were unable to state whether Mrs. Landon, who has not yet campaigned with her husband, would accompany him on any or all of the final trip. Likewise, speech subjects were not disclosed, although Landon was reported to have virtually completed addresses entitled "The Constitution," "Broken Promises" and the "Civil Service."

The Republican nominee told reporters of his Western campaign plans while reclining in the bedroom of his private car.

"Why are you going to California?" he was asked.

"Because we're going to carry it," Landon grinned.

Stepping off the train, the candidate was met by a group of members of the Landon Business Women's League. They bore a "Landon for President" banner and sang "Good Morning to You" as the Governor waved a greeting.

Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, Topeka clergyman and author of "In His Steps," visited Landon today with Dr. Alfred William Anthony, of Lewiston, Me., Bates College trustee.

Will Suport Landon.

Afterward, Sheldon said in a statement:

"I will do all in my power by voice and pen to secure the election of Gov. Landon as the next President of the United States.

"The above is not a statement made as one of the editors of the Christian Herald, which is a nonpartisan paper, but it is my personal statement apart from any political affiliations. I regard Gov. Landon as the best representative of all the people whom we have had as a candidate for many years."

Supplementing his announcement of a write-in campaign, Lemke said the Union Party would seek a Supreme Court review at Washington of a State Supreme Court decision upholding the Kansas secretary of State in refusing to put Lemke electors on the ballots on the grounds of non-compliance with State election laws.

Russian Arms Are Reported Sent to Spain chased the ship for this transport at a price far above the vessel's original cost.

May Change Policy.

Moscow, Oct. 16 (AP).—With a growing demand by Soviet workers' organizations that the Madrid government be furnished with arms, observers tonight saw indications of a change at hand in the Russian government's present policy in the Spanish civil war.

However, officials who could be reached tonight asserted they had no knowledge of the Norwegian steamship Bjoernoey sailing from a Russian Baltic port with ammunition for the Spanish government.

British Demand Action.

London, Oct. 16 (AP).—British Laborites tonight joined Russia in demanding the Spanish neutrality committee act on concrete proposals designed to halt alleged foreign aid to the Spanish insurgents.

Clement R. Attlee, leader of the Labor Party in the House of Commons, conferred with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and was reliably reported to have demanded clarification of the British government's attitude on the Spanish situation.

Three Columns Near City.

Valladolid, Spain, Oct. 16 (AP).—Three motorized columns of insurgents spread out tonight only 20 miles west of Madrid.

Each of the columns drove forward in maneuvers planned to strike the diagonal Maqueda-Madrid highway at different towns, thus hemming in segments of government defenders of the artery.

One column rolled along from Navas Del Rey, almost due west of Madrid, on a highroad that cuts into the Maqueda-Madrid highway above Alcorcon, about 10 miles from Madrid.

Franked Cards Placed in Mails By Landon Foes

6,000,000 Are Sent From Capitol Under Names of Members.

"I have already got myself in bad," he said.

A few feet up the aisle, the regular Senate folding room staff was busy distributing campaign franking matter as part of the ordinary routine. Both Republican and Democratic literature was being mailed out from this room. About 38 workers were employed there. An official said this was an increase of about 15 over the regular working staff. He said Democratic literature being mailed out of that office was in greater volume than the Republican, and professed no information about the 6,000,000 cards being handled from the other office.

Postoffice Department officials said members of Congress had a legal right to distribute the literature under free frank so long as they contained only excerpts from the Congressional Record. Apparently, the law had been strictly complied with in this respect. Postoffice officials also said that under simplified mailing, the literature need not be addressed to specific parties. If address to local "box holders," they would be placed in mail boxes by the postmaster. The same rule applies to rural routes.

Not at U. S. Expense.

On all of the 6,000,000 cards being mailed by the Democrats is the notation "Not printed at Government expense." The cards were piled in towering stacks, and workers were busy bundling them into boxes.

Cards franked by Guffey carried Landon quotations from the Schwellenbach speech. Statements attributed to Landon before he was Republican Presidential candidate implied indorsement of New Deal policies, but in most cases the source of the statement was not given. Although Senator Guffey's name appeared on these cards, it was not noted that he was chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign committee.

Statement on WPA.

One of the Landon quotations, said to have been made in November, 1935, said:

"I am confident the President and the WPA are doing all in their power to get the people to work."

Another, purported to have been made on May 13, 1934, said. "We will take all the money we can get from the Federal Government."

Still another, claimed to have been made in Topeka, in March, 1933, said:

"I also desire to acknowledge in a tangible way the appreciation of the people of my State of the courage with which President Roosevelt has attacked the depression."

Bank Insurance Attacked.

Cards franked by Representative Merritt carried a quotation said to have been made by Landon before the American Bankers Association in Chicago, Ill., in September, 1933.

"In my judgment the guaranty of bank deposits, if carried out in this country to its logical conclusion, will completely destroy the entire banking system of the nation," it said in part. "That destruction must inevitably be accompanied or followed by the most extreme inflation of the currency."

The cards distributed by Merritt also carried an excerpt from Representative Spence's speech in the House, in which he said "the Federal insurance of bank deposits was beyond the narrow compass of Landon's economic philosophy."

Remark Is Denied.

A remark attributed to Jesse M. Donaldson, deputy first assistant Postmaster General, that he was told between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 letters carrying Republican campaign material had been mailed out under the frank of House Republican Leader Bertrand Snell, was denied last night by Donaldson, who said he made no such statement. He insisted he had no information on the volume of franked literature going out.

Literature sent into Michigan in the recent gubernatorial race there, allegedly under the franks of Senators Guffey and Joseph T. Robinson, Senate Democratic leader, was called to the attention of the Postoffice at the time. Michigan Republicans charged that the Guffey literature carried stamped on the envelopes a ticket of Michigan candidates. Guffey denied any knowledge of the ticket stamping, and intimated it was done after the literature was mailed by unknown parties. The Robinson literature, Michigan Democrats claimed, carried an opposing ticket of candidates.

Facsimile of Record.

Among the campaign literature being franked out of the regular Senate Office Building folding room yesterday were four pages in facsimile of the Congressional Record, headed "Farm Progress in the United States Under the Roosevelt Administration."

This matter carried the statement, "Not printed at Government expense" and purportedly carried "Excerpts from the Congressional Record."

Yet the literature carried the name of no member of Congress, nor did the printed matter show from what speeches the "excerpts" were taken, or the dates they appeared in the Record.

This pamphlet opened with the statement:

"Farm cash income up 58 per cent * * * farm prices up 66 per cent * * * farm wages up 41 per cent * * * farm real estate values up 8 per cent * * * Such is the 1935 record of agricultural change in the United States since early 1933."

Suitland Rally Hears Sasscer Laud New Deal

The Constitution is safe when the people of the Nation are happy, State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Maryland, told a Democratic rally at Suitland, Md., last night.

He was the principal speaker at the gathering which was sponsored by the Young Democratic Club of Southern Maryland, and held on the farm of Merrill Harrison.

"Every element of business is more prosperous now than when Mr. Roosevelt took office," asserted Sasscer.

"He has stabilized business, brought happiness into the homes, and spread his bounty from lock box to cupboard."

Sasscer was introduced to his audience of 300 by the club's president, Thomas E. Jones, who said he was "a man we Democrats want to see as the next Governor of Maryland."

Jones said William Randolph Hearst is a publisher "who never backed the same candidate twice."

Dispute Splits Roosevelt Aids Studying Co-ops

Dissention Within Board Delays Report, Members Silent on Cause.

By the Associated Press.

Sharp disagreement among members of President Roosevelt's commission setup to study European consumer co-operatives was said yesterday to have seriously minimized the likelihood of a unanimous report to the White House.

"There will be some kind of a report sometime, even if it is no more than a letter to the President," said Robin Hood, secretary treasurer of the National Co-operative Council, "but a sharp disagreement between members of the commission makes unanimous action almost impossible."

Hood said he was named to the commission, apparently at the instigation of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, after official announcement of a three-man group composed of Jacob Baker, assistant WPA administrator; Leland Olds, secretary of the New York State Power Association, and Charles E. Stuart, an official of the Export-Import Bank.

Visited Many Countries.

Two additional members, Clifford Gregory, a farm magazine editor, and Emily Bates, identified with co-operative interests, assisted the commission's studies in Sweden, Finland, Norway, Denmark, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, France, Great Britain and Ireland.

Although the commission finished its work in September, no official announcement has been made on the progress of its report. Baker, who claimed disputed chairmanship, declined comment and referred newspapermen to the WPA publicity bureau which said today the report was "not ready."

Mr. Roosevelt, in announcing appointment of the commission at a press conference on June 23, said he was immensely interested in the developmentof co-operative organizations in Europe, especially in Sweden, and added that he thought it would be well for this country to when no official announcement was see what was going on there.

In Sweden, he said, a royal family, a Socialist government and a capitalistic system were working together side by side.

Hood, who said the information gathered on co-operative purchasing by consumers in Europe was "very revealing," asserted that so far as he knew the five trunks full of data collected by the commission were being "indexed and digested" at WPA offices.

Disclaiming exact knowledge of the status of the report, he "guessed" it would not be made until "long after the election."

Disagreement, it was said, started almost from the day the commission sailed in July, continued throughout the European tour and lingered made of the return. Due to a refusal on the part of some members to recognize Baker as chairman, Hood said, communications from the commission en route were handled individually.

The commission was designated as one of "inquiry on co-operative enterprises in Europe," but its chief purpose, Hood said, was to investigate co-operative purchasing by consumers with a view to recommending whether the system could be spread here.

Hood described consumer co-ops as "the chain stores of Europe" and said they were distinctly different from the farm co-operative in this country which was "capitalistic in principle."

In Sweden the commission was told by co-operative leaders that "monopolies and trusts are fast being routed" and that opposition (to consumer co-operatives) "comes chiefly from small private traders."

One Hurt as Floods Sweep North Carolina

Asheville, N. C., Oct. 16 (AP).—Flood waters swept over a wide region in western North Carolina tonight, cutting highways, disrupting communications and halting business in some areas.

Heavy rains in the watersheds continued, and forecasters predicted the French Broad River here would be more than two feet out of its banks during the night.

The community of Woodrow, in Haywood County, was isolated when waters of the Pigeon River blocked highways 284 and 110.

the Capital, which she had never visited before, the Queen was driven in a sleek town car to the embassy, where an informal reception was given in her honor, with only members of the official staff invited. No official notice of her trip is being taken.

Queen Victoria, tall, blonde, and stout, granddaughter of Queen Victoria of England, made a statuesque figure wrapped in a heavy gray suit decorated with gray lambswool. Her throat circled with pearls as big as mothballs, she seemed thoroughly composed and at ease, despite her worries for her son, Count de Covadonga, who is in a New York hospital suffering from hemophilia, the blood disease known as "the curse of the Bourbons."

She remained sequestered in New York during the month she was there, after a hasty crossing of the Atlantic when she received word that his condition was serious. She was likewise to remain out of sight, refusing to see the press, on her overnight trip to Washington.

The Queen also was greeted at the station by Col. Wyndham Torr, Military Attache at the British Embassy, and Mrs. Torr. Both knew her while Col. Torr was stationed in Madrid prior to 1928.

Infanta Is With Her.

Her luggage, instead of the royal equippage anticipated, consisted of seven rather small and well-worn handbags, and one bright cherry red hatbox belonging to the Infanta.

The Infanta, a frail young woman with the Bourbon nose of her father, former King Alfonso, was chic in a black tailored suit and small hat with a half veil. She clung to the arm of her prince, who wore a dark suit and gray-green gabardine raincoat. He waded through photographers like a Paul Bunyon.

Washington, which loves royalty, has not had an imperial visitor here since 1931, when tiny King Prajadhipok of Siam called incidental to a trip to an eye doctor at Johns Hopkins University. Prajadhipok since has abdicated. Queen Marie of Rumania was the last previous royal visitor.

Victoria Eugenie's trip to America, ostensibly to be with her stricken son, had a double purpose, according to Justin Franco, attorney, in New York.

The lawyer has asserted her son's romantic troubles were the real reason for her hurried trip across the Atlantic. Franco has been retained by a Cuban beauty, Edelmira de Boubon, whose marriage with the Spanish heir has resulted in separation and application for annulment. The Count de Covadonga refuses to pay his former wife $250 a month alimony, the lawyer said.

Artist's Model Involved.

Friends of the Queen in New York also were urging her to take her son back to Europe because of his recent attachment for Marta Rocafort, dark-eyed Cuban artist's model. Marta is in Havana now, but they were together almost daily until his illness. The Queen has had tragic problems of her own. Shortly after exile from Spain in 1932, her husband separated from her. For several months there were rumors of the annulment of their marriage, with Alfonso finally taking a villa near Rome and the former Queen going to England to live.

Their son, Don Gonzalo, 20, was killed in an automobile crash in Austria in August, 1934. He swerved to avoid a cyclist and was injured slightly, but his wounds failed to heal because of hemophilia.

She has another son, Jaime of Bourbon, who married a French-American girl of noble birth, now living in a villa near Rome.

Judge Overrules U. S. Plea to Dismiss Suit as Outlawed by Time.

By the Associated Press.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 16.—The Tennessee Valley Authority lost today its first skirmish with private utility interests seeking to halt its power program on constitutional grounds.

A motion by the Government agency to dismiss a suit brought by 19 electric power companies was overruled by United States District Judge John J. Gore.

The court held that apparent statutory limitations against suing the TVA except in its legal domicile, the northern district of Alabama, did not apply in this case because of charges of unlawful acts made in the bill filed by the utilities. He ruled:

The averments, if proven, strip the defendants of their official character and constitute them private citizens in that regard and * * * when such conditions exist they are subject to suit in any court of competent jurisdiction where they are committing said illegal and unconstitutional acts, and where process can be served.

Counsel for the utilities said immediate action would be sought on a request for a temporary injunction to halt the TVA power program.

The injunction would be in effect until the suit is decided finally by the Supreme Court.

TVA attorneys made no comment, but an authoritative source said counsel probably will note an exception to the ruling and prepare to go ahead with the suit.

Following today's development public utility executives in New York said they believed there is a chance for a district court decision this winter, with a decision by the Supreme Court next fall.

The whole TVA power program, which already has resulted in a network of transmission lines carrying electricity to urban and rural centers throughout the Tennessee Valley, may stand or fall by that final ruling of the high court.

Prisoner Gets Away Third Time in Month

Danville, Va., Oct. 16.—Robert Hobson, colored, has escaped from the city farm for the third time within a month. Hobson, who has been given two 90-day extra terms in addition to the original 90 days imposed for assault, once jumped through a window, next pounded a hole through the wall of his cell and now has gone with both his legs linked by a 15-inch chain. He was working in the rock quarry patrolled by a guard armed with a shotgun who commanded the only exit.

Christian Science Sermon Topic Set

"Doctrine of Atonement" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow.

The golden text is from Hebrews 9:24: "Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true, but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." (I Peter 1:22.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "What we most need is the prayer of fervent desire for growth in grace, expressed in patience, meekness, love and good deeds." (Page 4.)

Church to Hear Talk On Security Program

Dr. Fredric W. Perkins, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church, will take as his sermon topic "Life That Means Something" tomorrow morning at 11. Louis Levine will speak on "The Economic Background of the Development of Social Security" at the adult forum at 10:15 a. m.

The Sunday evening group will meet for supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Wiley, 612 North Highland street, Lyon Park, Va., when plans of the social action committee of the Washington Youth Council will be discussed. Tuesday, at 12:15, the mission circle will meet at the home of Mrs. Russell Chapman, 741 Highland drive, Silver Spring, Md., and Miss Hortense Keables will review Congo Crosses, the mission study book of the year.

CONCERT. CONCERT.

Wise men have long held that music is the divinest of the arts. It reaches into the very sanctuary of the soul.

Every Sunday afternoon during the season glorious music is rendered at National Memorial Park's concert. Hundreds hear it each week.

Next Sunday, October 18, the Quartet which has sung on the air for 21 continuous months, directed by Justin Lawrie, will again bring you its best, supplemented by the great Vox Organo.

Specially interesting to many people will be the solos which Mr. Charles T. Miller will sing at this concert.

The hour is 3:00 to 4:30. You will be glad you came; more glad that you brought friends with you. The beauty of it all will abide long in your memory. National Memorial Park is very easy to reach: Follow Lee Highway, 1½ miles west of Falls Church in Virginia and you are at the entrance to this beautiful, modern Garden of Memory.

Hamilton Asks Senate to Rush WPA Inquiry

G.O.P. Chairman Wires Here to Get Pennsylvania Hearings Started.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee last night was challenged to hold public hearings on charges of WPA political intimidation in Pennsylvania, as Chairman Augustine Lonergan announced campaign contributions by two Republican Pennsylvania industrialists, who had been under committee subpena.

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, wired Lonergan that unless hearings are held at once on the Pennsylvania relief situation, the country would not know the results until election day.

The Campaign Expenditures Committee now has investigators in Pennsylvania, and the Republican National Committee has submitted a number of affidavits charging WPA political activity in Pennsylvania.

Excused by Committee.

Earlier, J. Howard Pew, of Ardmore, Pa., president of the Sun Oil Co., and Ernest T. Weir, Pittsburgh steel executive, were excused from appearing before the Lonergan committee after they wired lists of their campaign contributions.

Pew reported $50,550 in contributions to political organizations opposing the New Deal, and $5,500 to "non-partisan and patriotic organizations." In adidtion, Pew said he had "underwritten to the extent of $5,000" the expenses of the American Liberty League.

Weir wired he had contributed $35,550 to nine Republican State and national organizations, including seven gifts of $5,000 each. Information had been subpenaed from both, after committee agents said, they had refused to comply with requests for the data.

Gifts Called Privilege.

Pew, in a statement to the Associated Press in New York, said he expected "to make further contributions, if necessary, to the cause."

"Considering the importance of this campaign, I have felt it a duty and a privilege to make these contributions," he said. "The American form of government, the fundamentals of our democratic society, the economic system under which our country has become the greatest in the world, are in jeopardy."

Dispatches from Wilmington, Del., quoted two Du Pont brothers, Lammot du Pont, president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., and Pierre S. du Pont, chairman of the board, as agreeing that Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, was "substantially correct" when he said the Du Pont family and associated contributed $383,000 to the Republican fund up to September 30.

In the 1932 campaign Pierre du Pont supported Roosevelt, and Lammot supported Hoover.

Lammot duPont, in his statement, said he made further "substantial contributions" and stressed the need "for all Republicans and true Democrats to join in supplying the Republican committee with the necessary funds to carry the election, and remove the New Deal from the American Government."

Pierre Makes Appeal.

Pierre said "the Deomcratic Party, as formerly known, now offers no candidate for the office of President of the United States." He said he had joined and recommended others to join "in support of the Republican candidate both by word and by contributions."

As the Senate campaign expenditures committee again delayed scheduling public hearings on charges of WPA political activity in Pennsylvania, Hamilton wired Lonergan that he should proceed at once. He pointed out that he had asked investigation of the Pennsylvania WPA situation September 27, and early this month affidavits of WPA workers and supervisors were placed in his hands.

"It is the duty of the committee to investigate the conditions reported," the Associated Press said Hamilton's wire read. "Yet you have delegated this duty to an employe (of the committee) and according to the statements attributed to you by the press you are relying on the judgment of such employe to decide whether or not you shall proceed with the investigation."

The wire stated that unless Lonergan immediately carried out "both the instructions and intentions of the resolution under which your committee was created, the New Deal majority of your committee and yourself as chairman will quite justly be held responsible for obstructing justice and for condoning the exploitation of the less fortunate of your fellow citizens."

Tax Law Assailed By Sears Roebuck

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP).—Constitutionality of certain sections of the 1936 Federal revenue act was attacked today in a brief filed in Federal district court by attorneys for Sears, Roebuck & Co.

The company filed a suit October 30, 1935, after the AAA was declared unconstitutional, seeking the recovery of $600,000 paid in floor stock and compensating taxes. Recently attorneys for the Government filed a motion asking dismissal of the suit because it did not conform with provisions of the 1936 act.

Mrs. Henry C. Coe Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Henry C. Coe, 83, who for many years was prominent in club circles here, will be held at 9:45 this morning at the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, with Dr. Ze Barney T. Phillips officiating. Interment will be at Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Coe died Wednesday at her residence in the Terrace Apartments. She moved to this city in 1930 with her husband, a famous gynecologist, who formerly practiced in New York.

A founder of the Colony Club in New York, she became interested in parliamentary law and wrote a handbook on the subject. She was more or less active in 15 other clubs, many of them in Washington. She is survived by her husband and two sons, Fordyce Coe, Hartford, Conn., and Arthur Paul Coe, of the Treasury Department here.

Hoover Assails Fund 'Juggling' As Dishonest

he satid, "are agreed on by almost every economist, every scholar, every informed satesman in the world. It was the inexorable and inevitable world-wide aftermath of the World War.

"Its causes lay in the pit of destruction dug by the most titanic struggle in which humanity has yet engaged. Our own credit inflation contributed to our own difficulties. But this depression began in other countries before it touched the United States. No man or no government brought about that depression.

"Governments could do much to protect their citizens, their citizens' institutions and their savings from its blasts. But its sweep was as inexorable as a Caribbean hurricane.

Recovery Inevitable.

"Likewise the recovery from this depression was not the work of any one official or government or all of them. Recovery was the invincible result of a billion of human beings on the seven continents struggling to repair the breaches in their daily lives. Governments could aid their citizens in recovery; by foolish action they could retard it.

"That the beginnings of recovery were world-wide, including the United States, in the spring of 1932, is recognized by almost every economist, every scholar, every informed statesman. That was nine months before Mr. Roosevelt ever came to the Presidency. And in many of these countries without the interference of New Deals, recovery has marched further and faster than in the United States. Mr. Roosevelt naturally does not emphasize the fact that at his election the United States alone faltered in the world-wide march of recovery."

Referring to the devaluation of the dollar, he said the President now "claims political reward for that unnecessary forcing of the country into the ditch of panic."

"I am reminded," he continued, "of the boy who murdered his father and mother, then appealed to the judge not only for acquittal but for future support on the ground he was an orphan.

"The President illustrated his views of this period by recounting a story of a nice old gentleman who fell off the dock in 1933 and was rescued. The gentleman was effusive in thanks, but three years later he complained he had lost his hat.

"Pushed Off Dock."

"I have some inside information about the incident. The old gentleman was surreptitiously pushed off the dock in order that the hero could gain the plaudits of the crowd as a life saver.

"With apologies to Gov. Smith, may I not suggest that Santa Claus has turned into chanticleer whose crow each morning claimed credit for the rising sun."

Commenting further on the devaluation of the dollar, he said President Roosevelt automatically canceled 41 per cent of the debts owed this country by foreigners when the currency of the United States was devalued.

"He made the foreigners a gift of about $3,000,000,000 from American pockets," Mr. Hoover said. "Before the dollar was devalued these people had to send 41 per cent more gold or its equivalent in goods to the United States to meet their obligations than they have to send today. And I may add that this cancellation of foreign debts applies also to the 11 billions of war debts owed the American people. Here the President made a present to foreigners of another 4,000,000,000 of American dollars."

Mr. Hoover also said, "I have not the time to explore the other many parts of the Government. But in this limited area I have pointed out about $900,000,000 juggles for 1935 alone. Only a Congressional investigation could really determine the whole facts.

"But there is a question here more important than bookkeeping for political purposes. That is misleading the people through implication as to what their expenditures are likely to be for the future.

"Over the last eight years of Republican administrations and honest accounting the ordinary running expenses never varied much from three and two-thirds billions. That is, if you exclude honestly those expenditures forced by relief against the depression. And everything was in that sum—debt redemption, postoffice deficit and trust accounts. The impression Mr. Roosevelt seeks to convey by the accounts is that his ordinary expenditures of Government outside the bonus are still running at less than $4,000,000,000 per annum.

"To indicate what they really are I will give you an estimate of what the ordinary routine expenses of the Federal Government will be if the New Deal is continued. That estimate shows the regular running expenditures of this Government have jumped to about $6,000,000,000 per annum. That is an increase of two and one-third billions from the Republican base of three and two-third billions. And mind you, that does not include relief. * * *

"Mr. Roosevelt obtained many billions of lump appropriations from Congress to spend about any way he liked under the sympathetic title' relief and recovery.' This method has enabled great results in saving through juggling. For these lump sum for relief were used in large quantities for regular ordinary expenses. * * * It conceals a vast rise in the regular routine expenses of the Government. It enables it to be done without the consent of Congress. This should interest the people who thought they were making gigantic sacrifices for relief and that the Administration was at the same time economizing wonderfully on old regular expenditures. This should also interest the people on relief who did not get the full money the people thought Congress voted them. At this point we get to the real nubbin of morals in double bookkeeping. * * *

Juggling of Accounts.

"If an income tax payer or any corporation kept books like this Administration; that is, if they showed similar morals in juggling their accounts, they would be put in jail."

Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, wife of the editor of the Saturday Evening Post and president of the Republican Women of Pennsylvania, presided at the rally, held in the Academy of Music.

The hall, seating about 4,000, was crowded. Frequent applause punctuated the address.

Drinking Story Starts Inquiry Into WPA Job

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 16.—Judge Harry S. McDevitt ordered today an inquiry into a WPA srteet paving project after hearing James Brown, a former worker on the project, testify that most of the men employed on it "just lay around drinking liquor."

Brown was arraigned before Judge McDevitt in common pleas court in connection with an automobile accident last May. He said the car which he was driving was owned by James Gossner, superintendent of the project.

"Gossner told me to take the car, go to a liquor store * * * and come back to the project," Brown said. "After the accident," he asserted, "I was afraid to say anything while on WPA because I would olse my job, but I have a job now and can tell a lot of things that went on."

"Did the superintendent condone drinking while on the job?" Judge McDevitt asked.

"Certainly," Brown replied. "Sometimes he himself started the collection for liquor. There wasn't much work to do and nobody cared if it was ever done anyway."

Judge McNevitt ordered that Gossner be present next Friday at a hearing to investigate Brown's charges.

Brown said a "side racket" was operated on the project under which truckloads of dirt were trucked from the scene of the operations to certain homes designated by Gossner. The dirt, Brown said, was used as topsoil.

"This was a side racket," said Brown. "Sometimes we got something out of it, sometimes we did not."

John H. Rankin, WPA administrator for Philadelphia, learning of the charges, said: "I don't believe them. So many charges like these have been proved unwarranted it makes one doubt. Nevertheless we will make an investigation."

Henry Jackson, 99, Former Culpeper Slave, Dead Here

Henry Jackson, 99, born a slave, died early yesterday at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Clara Brown, 1532 Bell court.

It was as a boy on the plantation and a young man who drove teams for his master around Culpeper, Va., that Jackson spent his days in slavery. He was liberated in his late 20's, during the war between the States, after he had been sold three times.

After the war he moved to Maryland, where he remained until two months ago, when illness forced him to join his daughter here. Four times married, he outlived all his wives, and would have reached the century mark had he lived a few months longer.

B.& L. Conclave Calls Housing Act 'a Failure'

League Closes Convention With Criticism of U.S. Finance Methods.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 15.—The United States Building & Loan League in the concluding session of its convention today went on record in favor of a "drastic reduction" in Government expenditures.

It also held the National Housing act, providing loan guarantees, had "utterly failed" in its avowed purpose of encouraging the flow of mortgage credit from private sources to expand employment in the building trades.

With an eye to prospects of further consideration of a housing program for low-income groups in the next session of Congress, the league in another resolution opposed "centralized house building and renting activities tending to make the Federal Government a perpetual landlord."

Calling attention to the sale by the Treasury of more than $500,000,000 in "baby bonds," the league protested against what it called "unfair competitive methods of merchandising Government securities.

Harold T. Donaldson, Lansing, Mich., was elected president, Edward C. Baltz, Washington, was named first vice president, and Clarence T. Rice, Kansas City, Kans., second vice president.

The convention voted to have read in full at its banquet tonight a letter of greetings from President Roosevelt. In the opening session the chairman omitted two paragraphs enumerating recent reforms in building finance and pointing to Federal thrift insurance. He said the omission was due to need of observing time limits on the program.

Flying U. S. Scribe Lands at Honolulu

Honolulu, Hawaii, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—H. R. Ekins, of the New York World-Telegram and other Scripps-Howard newspapers, who is 5,000 miles ahead of two other New York newspaper writers in a race around the world in commercial aircraft flying over regular lines, landed here at 4:18 p. m. today after a flight from Midway.

Pan American Airways Hawaii clipper, on which the flyer left Manila Wednesday, took off from Midway at 5:49 a. m. (12:49 p. m., Eastern standard time). It will take off at dawn for Alameda, Calif.

Ekins will be in San Francisco before noon Sunday and in New York at 8:59 a. m. (Eastern standard time) Monday—if he is on time—completing a flight around the world over a course of more than 25,000 miles in 18 days 9 hours 42 minutes 33 seconds, breaking all records for travel around the world in ordinary commercial conveyances.

Ekins' two rivals—Dorothy Kilgallen, of the New York Journal-International News Service, and Leo Kieran, of the New York Times-N. A. N. A. Service—still were in Manila awaiting arrival of the typhoon-delayed China Clipper, due in the Philippines capital tomorrow night, local time.

3 Persons Dead In Forest Fires; Residents Flee

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Oct. 16.—Scores of fires burned through tinder - dry forests in northern California tonight, leaving three persons dead, two towns scorched and extensive property damage.

Hundreds of fighters struggled to control the flames.

Fires threatened Standard City and Soulsbyville, but were reported to have veered away after destroying several outlying buildings. Residents of both towns fled in terror.

Observers later reported the flames had turned toward Sonora, to the West, after destroying 17 shacks at Standard City. Indirect word said the Soulsbyville blaze turned away from the town after burning some small buildings.

Lumber Is Destroyed.

The flames originated at Tuolumne, where they destroyed 10,000,000 feet of lumber.

Several hundred men fought the flames, which soon covered 5,000 acres. Limbs broken from trees by a high wind hampered the fighters.

Seven forest and brush fires cut off the Yosemite Valley from communication with the outside for 24 hours. High winds hampered traffic on the Yosemite highway and were blamed for starting the fires.

Flames seared 12,000 acres in the Sierra National Forest. A fire in Tahoe National Forest destroyed a sawmill, several homes and covered 30 to 40 square miles.

Baby Is Killed.

The dead are:

Richard Smith, 19-months-old son of J. D. Smith, who perished when flames swept the family tent in Memorial Park, Grass Valley.

Mrs. Amy Gertrude Richey, 50, of Grimes, Colusa County, who die din the flames of her home.

Peter Waldeck, 69, who died from burns when his clothes became ignited by flames near his cabin near Kelsey, El Dora County.

Four Fires in California.

Nevada City, Calif., Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Four separate forest fires, fanned by a 50-mile wind, blazed out of control in Nevada and Placer counties tonight, as 1,000 men were mobilized from CCC camps as far distant as 250 miles to fight the flames.

The most serious fire swept slopes of the American River canyon after wiping out the town of Westville, including the mill of the McKenzie Lumber Co., employing 50 men.

Hitch-Hikers Steal Car, Shoot Owner

Kilmarnock, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—Two hitch-hikers seriously wounded Samuel C. Harding, 24, of Weems, tonight after robbing him of his money and automobile.

Town Sergt. Russell, of Kilmarnock, said Harding told him he was en route home from Richmond when he picked up the two men near here. A few miles out of Kilmarnock on the Weems road, the sergeant said, the hitch-hikers ordered Harding into a side road, bound his hands with his necktie, robbed him of more than $45 and shot him in the left armpit.

house. The entire annex has been condemned, Giegengack said, and soon will be torn down.

Only a comparatively few employes used the condemned elevators, Giegengack said. Certificates have been withheld from elevators in the main Printing Office Building because they lack safety locks and other safeguards which he has ordered installed, Giegengack said.

Failure of architects who designed the Triangle buildings to observe District elevator regulations is responsible for the substandard "overtravel" safety margins in the shafts, Federal elevator engineers said.

Meet National Code.

John Dickinson, Bureau of Standards elevator expert, said the elevator shafts in the Triangle buildings meet standards established by the National Elevator Code. An effort will be made to revise the District code, he revealed, to have its provisions agree with the national code.

Buildings in which uncertified elevators are operating include the Department of Commerce, 27; the Department of Justice, 27; the Department of Labor, 10; the Archives Building, 12; Procurement Building, 5; Internal Revenue Building, 26, and Department of Agriculture, 6.

District inspectors, at request of Federal officials, make regular inspections of elevators in Government buildings. These inspections will be continued, Brown said.

Lutherans Reject Funds Campaign

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 16 (AP).—Delegates to the tenth convention of the United Lutheran Church in America, overriding a proposal to campaign for church funds, approved today a $4,000,000 biennial budget.

The board of foreign missions unsuccessfully sought permission to seek contributions from "congregations, individuals and Sunday schools."

President James C. Kinard, of Newberry (S. C.) College, heading opposition to a fund-raising campaign, asserted "our most urgent need is to educate our people to pay their full apportionment of the regular budget."

The convention approved a twentieth anniversary drive in behalf of the home missions board's church extension fund only after the words "special effort" were substituted for "campaign."

Campaign Financing.

Senator Lonergan, chairman of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, seemingly believes that exclusive Government financing of campaigns would put aspirants for office, rich or poor, upon a more equal basis. Generally speaking, the man of wealth, or the candidate whose supporters are wealthy, has an undoubted advantage over a financially limited opponent. But the alternative which the Senator from Connecticut suggests as a solution for this difficulty might well give rise to far greater abuses than those now existing.

The proposal to finance campaigns out of public funds has often been made. Always a very little reflection shows that it is not only impracticable but positively dangerous.

The party that happened to be in control of the national purse at election time would inevitably be tempted to support its own candidates most generously. Then there would be the difficult question of deciding whether an obscure individual, or the representative of a minor party, has the right to demand public backing. These problems could not be decided by rule of thumb methods. Favoritism, prejudice, and political intolerance would help to determine the apportionment of campaign funds and might well determine the outcome of an electoral contest.

Prohibition of private contributions would, moreover, help the rich candidate for office, since he would be in a position to spend his own money in legal ways that would, nevertheless, aid his candidacy. His poorer opponent, on the other hand, would be prevented from overcoming this handicap by soliciting contributions from his followers.

The legitimate costs of an electoral campaign under present-day conditions are high, especially if the candidate is seeking an important office. Efforts should be directed toward avoidance of unnecessary outlays and wasteful expenditures. That is an effective reform which is being furthered by the compulsory publicity exacted in the matter of campaign contributions, on which Mr. Lonegran would do well to concentrate with the strict impartiality which would be essential to his larger scheme.

No conceivable system is proof against abuses and evasions of the laws governing financial contributions to party funds. But as long as the contributed funds are used for the purpose of exposing a candidate's qualifications and enabling the voters to judge them, the amounts voluntarily contributed by private individuals is a matter of secondary importance.

The Biter Bit.

Maurice Thorez, the French Communist leader, may have been guilty of pouring fuel on the flames of international passions when he delivered an anti-Hitler tirade at Strasbourg, only a stone's throw from the German border. But at the same time he helped, if unwittingly, to contribute to the gayety of nations. And there is all too little of that nowadays.

M. Thorez is reputed to be a good friend, as well as a political ally, of Leon Blum. But, politically speaking, there is nothing to prevent him from thumbing his nose at the French premier if M. Blum should urge him to refrain from making any further remarks derogatory to the sacred person and exalted office of the Fuehrer.

M. Thorez knows that, and M. Blum knows it and Herr Hitler knows it, or should if he doesn't. The Fuehrer's word is law within the confines of the Third Reich. But it is not law in France. There, as in other democratic lands, freedom of speech, even to the point of indiscretion, is still the order of the day.

Democratic leaders learned long ago to stand up under abuse. There is not an American President, from George Washington down to our own times, who has not been roundly castigated by his fellow-citizens, not to mention outsiders. The same is true of others in high places. They have long learned to accept such criticism and not a few have been big enough to profit from it. But dictators are so carefully protected against lese-majeste at home that they resent the more any attacks on them from abroad. Like people who lead a too sheltered life, they take cold easily.

The amusing part of it is that the standards of conduct the Nazi regime would apply to M. Thorez and other irresponsible critics they refuse to establish for themselves. The text of M. Thorez's remarks at Strasbourg are not available here. But it is a fair guess that what he said about Hitler would not hold a candle to what Hitler and Goebbels and Rosenberg say about the Russian leaders. It makes a difference whose ox is gored.

The Turn For The Better.

It is reported that Belgium, Holland and Switzerland will soon announce adherence to the tripartite gold transfer agreement already in effect between France, Great Britain and the United States. Such an extension of the agreement would mean another step toward international currency stabilization and probable restoration of the gold standard. Pending so desirable a development, it is well to remember that managed currencies whose fluctuations are kept within bounds by the operations of stabilization funds are far from stable, judged by the standards of pre-war years.

Today nobody knows what the definitive relative values of the dollar, pound and franc will prove to be, while even day to day arrangements are terminable on 24 hours' notice. However, the agreement to transfer gold between the stabilization funds of the parties to the monetary accord is evidence of determination to limit paralyzing exchange fluctuations. Hence, while not losing sight of the numerous obstacles, economic and political, international and domestic, which may upset stabilization agreements, it would be a mistake to underrate the importance of the constructive trend which has set in.

The fact that many countries are obviously eager to join in a movement that should assist trade revival by removing fears of currency depreciation is most encouraging. Furthermore, even a provisional and imperfect kind of stabilization will help to correct certain conditions that heretofore have stood in the way of stabilization agreements.

The United States now holds over $11,000,000,000 of the world's monetary gold stocks—about half the total supply—and $4,000,000,000 has entered the country since the dollar was devalued. Before the gold standard can be effectively restored, measures permitting a more equitable distribution of the metal must be assured and steps taken to prevent a recurrence of the capital flights that account for huge shifts of gold reserves.

Through co-operative utilization of national stabilization funds such a redistribution is not only feasible but highly probable, assuming that currencies are held stable long enough to encourage repatriation of capital sent abroad for safe-keeping. Thus, the swollen gold hoards of the United States may be drawn upon to build up the depleted reserves of other countries. If such operations are successfully completed, hopes for a return to a modified gold standard, dispensing with the present secretive system of exchange management by government agencies, will be strengthened.

The effective working of the gold standard, even in modified form restricting private transactions in gold, of course calls for the restoration of balanced international accounts among trading nations. As Dr. Goldenweiser, research director of the Federal Reserve Board, says: "Gold can balance exchange payments only when they are approximately even and need only slight temporary adjustments."

A real gold standard, functioning without the aid of stabilization funds, is only practicable in a world of comparatively stable trading and financial relationships. It is that end which the Administration's trade agreements policy is earnestly seeking to forward. The programs on which Secretary Hull and Secretary Morgenthau are working must be viewed as complementary.

Water Front Improvements.

In adopting a program for improvement of Washington Channel, the rivers and harbors committee of the Board of Trade has centered attention upon one of the Capital City's outstanding deficiencies. The District has acquired an elaborate park system, now completed from Hains Point to the Maryland line. In this respect its recreational facilities can be matched by few, if any, other cities. But most of the water front, including the harbor, has long been neglected.

Potomac Park has become the sort of playground of which city planners dream. Its golf course, tennis courts, cycle track, bridle paths, polo and picnic grounds provide endless rounds of pleasure and relaxation to thousands of Washingtonians. Yet this beautiful area is bounded on the river side by polluted water and is adjacent to a harbor where improvement is clearly in order.

Fortunately some of the improvements sought by the Board of Trade are already in prospect. Last year Congress authorized the gradual expenditure of $1,600,000 for development of the water front along Washington Channel. Dilapidated shacks will be removed and new bulkheads, with all necessary facilities for commercial and private boats, will be provided. Space for at least 200 small boats will be made available in the upper part of the channel.

On completion of this work, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will be ready to go forward with the proposed new boulevard along the water front, paralleling Water street. Commercial traffic will continue to use Water street, and the new boulevard, to be separated from that street by a parking strip, will serve pleasure cars as a link between Potomac and Anacostia parks.

Thus the way is open for one of the more congested sections of the city to become a real community asset from the esthetic as well as the economic viewpoint. In lending its full support to this objective the Board of Trade is rendering a notable community service.

A Problem Of Administration.

The Walsh-Healey act is admirable in purpose, being designed to prevent employers who exploit labor from obtaining an unfair competitive advantage in bidding for Government contracts. The law is not only directed against unfair employers, however, but undertakes to set very high labor standards for all establishments engaged on Government contracts.

It was a foregone conclusion that in the administration of this act the Department of Labor would be confronted by an extremely difficult task, especially in view of the numerous loopholes for evasion of its stringent provisions. Consequently, machinery for giving effect to the law has been established slowly and the department has only recently announced the names of the appointees on the board set up to hold hearings and adopt administrative rules and regulations. Immediately this board finds itself confronted by a most important request for a 90-day suspension of certain regulations applicable to the cotton textile industry, pending study of the questions raised.

Representatives of the Cotton Textile Institute are asking on behalf of contract mills that provisions as to working hours be suspended for certain special classes of employes. They also request exemptions from the regulation forbidding the employment of female workers between the ages of 16 and 18. President MacMahon, of the United Textile Workers, indorses the latter request, saying that he could not "readily advocate" the discharge of some 16,000 girls, now employed, in order to make room for others who might have to go through an apprenticeship period.

The Secretary of Labor is given great latitude in making exceptions to the general rules and regulations and authorizing exemptions from the stringent proyisions of the act. Obviously its effective enforcement will necessitate liberal resort to these discretionary sections of the law, not only in justice to industries faced by unreasonable requirements, but also as a means of preventing wholesale evasions.

For example, Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, formerly head of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and now president of the Cotton Textile Institute, warns that impracticable demands under the Walsh-Healey act are likely to throw contracts for cotton textiles into the hands of dealers instead of manufacturers. And if the Government should find it necessary to buy through the dealer instead of the manufacturer the result would be "to narrow the market for Government purchases, to remove from it many of the more reliable furnishers of cotton goods to the Government whose goods are manufactured under the best and highest standards prevailing in the country."

In other words, the new contract act is likely to do more harm than good unless administered in such fashion as to assure the co-operation of responsible employers. The problem of dealing with a well-organized industry like cotton textiles, difficult though it is, seems relatively simple compared with the situations that will arise in trying to apply uniform standards to many types of industries.

If the cotton mills are in a position to nullify the provisions of the law by selling through dealers, it is certain that other and less conspicuous employing groups will find ways of circumventing the act if they so desire. Thus, a heavy responsibility rests upon the Department of Labor and its newly established administrative board to proceed cautiously and not to risk defeat of its efforts by making arbitrary demands.

Toothsome Morsel.

The older generation made unhappy noises for a number of years after the Great War about the younger generation's lack of interest in public affairs. It was generally assumed, and deplored, that Joe College's interest in national legislation was confined to new ways of personally nullifying the eighteenth amendment, and that his participation in municipal affairs was modestly restricted to putting street cars off their tracks after football victories.

There is less cause for such worry today. During the depression college students began regretfully to realize that the occupation of bond salesman could not absorb all bearers of fresh B. A. degrees. Since politicians were occasionally heard to discuss unemployment, and professors set the example of getting jobs with the New Deal, college students acquired a sudden interest in politics.

The interest has spread rapidly and intensively. Now we read that in the heretofore decorous and altogether female atmosphere of Smith College blows were exchanged and at least one tooth knocked out when parading partisans of Roosevelt and Landon recently clashed on the campus.

Nineteenth century students, discussing politics in their debating societies, used the same intricate rhetoric and wooden gestures that they devoted to questions of theology or history. But every age has its own manners. And feminism certainly puts its theories to the acid test when flappers accept dislocated teeth as a natural prerogative of woman's suffrage.

Scientists agree that the atom is indestructible. It soothes and sustains us to learn there's something in the universe that's not on the verge of going to pieces.

It is usually the case that the person who says life isn't worth living hasn't lived long enough to learn much about life.

"The Far Eastern Crisis."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three points strike me in Mr. Felix Morley's review of Secretary Stimson's book on the Far Eastern Crisis. First, the title, "When The Japanese Ran Amuck," rather implies that the Japanese have ceased to run amuck. They are still seizing one Chinese province after another, even though the newspapers have relegated the matter to the inside pages.

Second, Secretary Stimson stresses the necessity of Anglo-American co-operation and co-operation of the United States in a stronger League of Nations in order to maintain world peace. He has been in close touch with realities and sees this necessity. The American isolationists and pacifists at present are simply encouraging the military despotisms, facilitating imperial expansion and leading us into future trouble.

Secretary Stimson admits that the Japanese played him for a sucker with the argument that American pressure on Japan would weaken the liberals in the Japanese government and prevent them from handling the situation. Apparently both Mr. Morley and Secretary Stimson overlook the fact that the Japanese propagandists are still playing us for a sucker. Mr. Morley says that Mr. Stimson "argues persuasively" that nonrecognition of Manchurian independence is "now a potent force in gradually restoring civilian control" in Japan. This is merely the current Japanese repetition of their diplomatic success in bamboozling Secretary Stimson in 1931.

Many American liberals seem to be swallowing this propaganda. Their wishful thinking makes them believe that the civilians will gain power, that the liberal party will dominate the civilians, and Japan will cease to be a bandit nation. The sequence contains a fallacy. The Japanese liberals do demand civilian control of the army but they defend at every point the Japanese policy of robbing China of her resources, and there is no evidence that the policy would be checked, to say nothing of being reversed, if the civilians, and even the most liberal of the civilians, gained control of the Japanese government.

The chief difference would be that the immediate control of the exploitation of China's resources would be concentrated in the great industrial houses which dominate civil Japan, instead of being run by the army or the group favored by the army. T. A. B. BAREFOOT.

Washington, Oct. 14.

The "Marriage Clause."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the so-called "marriage clause" of the economy act, which has just been upheld in effect by the Supreme Court, may I suggest that the case used as a test in this matter, which has such a far-reaching effect on so many government employes, is not a fair example, in that the two salaries involved here are far in excess of the average government salaries.

The average case is that a young couple, both of whose salaries are in the lower brackets, and the loss of either one would mean scrimping and actual hardship. It is not difficult to realize that while two salaries of $1,620 each, when combined, would insure an income upon which a married couple could maintain a decent home, with only one of those salaries the standard of living is lowered to such an extent that the scrimping and budgeting necessary starts the couple off on a serious venture, with a burden and a fear clearly unfair. The effect is not hard to see—young people are afraid to marry under the circumstances—it leads to secret marriages, and other results which should not be permitted.

It would appear that if the wife in the case used has worked 14 years at a good salary ($2,900 is exceptional for women employes) she should have been in a position to relinquish her position long ago, and her husband should be able to support her in comfort without the additional income. On the other hand, two young people, starting "from scratch" on two low salaries, are not receiving fair treatment when one is forced to give up a position, and such action is robbing them of a normal existence.

Where to draw the line, of course, presents a difficult problem, but in setting up a test case it is unfair to select one in which two persons both in the higher salary brackets figure, rather than a case involving two in the much larger and more seriously affected group receiving low salaries. The Basey Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although free, white and considerably over 21, I confess that I am in a quandary as to the functions of the Police Department in this District of Chaos. Are our Negro fellow-citizens to be regarded as only quarry to be shot down at will of our Cossacks? According to the records, some 40 colored men have been killed by the policemen within the past decade. A gruesome record. To be sure, these supposed defenders of law and order—whose victims never came to trial—did not confine their marksmanship to Negroes exclusively, for, within the same period, eight or nine white men were similarly disposed of.

The latest outrage was the shooting of Lawrence Basey, a colored enrollee at the C. C. C. camp located at Twenty-eighth and M streets northeast. According to the report first turned in, Officer V. H. Landrum, residing in that vicinity, was summoned during the evening of August 31, to quell a riot; was "rushed" at the call-box, and shot in self-defense. Later developments, however, indicate that the officer's tale resembled that of the sportsman who, arrested for catching black bass out of season, maintained that he had taken the fish in self-defense, since they had jumped out of the water and bitten him.

At the coroner's inquest following the death of Basey, even Officer Landrum did not testify that the Negroes had attacked him. On the contrary, he deposed that a vision of the death of Officer Kennedy (at Logan Circle) flashed into his mind and that, without giving them a chance to rush him, he had shot, believing his life to be in danger. The verdict of the coroner's jury, admitting that "no overt act" had been committed by the deceased and his comrades, nevertheless justified the shooting on the ground that Landrum feared for his life as the result of "a mental process." According to this theory, any officer at any time, having a "brain-storm," may slaughter any man, especially, presumably, if the victim be colored.

The end is not yet, however, to this disgraceful affair. Numerous organizations, including the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Civil Liberties Union and the Inter-Racial Committee of the District of Columbia, are demanding that the District attorney prosecute the case. If Officer Landrum is mentally incapaciated, he should be placed in an institution and so removed from the possibility of such activities. In such an event, the Police Department should be compelled to explain why he was allowed to carry a badge and a gun.

Depression, Recovery And Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Democrats are blaming the Republicans for all the evils that beset the country, past, present and future. But the present Administration has proposed, passed and inflicted upon us more un-democratic, un-American legislation, experiments, schemes, dreams and visions than all prior administrations, both Republican and Democratic, combined.

They blame former President Hoover for the depression, but he had no more to do with it than President Roosevelt with an eclipse of the sun. The depression was the inevitable result of the long-continued orgy of spending and buying. Each day on the stock exchange had to be bigger than the one preceding. The buying, speculating spirit was widespread, and every one buying and selling seemed to think he knew how the market would go. We seemed obsessed with the idea we were the richest, most powerful nation in the world, and that no financial calamity could possibly happen to us. We went up to the peak of extravagance and spending, fell over, and Mr. Hoover, a most worthy man, was blamed for it all.

Why did not Mr. Roosevelt and his brain trust envision the future and warn the country and world of the approaching calamity? Simply because they did not know a bit more than anyone else, but now they claim great wisdom and power. Instead of knowing and dreading the future, they no doubt were trying further to feather their nests.

The present Administration has gone further afield in radicalism than it was ever dreamed would happen in either of the major political parties, and at present it is no more like the party of Jefferson than a mudhole is the bath of Daphne. President Roosevelt goes smiling blithely on his way, claiming credit for all improvement, and seemingly promising everything he thinks may bring him votes. Judging him from the past, what may we expect to come from his promises if he is elected? His utter disregard of his promises made in his 1932 platform; his astounding act in advising Congress to pass laws even though it thought them unconstitutional, after his oath to defend the Constitution! Should not such an act disqualify one from holding the office of President?

Gov. Landon, who has made good in both private and public life, is more typical of the great Lincoln than any candidate or President since his day. While he may have never split rails, he has worked up from the bottom to positions of high honor and trust, has filled them all with ability and success, and would fill the office of President as well and acceptably as he has any other. He would never advise Congress to pass laws if it thought them unconstitutional. No one would have aught to fear from Gov. Landon if he were elected, except the crooks and grafters. Relief would be better and more justly administered. The deserving would be cared for, the undeserving be treated according to their deserts.

If he is elected, we may expect a return of the Amaricanism of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln and other great patriots. If he is defeated, we may expect to reach such conditions as exist in France, Italy, Germany, Russia or Spain, for four more years of Roosevelt and his radicalism would sink us so deep we would never come up. President Roosevelt claims credit for all business improvement, which, like a ball, is the natural rebound from the depression. However, give any President the billions to spend he has had, and it would be surprising if there were no recovery.

It is idiotic for anyone to say "It can't happen here" as it has happened and is happening in Europe. It has already started here, and another Roosevelt administration would help it on its way. As neither Thomas, Browder, nor Lemke stand a chance of being elected, Roosevelt is the next best bet for the radicals. W. H. F.

The Happy Medium.

The true philosopher (said Casual Smith to the Old Timers assembled in the corner store) forever strives for a happy medium. He is a wise man, and as happy as a man may be, who neither talks, works, plays, eats, drinks too much nor too little; and who even avoids thinking too much or too little.

Man's most difficult task is to find that happy medium in the making of laws.

Laws are the rules of the game. A game without rules is no game at all; it has no goal; no meaning. On the other hand a game with too many rules becomes cumbersome and at last unplayable; so at this point the rules are usually simplified and eventually become settled and uncompromising; as in checkers.

The first law of the most complicated of all games, life, was: Take care of yourself; the second, take care of your family; and the third, swat the fellow who makes the first two rules difficult. All succeeding laws, including the moralities, are merely amendments to these three.

In a strictly community sense any law is a good law if you can get away with it. Let's make it personal and get down to cases. I am inclined to accept the general principle that any law is a good law if I approve of it and it can be enforced. Bearing in mind some laws, or rules, that as a child I thought inimical and now recognize as salutary, I am even willing to concede that a law may be a good law though it lack my wholehearted approval. This proves that I am a fair-minded man with no more prejudices than I am entitled to.

Quite recently the State board of liquor control in Ohio, following the example of similar boards in Pennsylvania and Michigan, ruled that distillers must not put pictures of Santa Claus on whisky bottles. The board believes it would be a sad thing for childish minds to associate Santa Claus with intoxicating liquors. I think there will be no difficulty in enforcing the rule and I wish the board success.

AND yet I realize that the ruling has no more logical basis than the prohibition law, which I detested and occasionally violated by sipping at a bootleg julep—and while sipping admitted that the prohibitionists were actuated by the kindliest and noblest motives. The prohibitionists had a lot of logic on their side, too; and a lot of arguments which it was a pleasure to confute.

The distillers and purveyors, and a lot of their patrons, do not look upon whisky as an evil, but as a beneficent thing, and they have the right to make public their opinions. And if whisky is a good thing, why shouldn't Santa Claus be on the label! And what harm will it do children to see it there. (There is, of course, a hole in this argument; and a bung to fit it. The fact that there is room for argument is all that I am here seeking to prove.) And willy nilly, sans debate, I am in favor of Santa Claus sticking to his Christmas tree and never, never sticking to a whisky bottle.

Take another case recently in the news. Let me read it to you:

"The great campaign to keep ladies from drinking at bars in our public houses gains momentum and zip. Paul Hinkel, president of our Society of Restaurateurs, says a poll of his crowd shows 98 per cent in favor of keeping the ladies' nipping to tables."

Another hellish infringement of personal rights that I cheerfully indorse. It isn't a matter that requires legislative enactment; house rules and a healthy public opinion should do the trick.

Chock full of prejudices, that's what I am. I'm even in favor of a rule keeping women out of barber shops; and the only reason (that I can see) that such a rule would not be a good one is that it could not be enforced.

Some little time ago a schoolboy told me his troubles. What the principal had done to one of the teachers and to several of the students was a sin and a shame; and so the youngsters had gone on strike. "The way you've been treated is outrageous," I told him. "Flesh and blood cannot stand it. And I hope you and your brothers in arms will get your hides well tanned."

YOU see I happen to believe that not the least important of the things to be taught in school is the virtue of discipline.

People talk glibly of their rights; but there are no rights inherent, inalienable; and none that are static. Rights are won and they are lost; and they may change from year to year. The only rights that are rightfully yours are those that you can seize and keep. And under a representative or democratic government, one or the other, your fellow citizens will see to it that you get no more than is properly coming to you.

When Alexander P. Moore was Ambassador to Spain, he once kidded the King on the press censorship then obtaining. "Our people wouldn't stand for it," he said.

"Oh, I don't know," said Alfonso to his pal, the Ambassador. "A free press isn't everything. My people can eat what they please, drink what they please, and play what, when and where they please."

And right there was concealed a dirty dig. If time could have been juggled a little he might have added with wicked intent, "and grow what they please and raise what they please."

After which, by way of an anticlimax, you may take a look at Spain today.

Family Trees.

Occasional letters in the mail inform me that the writer of the note is descended from someone who fought with Washington or Anthony Wayne or one of the Founding Fathers of New York. Not infrequently there occurs a certain note, a tone of voice, suggesting that although pioneer and patriot figured on the fly-leaf of that person's family Bible, somewhere in the long line of ancestors there also must have been an ass.

For surely, if we agree, that a man is not to blame for the hanging of his great-great-grandfather for stealing a pig in the old country, then it follows that no man deserves credit for anything his forbears did to settle America and found the republic. Some of the early American settlers were renegades and some were indentured serfs of a social status which would exclude them from the company of those who nowadays are proud to claim them as ancestors.

On the other hand, many of our newer families were begotten by horny-handed immigrants who didn't bathe, who couldn't read or write in any language, and had nothing to contribute but muscle and the hardy spirit of the greenhorn. They spread all over the land in waves.

• • • •

THE COMMERCIAL enterprise of steamship agents competing for the steerage trade in tonnage lots was largely responsible for the real building of the United States, for it brought us hundreds of thousands of poor Europeans, Nordic and Celt and Latin, and, later on the Slavs, who built the railroads and broke the land out West and manned the steel mills and the mines and looms and all.

If the United States had stopped with the achievements of those who fought with Washington and Wayne and those who staked out Jamestown, Va., and their descendants, there would be no such country as we have today, so it is just a little supercilious to boast that somewhere back in one's line there was a man who packed a musket at Saratoga. All credit, of course, to the ancestor for his service and achievements, whatever they may have been—and it does not follow that because an ancestor was early on the ground he was necessarily a credit to the community and a distinct help to his worthy neighbors. They had their police troubles as far back as that.

• • • •

BUT THE HEROISM and sacrifice of even the finest American pioneers and ragged Continentals is not something that can be handed down like an antique bootjack or a sprig of whiskers, or the proceeds of some great swindle in public land or railroad promotion. Under the American code each man rolls his own prestige, and that man is pretty hard up for distinction who has to fall back on the career of some ancestor, who probably did not consider himself at all unusual.

This smugness is not confined to descendants of the Founding Fathers, the Mayflower's passengers and the soldiers of the Revolutionary Army. It occurs, in diminished degree, but unmistakably the same, in people of much more recent stock.

In Minnesota 30 years ago there was a wonderful element of Swedes and Norwegians a few years out of their native land, which then was one sovereignty. Their children, naturally, spoke English with a Scandinavian accent. Slapstick Scandinavian comedy was popular in the papers and theaters, and Ole Oleson and Yon Yohnson and Lena and Hulda were the equivalent then of Hans and Fritz or Izzy and Moe at other times.

• • • •

THE KIDS and adults of British-Irish-Canadian stock, because they spoke the language, naturally, thought of the Scandinavians as foreigners and mocked their dialect with a distinct sense of superior Americanism, though many of them, and the parents of most, had not been born in this country themselves. The Scandinavians did all right, however, and not even the descendant of a man who fought with Wayne can out-American the son of a Swedish hired girl and a Norwegian motorman on the mere basis of his ancestry.

The handkerchief immigrants faced their perils and hardships, too, a fact which the ancestor worshiper seems never to have learned in his warm self-satisfaction over the conduct of his old man's old man's old man. They left their wives and kids on the other side to land here with a couple of dollars and neither job or friends and in thousands of cases unable to speak a word of English.

Sickness and the accidents cut them down. They were robbed and exploited by respectable American employers to found some of the proud fortunes of today. They toiled and suffered and saved to bring their families over to join them if they lived that long or if the families didn't die in the meantime. A man descended from a founding father is no more an American on that score than the son of Tony the Wop, Ole the Swede, or Paddy Dorsey, who didn't land here until 1892.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Alf and Henry.

("Landon and Ford Have Conference."—Headline.)

Governor Landon and Henry Ford
Shared together some frugal board;
Said Hank, "With you I quite agree—
Whenever you agree with me!"

They talked of cars and tire leaks,
They talked of gas and body squeaks,
They talked of cars turned out per day
And talked about the U. S. A.

Said Hank, "This land is like a car:
In it we want to travel far,
But must keep, if we are to grow,
The operatin' expenses low.

"We all want paint that brightly shines,
We all demand those new streamlines,
But also want (at least I'm one)
To know how much she costs to run.

"We all want speed and pep and zip,
We all crave comfort on the trip;
We all want ease and lots of style—
And also just how much per mile!"

"A lot of people feel today
It doesn't matter what they pay,"
Said Alfred (with a piece of pie)
"Provided that the speed is high!"

"I know it," said the Detroit sage;
"The dizzy pace is all the rage,
But there are folks who ask, good Lord!
If it's a ride they can afford."

Said Alfred, "Hen, I hope it's so,
But I confess I do not know;
No matter where I go I see
Folks laughing at economy.

"They want old Uncle Sam to ride
With engine roaring, high and wide;
They do not give a hip-hooray
About the bill they'll have to pay."

"I guess," said Hank, "it's all too true,
But wait until the costs come through;
Today they care not what the bill,
But, Alfred, boy, they will, they will!

"Speed pleases you and pleases me,"
Said Hank, and sipped his cup of tea,
"But I am for the guy who takes
The time to see if he has brakes!"

Then from without came laughter high—
From Franklin who was passing by;
"Your trouble's this," to Hank he said,
"You're driving still with one light dead."

Record-Breaking Registration In New York Has Encouraged Both Republicans And Democrats, But Meaning Is Uncertain.

By Ralph F. Renaud.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

THE RECORD-breaking registration in New York City would have been a political miracle of the first magnitude if, as is the case, it had not been duplicated in the rest of the State and apparently throughout the Nation. Approximately 2,900,000 persons have established their right to vote here in the coming election, which is well over half a million more than have ever claimed the privilege before.

Nobody knows just what it means, but there will be two weeks of fancy guessing about it. The Democrats claim it represents an outpouring of Negro, labor and radical voters to support Roosevelt and Lehman. Probably it does—to an extent. They point to the normal Democratic trend in this city and stress the heavy gain of 29 per cent in the overwhelmingly Democratic and radical Bronx. They claim that the city registration assures them a plurality of 1,000,000 even if Landon should double Hoover's vote here.

The Republicans counter by loud cheers for the registration in the Fifteenth Assembly District, a rock-ribbed Republican stronghold where the gain was 30 per cent, and also chortle a bit over the increases in the conservative Catholic-Al Smith districts. They declare that unusual registration figures invariably mean a huge protest vote against the Administration in power.

It seems to me, however, that the city figures, in the main, can be chalked up for the Democrats. They have strained every nerve to get their full voting power on the lists and it is a safe bet that every relief worker (they are still laughingly called "workers") will be at the polls with a Roosevelt button. Despite their buttons, some few will vote for Landon.

Moreover, the Republicans can't have it both ways. The registration up-State is apparently just as extraordinary as it is in the city. Up-State towns are falling over themselves to get on the lists and country registration is up, too, though there it is more spotty. Westchester is registering an increase of 30 per cent against the 24 per cent gain in the city. No one doubts that the State hinterland is overwhelmingly Republican, in a ratio of three to one, if the biggest polls are to be believed. Whatever gains the Democrats are making in New York City are being offset by Republican gains in the country. The election in this State is going to be decided by the defections from Roosevelt, not by any gains he can manage to make. If they occur heavily north of the Bronx and in a reasonable proportion within the city the State is lost to him. If they don't he brings home the bacon.

Doubt Concerning Al Smith's Influence Voiced.

EVERYBODY here is wondering how much influence Al Smith's "walk" is going to have. It is probable that it will have less in the New York national campaign than anywhere else. His first speech in Carnegie Hall was not well received. It was said to be "grouchy" and self-apologetic. It infuriated New Dealers and old-line Democrats felt sorry for the stress under which their old and beloved leader was laboring.

But the Philadelphia speech was another matter. Newspaper friends of mine, red-hot Roosevelt men, came back much depressed, admitting that Al spoke in his saltiest form before an enthusiastic audience and had certainly helped to dampen Democratic hopes in Pennsylvania. Over here, too, it had its echoes and some (not many) life-long Democrats, not especially associated with the Jeffersonian group, are beginning to fraternize openly with what in other years would have been their Republican opponents. Do others plan to walk out on the New Deal in the secrecy of the election booth? How many?

Al Smith's influence in the gubernatorial campaign is also another matter. The indications are that he is walking out on Lehman as well as Roosevelt and, naturally, Justice Bleakley, a fellow Catholic, is the beneficiary. Bleakley, by the way, unexpectedly got the jump on Lehman and has launched a surprisingly vigorous campaign, slashing into the Governor as a "robot" for the New Deal and banging away at the unconscionable expenditures which nobody likes but the free-feeders. So far Lehman seems troubled, unsure of himself and as thoroughly on the defensive as Roosevelt. He still has a tremendous underlying strength both in the city and State, but it is no time to coast. He has irretrievably lost Farmer Brown; he has lost Bill Scroggins, who still has illusions about good government and thinks the Governor's Geoghan decision was a scandal; he has lost Mr. B. Careful Jones, who has just paid the last installment on his doubled income tax, and he may himself prove the pitcher which went once too often to the well. But Lehman ought to slide through, even if Roosevelt tumbles off the wall.

Battle Of The Polls Still Raging Furiously.

UP HERE the Literary Digest poll is getting as much abuse from the Democrats as Landon is. The only comfort they get out of it is the slow upward creep of Roosevelt's inadequate popular percentage, which means nothing at all except the dropping of safe Southern States (Mississippi seven to one) in the pot.

So your dyed-in-the-wool partisan just sits down to prove it is all wrong, helplessly wrong. He does this by quoting other partial polls, by ingenious figures which reverse the trend completely, and by plain, simple denial. In fact, if you get him in a confidential mood he will tell you that the Digest sent its post cards only to Republicans in the first place. As a matter of fact, he personally knows a lot of Democrats who got cards four years ago who are just simply being ignored this year. And, moreover, the Democrats who happen to have received a few cards by accident are slyly voting for Landon to throw their foes off the scent. On the other hand, now take the daily Bugle's poll out in Oshkosh. Now, that poll . . .

In the opinion of this not-entirely neutral observer the issues have been poorly presented on both sides. Roosevelt is clearly evading them; Landon is fumbling with them and promises too much, though his assault is growing stronger. Possibly the most effective, certainly the most bitter, attack has come from the Jeffersonian Democrats. But the people are awake and alive. If we believe in our form of government we must believe that they will find the issue for themselves.

In the long run the best political intelligence in this country is the average intelligence. The four years of the Roosevelt record are spread plainly enough for any average intelligence to read. On November 3 the people will give their answer.

Federal Expert Finds 35 Ways To Serve Oysters

The Bureau of Fisheries yesterday announced 35 ways to serve an oyster.

Information issued began with the preparation of the sauce for raw oysters and closed with the proper method for cooking oysters and tripe, Philadelphia style.

The oyster, the bureau announced, is a complete food. Not only does it taste good, but it is an enemy of goiter and rickets, and contains vitamins A, B, C, D and G.

Furthermore, the bureau pointed out, it is cheap as a food. The District showed its appreciation of all these advantages in 1935 by devouring 803,863 pounds of oysters.

"Eat Oysters and Be Healthy," is the slogan of R. H. Fiedler, who wrote the bureau's recipe book on the mollusk that made Chesapeake Bay a byword with epicures the world over.

J. M. Dennis Dead; Maryland Official

Baltimore, Oct. 16 (AP).—John M. Dennis, treasurer of the State of Maryland for 17 years, longer than any other, died today at his home at Essex Farms, on the outskirts of Baltimore. He had been ill for about a year.

Dennis was born 70 years ago in Frederick County. He was educated in Frederick County schools and at Milton Academy in Baltimore. At the age of 16 he left school and went to work in a railroad freight office in Cincinnati.

In 1914 he became president of the Union Trust Co., holding this post until he resigned in 1933.

The State Legislature, deadlocked over the selection of a State treasurer in 1916, settled on him as a compromise candidate. In 1918 Republicans took control of the Legislature and elected a Republican who served until 1920, when Dennis was re-elected. He held the office continuously from then until 1935.

France Loses An Ally.

THESE HAVE BEEN dark days for Nazi Germany. Despite the hysterical boasts made at Nuremberg of the vast progress made since 1933 and the enormous gains that are to follow from Hitler's four-year plan, the outlook for the Third Reich has been none too rosy of late.

Re-armament has been taking an ever-increasing slice of the national income. But bullets make bad eating and butter is more nourishing than the cannon offered as Ezsatz. To be sure, though regimentation and propaganda, the German people appear to be more united than ever. But you can do almost anything with propaganda, except convince people who are hungry that their stomachs are full.

On the external front, Germany could point to some successes. Gen Franco, it is alleged, with some German aid, is marching on Madrid; Titulescu has been forced out of the Rumanian cabinet and the League has practically washed its hands of the Danzig problem, thus leaving the political minorities in the now sardonically named Free City to the tender mercies of those taking their orders direct from Berlin.

And yet these developments were more than countered by others. Poland, after a flirtation with the Third Reich lasting over two years, is now again exchanging tender glances with France. The German efforts to drive a wedge between Russia and France and to unite under Teutonic leadership all non-Communist nations in a holy war against Bolshevism, have made little headway. And last, but by no means least, the Anglo-American-French exchange agreements have tended to place the Hitler regime in an extremely awkward and potentially dangerous dilemma regarding the future of its economic and financial set-up.

BUT AT THIS juncture succor came, and from a wholly unexpected quarter. In the period between 1914 and 1918 little Belgium was saved from total extinction through the collective efforts of Great Britain, France and their allies. Now Belgium has decided no longer to depend on the instrument of its past salvation. Henceforth, King Leopold has proclaimed on behalf of his nation, Belgium will go its own way, free of all entangling alliances.

It is easy to understand the decision. As a small nation Belgium has been very greatly worried by the trend of events on the Continent. Like other small nations, it once regarded the League as a bulwark of peace and security. That illusion has now been shattered. There was also the Locarno Treaty. But that was smashed by Germany last March, with France and Great Britain helpless, or unwilling, to compel observance of a pact they had sworn to defend, by force if necessary. There appears little hope of that pact's resuscitation, and in the meantime Germany has remilitarized the Rhineland. And there was the Franco-Belgian Treaty of alliance dating back to 1920. But to the Belgians this treaty, far from being an asset, had become a real liability.

France's willingness to stand by its commitments under that treaty cannot be doubted. An invasion of Belgium would, now as in 1914, constitute for France as for Great Britain a threat to their security. But the Belgians remember that France and Great Britain came to their assistance when there was no Franco-Belgian alliance. Why, then, pay for what can be had without payment?

• • • •

INDEED THE BELGIANS fear that the payment which may be required of them under the 1920 alliance might be far out of proportion to Belgium's own interests. With France's eastern frontier heavily fortified as a result of the Maginot line and Germany building up in the Rhineland a Maginot line of its own, the armies of Hitler and of the Third Republic, should they begin moving against each other, could only do so through Belgium.

Would Germany repeat its action of 1914? The Belgians believe this is a possibility, but not a probability. Germany's eyes are focussed on the south and east, rather than on the west. They believe, whether rightly or wrongly, that Hitler is sincere in the assertions he has frequently made that he will not attack France. In other words, they feel there is much less likelihood of a German thrust through Belgium than of a German move in the direction of Czechoslovakia, Poland or Russia. But in the event of any struggle between Germany and France's eastern allies, Belgium, by virtue of the 1920 alliance, would be willy-nilly drawn in and all the more so since, with France blocked by the Rhineland fortifications, the only way it could attack Germany would be through Belgium.

To the Belgian people such a possibility is dangerous. It would be far preferable, they feel, to cut loose from the French alliance and the Locarno arrangement and go their own way. To those elements of the Belgian population—the Flemings for instance—who have always been lukewarm or hostile to France, there has recently been added the Catholic party, which dislikes Russia and is suspicious of the Popular Front government in France, and the Rexists, who are openly pro-Nazi both in ideas and in orientation.

Like the action of all other states, the step which Belgium now proposes to take is based on calculations of self-interest. Belgium plans to be neutral in the struggle between the powers. But its action has caused consternation in France and ill-concealed rejoicing in Germany. Anything which tends to keep France hemmed in, militarily speaking, within its own borders, represents in the eyes of Berlin a victory for the Third Reich, not least because it deals a serious blow to the entire French system of alliances.

Selected Poems

By William Lyon Phelps

T. A. Daly.

Thomas Augustine Daly, affectionately known as Tom Daly, American poet, was born in Philadelphia and was graduated from Fordham University. He has had a long and varied experience as newspaper man, editor and lecturer, and for the last seven years has been the distinguished columnist of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

• • • •

This attractive volume of his selected poems should have an enormous circulation; it is filled with beauty, humor, entertainment, and everything to invite the reader. There is an affectionate prefatory letter by Christopher Morley. The publishers are Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York. I like the way this volume has been made, with its thick, opaque paper, and readable type.

If anyone disliked Mr. Daly's poems, a most difficult thing to do, he would surrender at sight after reading the proem, the most completely disarming verse-letter to a correspondent that I have even seen.

• • • •

The poems in the group called "Italice" seem to me perfection; they are exactly what they ought to be. I do not think anyone can read them without making up faces. Certainly no one could read the first poem, "Da Comica Man," without one vast, substantial smile. The aim of the author at the reader's midriff is precisely accurate. But these verses are much more than funny, though it isn't easy to be funny. They are revelations of individual men and women; dramatic monologues.

The immense variety of moods through which every man and woman passes in so brief a time affords material for a true poet; and every reader of this book will have the double pleasure of recognition and surprise.

Roosevelt Speech at Cleveland

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 16.—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's speech here tonight:

I have had a very exciting and a very instructive trip for the last ten days through a great part of this country.

It has been cheering after these hard years to see on all sides smiling faces and happy crowds again. Four years ago there were crowds, too, but they had the anxious faces of uncertainty and doubt, faces shadowed by trouble and fear of the future.

During the past week the hundreds of thousands of men and women and children I have seen have cheerful faces and voices of courage and hope.

I am sure that you people in Cleveland and other parts of Ohio need no proof that your factories, your shops, your stores, your farms, are all doing bigger business; that those who work in them are getting more and fatter pay envelopes. If anyone needs recovery figures, here they are for Ohio:

Compare the first half of 1936 with the first half of 1933. What do you find? Employment in all industries is up 36 per cent. Pay rolls in all industries are up 83 per cent. Electric power production is up 44 per cent. Farm income, excluding benefit payments, is up 53 per cent. Department store sales in the Cleveland Federal Reserve district are up 86 per cent. Building permits in 47 Ohio cities have increased by 367 per cent, from $7,500,000 to $35,000,000. Residential construction in the same cities has increased 741 per cent, from about $2,000,000 to about $18,500,000.

Cites Ohio Increases.

These figures show an increase in business for every group in Ohio.

The fact that recovery has come to all of these groups is a refutation of the old theory which had guided the previous administration, and which I call the "trickle down" theory. That theory is that if you lend some money to the few financial interests at the top of the economic pyramid, it will trickle down and some of it will find its way into the pay envelopes of the workers, into the ledgers of the millions of independent business men through the Nation, and into the pocketbook of the farmers.

The trouble with that theory was that there was always too little left to trickle more than half way down.

The theory of this Administration has been just the opposite. We have acted in the conviction that the way to bring about recovery was to tackle the problems of those who are at the bottom of the economic pyramid; to increase earnings and income, and through them the purchasing power of everybody. We knew that sales could not be made to people who had lost the power to buy.

And so we tackled the problem from the point of view of all groups. What is happening today shows the soundness of that program.

Says Earners Aided.

Particularly was that true of the wage earners of the Nation. For the first time in many years the industrial workers and wage earners of America have had an Administration in Washington which was determined to give them an opportunity for a fairer wage, for a more decent standard of working hours. We were determined to do this not only because that was simple justice, simple Americanism, but because it was good business.

And the businessmen of America know now that it was good business. They know that a greater portion of their regained sales comes from the increasing purchasing power of those who work in the cities and on the farms.

The interest of every businessman is bound to the interest of every wage earner. Whether he is running a store on the corner or is a stockholder in a corporation, big or little, he is financially better off when wages and working conditions are good than when wages and working conditions are poor. Surely the panic proved that!

When men are idle, they are not in the market for the products of industry. When wages are low and the working week is long, their purchasing power is limited.

Charges "Foggy" Thinking.

It is to the real advantage of every producer, every manufacturer, every merchant, to co-operate in the improvement of working conditions, for the best customer of American industry is the well-paid worker. And the best guarantee of corporate dividends is a rising standard of living.

If the workers in a particular industry are poorly paid they become poor customers of every other industry and of every other merchant. And the corporation directors and lawyers who use the money of their stockholders to persuade their stockholders that they ought to chastise the Administration that is trying to broaden home and foreign markets for their own goods are, to put it mildly, a little foggy in their thinking processes.

In this era, when many families hold stock in many diversified industries, it does them no good to depress the condition of labor in any industry. They profit best when labor is justly served.

I said in Chicago, and I repeated here that the businessmen of America, the investors in business enterprises, are going to show on November 3 that they have not been frightened or fooled by the expensive propaganda of those who would seek to spread the gospel of fear—fear that this Administration is antagonistic to business.

Read the record of what we have done for business and you will find the answer to that charge. I repeat here that the record shows that no administration in the history of the United States has done so much to encourage the business of the Nation.

Back in the spring of 1933 the whole system of free enterprise and private profit was on the edge of ruin. It had been dragged there by the same leaders who are now trying to scare you. It was because of our determination to keep the American system that we succeeded in doing what we did at a time when the system was almost buried under the ruins.

"Few Being Fooled."

Few of the public are being fooled this year.

Every now and then stockholders in the United States are flooded with literature warning them against returning this Administration to office. They probably will be appealed to again.

That literature is being sent out from the center of the great financial district of New York. The money of the stockholders is being used to finance this literature.

This waste of stockholders' money is being perpetrated by the same group which had brought business as a whole to its knees during the dark days of the depression.

We fight only against that kind of concentrated wealth and economic power which, in the old days, used to dictate not only to the business of the Nation but to Government itself—that small minority of financial interests whose concern was not the welfare of the Nation, not the welfare of business, but solely the extension of their own power.

It is the glory of America that the standard of living is higher here than in any country or at any time in the history of the world. The underlying issue in every political crisis of our history has been between those who, laying emphasis on human rights, have sought to exercise the power of the Government for the many and those who have sought to exercise the power of government for the few.

We are now coming to learn that the interests of the few were best served when the interests of the many were best safeguarded.

That is our fight now. It will be won now as it has always been won in America since the day on which the members of the Continental Congress declared inalienable the rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Borah Will Attend Session on Silver

Boise, Idaho, Oct. 16 (AP).—Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, said today he would meet with the Senate special silver committee at Reno, Nev., November 14, to assist in formulating recommendations to Congress relative to a future silver program.

The time and place were set, Borah said, by Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, chairman.

Besides Borah and Pittman, members are Senators William H. King (Democrat), Utah, and Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma.

"I intend to attend the meeting," Borah said.

"We will attempt to make recommendations to Congress as to what program should be adopted relative to the future of silver."

The committee has been gathering statistics and information since its meeting last fall in Salt Lake City.

King to Marry Mrs. Simpson, Post Informed

Determined to Wed American Woman Even if It Costs His Throne.

was rich in family tree, tracing her ancestry back to Noble Knight Pagan de Warfield, who was with William the Conqueror when he crossed the channel to England in 1066.

She met Edward, then the Prince of Wales, in 1933, being introduced to him at a dinner party by Lady Furness, sister of Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt.

At first, the guest lists noted that "Mr. and Mrs. Simpson" were at the parties given or attended by Edward. In September, however, Simpson declined to join his wife on the cruise to the Adriatic. It was then that talk of a break-up in their marriage began.

The King, according to The Post's information, was well aware of the divorce suit which was filed this week—might, indeed, have suggested it.

Since the Church of England (Episcopal) frowns on divorces, King Edward and Mrs. Simpson probably would have to marry in some other church.

In that connection, it is pointed out that Edward, as King of Scotland, also is a member of the Church of Scotland (Presbyterian) and could be married in it.

Hearing Date to Be Set.

London, Oct. 16 (AP).—A date will be set tomorrow for a hearing at Ipswich on the divorce suit filed by Mrs. Ernest (Wally) Simpson, King Edward's friend, against her broker-husband. The assizes during which the case probably will be heard open October 24.

British households learned of Mrs. Simpson's divorce suit against her husband only by word of mouth, as British newspapers generally refrained from publishing accounts of the proceedings.

The average Englishman likewise was inclined to avoid any but the most confidential discussion concerning the King's friendship for the witty American woman.

The position Mrs. Simpson has carved for herself in British society was said by informed persons to be secure as long as King Edward remains her friend.

Cox Lauds Policy Of Good Neighbor

Praising the good-neighbor policy inaugurated by President Roosevelt in 1933, George Howland Cox, director of the Center of Inter-American Studies of the George Washington University, declared yesterday that the day is at hand when the 20 Latin-American states, Canada and the United States may present a united American front, when they may be expected to study sympathetically the problems which each is endeavoring to solve.

Speaking before the ancient and modern language group of the District H Educational Conference of Virginia, Cox outlined the following as steps in the evolving of inter-Americanism:

Continuation of the United States' "hands-off" policy toward Latin-American republics so far as their internal problems are concerned; adjustment of the troublesome debt situation brought about by the inability of Latin-American governments to pay interest charges on loans on bonds sold to United States investors during the late 1920's; co-operation of the United States Government and northern business interests in the furtherance of inter-American commerce; exchange of inter-American students and teachers.

Hight Is Honored By Hotel Group

Frank S. Hight, retired executive of the Willard Hotel, yesterday was elected an honorary member of the Hotel Association of Washington. He is the first person to be so honored.

Hight served as president of the Hotel Association from 1914 until 1920. He retired in 1932 from active business.

Others named honorary members after the election of Hight included Miss Mary A. Lindsley, for many years manager of the Dodge Hotel; E. C. Owen, of the staffs of the Raleigh and the Powhatan Hotels; L. G. Sizer and S. E. Bonneville, who has just retired from the management of the Washington Hotel.

Pennsylvania Railroad Promotes H. W. Large

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Philadelphia yesterday, H. W. Large, district freight agent at Washington, was promoted to division freight agent at Wilmington, Del., succeeding C. D. Lindquist.

Large was born in Philadelphia in 1905 and was graduated from Princeton University. He entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad as a clerk in the passenger department, subsequently holding various clerical positions until he was advanced to freight representative in 1933. He has been district freight agent at Washington since November, 1934.

Democrats Plan Rally On Rhode Island Ave.

A rally open to the public will be held at 8 p. m. Monday at Democratic headquarters, 1500 Rhode Island avenue northwest, under auspices of the Democratic Women's National Council.

Miss McAfee Installed As Head of Wellesley

Wellesley, Mass., Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Miss Mildred Helen McAfee, attractive 36-year-old former dean of women at Oberlin College, today was formally inaugurated as seventh president of Wellesley College, the second youngest woman ever to receive that honor.

Nuptial Events Make Up For Lull Due to Election

Weddings Almost as Numerous Here Now as in June With Parties on Every Side; Alicia Tumulty Becomes Bride of John Donnelly Today.

By Dudley Harmon.

The current slump in entertaining here owing to election certainly hasn't extended to weddings, which are almost as numerous as in June, to say nothing of the endless parties honoring the brides-to-be.

The wedding today of Miss Alicia Tumulty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Tumulty, to Mr. John Donnelly, son of Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly and the late Mr. Donnelly, of Boston, will be one of the most important of the season. Several hundred guests, including many from out of town, will attend the ceremony at 10 o'clock at St. Matthew's Church and the reception at the Carlton.

The couple will leave for a wedding trip to Europe after the reception and will reside in Boston on their return.

Attendants Selected.

The latest Washington bride-to-be to select her attendants is Miss Mary Dwight, daughter of Mrs. John Henry Dwight, who will be married October 31 to Mr. John McAfee Preston, of New York. The ceremony will take place at high noon at Epiphany Church and will be followed by a reception at the Sulgrave Club.

Miss Dwight's maid of honor will be Miss Mary Louise Marsh, who lives here with her uncle, Mr. Edward Gardiner. The bridesmaids will include Miss Martha Davidge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Davidge, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, daughter of the late Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, and Mrs. Roosevelt, and Miss Caroline Johnson.

Out-of-town friends of Miss Dwight who will come to Washington to take part in the wedding are Mrs. Rodman King Tilt, of Mount Kisco, N. Y., and Miss Barbara Crim and Miss Sarah Lee Perot, of New York City.

Mr. Preston will have as his best man Mr. Ronald T. Lyman, jr., of Boston. The ushers will be Mr. Edward deS. Melcher, of Washington; Mr. William Creighton Peet and Mr. John K. Peet, of New York; Mr. William J. Iselin, of Greenville, S. C.; Mr. Thomas Frothingham Mason, of New Canaan, Conn.; Mr. Ellis Humphries, Mr. Robert Ogden Bishop, of Mount Kisco, N. Y., and Mr. Rodman King Tilt and Mr. L. Philip Bastedo, of New York; Mr. Zabdiel Boylston Adams, of Brookline, Mass., and Mr. George Crawford and Mr. Marshall Rawle, of New York.

Suzanne Hill Rites.

A wedding on the same day and the same hour as Miss Dwight's is that of Miss Suzanne Hill, daughter of former Representative and Mrs. John Philip Hill, to Mr. Phillips Huntington Clarke. The ceremony will take place in Baltimore, where the bride-to-be made her home for some time.

Mr. Clarence Hewes has issued invitations for a tea and cocktail party in honor of Miss Hill and her fiance on October 27. He will give it at his penthouse apartment on Massachusetts avenue.

Other events being planned for the bride-to-be and her fiance include a cocktail party the next day given by Mrs. Bowler Hull and another one on October 29, at which Miss Stellita Stapleton will be hostess.

Miss Clara Belle Armstrong, whose marriage to Mr. Edwin R. Hutchinson is taking place this evening in All Saints Episcopal Church, has been the honor guest at a number of prenuptial parties. The last of these was a dinner given last night at Brook Farm with Mr. and Mrs. Marlow Perry and Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Hyde as hosts. The guests included all the members of the wedding party, who later went to the church for rehearsal.

Miss Crown Entertains.

Miss Lillian Crown entertained at a dinner and shower at Napoleon's on the evening of October 3, and on the 7th Miss Barbara Ferguson, one of the bridesmaids, gave a supper party at the home of her sister, Mrs. Rowland Fowler, in Bethesda. Her sorority sisters in Beta Mu gave a shower at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Treadwell, in Chevy Chase, October 9, and the next day Miss Armstrong's aunt, Mrs. Henry Taylor Gover, gave a surprise party at their home in Jenifer street.

Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. John Diamond entertained for the bride-to-be. On Monday night Mr. Hutchinson entertained the men of the wedding party at the Kenwood Club.

First 'At Home' Of Season Given By Mme. Saito

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Rain did not deter guests who assembled yesterday afternoon for the "at home" of Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador of Japan, the first of the autumn season given by a lady of the diplomatic set.

Within the embassy, flowers and the harmony of color in the furnishings gave an effect of sunlight which quite made one forget the cloudiness outside. A gold screen stood at the entrance of the main salon and the guests entered the smaller room adjoining, where Mme. Saito received.

She wore a gown of black silk crepe with a fold of silver lame at the neck and bands of the same material tied at the wrists. Her black slippers were trimmed in dull silver and she carried a small square black bag with a wide band of the same unburnished silver through the center. At her neck was a strand of pearls.

In the main salon were two tables, one near the door at which punch was served by Mme. Kobayashi, wife of the new Naval Attache of the embassy, who has been here but two weeks, and another at the far end of the room, where Mme. Yamamoto, wife of one of the attaches, served tea.

Mme. Yoshizawa, wife of the Counselor of Embassy, and Mme. Okazaki, wife of the Second Secretary, also assisted the hostess. All wore gowns in black, which seems the season's most popular color.

Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Ambassador of Turkey, who is a neighbor and close friend of Mme. Saito, was among the guests and also was in black with a jade brooch at the neck and matching jade earrings, and a short cape of Persian lamb.

The Rev. John Armistead Welbourn and Mrs. Welbourn, who knew Mme. Ertegun, the Ambassador and Mme Saito in Japan, where the Rev. Mr. Welbourn lived for 26 years, and later in Seattle when the Ambassador and Mme. Saito lived there while he served as consul, also were there.

Among the other guests at the tea were Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman and Mrs. George H. Sellers, better known as Ruth Dexter, who is her guest for the week-end, having come from New York to address a meeting of the women's coalition group in Colesville today; Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mme. Livia Coppola Viola, wife of the Air and Military Attache of the Italian Embassy; Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mrs. Lawrence Lownsend, Mme. von Boetticher, wife of the Military and Air Attache of the German Embassy, and Mrs. John Allan Dougherty.

Admiral Standley, Wife to Entertain At Series of Teas

The Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William H. Standley will entertain at the first of a series of teas Monday afternoon at their home at the Naval Observatory, from 5 until 7 o'clock.

These will be in the nature of farewell parties, as the Admiral, who has been stationed here for the past three and a half years, and Mrs. Standley will leave within a few months for California to make their home. The successor, who is named by the President, will not be appointed until sometime after the first of the year.

Mrs. Mack to Be Hostess At Russian Celebration

Mrs. J. J. Mack will be hostess at the benefit program to be given by Maxim Karolik, tenor, at Pierce Hall, Thursday, November 5, in commemoration of the Day of the Russian Child, by the Washington Branch of the Russian Children's Welfare Society.

Mme. Marie Zalipsky, president, and Mrs. Wsevolod L. Joukowsky, secretary, of the Washington branch, head the committee, of which Princess Orousoff also is a member.

Robert Louis Stern Weds Miss Marks

Capital Man Marries Superior (Wisc.) Girl.

Miss Terese Marks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Marks, of Superior, Wis., was married to Mr. Robert Louis Stern, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Stern, yesterday at his home here.

Associate Justice Harold M. Stephens, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, performed the ceremony.

Miss Marks is a graduate of Smith College, and Mr. Stern is a graduate of Williams College and the Harvard Law School. He is an attorney with the Department of Justice.

After a cruise to Mexico, the couple will live at 2327 Fifteenth street.

The Merry Whirl

By MARYLYN.

Charles Ritchie, newly arrived Third Secretary of the Canadian Legation, isn't letting the fact that he knows no one here—having arrived only last week—stand in the way of his having a good time. An evening at the theater appealed to him so he took himself to the National, solo, and stopped in at the Carlton for cocktails first. Tall and fair, he speaks with rather more of a British accent than do most other Canadians, perhaps due to the years he spent in London.

"Jeffty" O'Connor, who by rights should head the list of wits, jokesters and general mirth makers, tells a very amusing story on himself. Recently, when he was out in California, he was called upon by a delegation of two—a young man and his fiancee. The Y. M. in all seriousness asked Jeffty, if he, as long as he is Comptroller of the Currency, would arrange to have the fiancee's face printed on some future output of money. Mr. O'Connor thoughtfully regarded his two visitors before making his reply, trying to think up a "waterproof" answer to the solution. After an impressive silence he said in his nicest way, "Well, I'd be glad to do it, but I'm afraid that there would be too much hoarding—after the young lady's likeness appeared in circulation, too many people would be keeping it and that would cause a lot of trouble in the money traffic.

"Jeffty," by the way, is doing his apartment over, and is having modernistic furniture and whatnots take the place of his present possessions.

Fortune telling gypsies aren't always possessed of flashing black eyes and raven-hued locks. In fact, we know one with auburn hair, blue eyes and fair skin, but then she could hardly be classed as a gypsy. Anne Barrett has taken up the serious study of forecasting futures. Already, after only a short time of poring over various recommended works on the subject of palmistry, she can tell what is meant by the lines—the mount of Venus, the rings of Saturn and any number of awe-inspiring headings.

If all works out as planned, there will be a bit of Hawaii at the wedding on the thirtieth of Misatha Gullion to Tommy Moorman at the Cathedral. As they met over in the islands, it would be highly appropriate to have the Oahu touch. With the Clipper ship making the trip practically overnight, and planes from the West Coast here every little while, it may be that the orchids in Misatha's bouquet will be flown across the Pacific. However, that is one of the little things not quite definite as yet.

Frances Wilson, R.L. Glover Wed

Staunton, Va., Oct. 16.— Miss Frances Cornelia Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Walter B. Wilson, and Mr. Robert Lee Glover, son of Mrs. James D. Glover, were married in the First Presbyterian Church at 5 o'clock this afternoon, the Rev. Dr. Hunter B. Blakely, officiating.

The church was decorated with palms and cathedral candles, and there were vases of chrysanthemums on the altar.

The bride's uncle, Mr. Philmore E. Johnson, of Washington, gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of dubonnet velvet made with shirred neckline and full slit sleeves, the skirt forming a slight train. Her matching hat held in place a short face veil, and her corsage was of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Lawrence Steele, jr., was her sister's matron of honor, and wore a dress of blue moire made tunic fashion with short puffed sleeves. Her small turban was of matching material and she carried bronze chrysanthemums.

Mr. J. Frank Glover, a brother, of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers included Mr. M. Leonard Glover, another brother, of Lynchburg; Mr. Gerald E. Coville, Mr. Sydney E. Trott, and Mr. Walter B. Wilson, jr., brother of the bride, all of Staunton.

A small reception was held at the home of the bride's mother following the ceremony. Members of the two families were invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Glover left later for a motor trip to New York. Mrs. Glover wearing a green fur-trimmed suit with dark green accessories. After November 1, they will be at home in Staunton, at the Woodrow Wilson birthplace, where Mrs. Glover will be resident hostess.

Society Taking Active Interest In Trinity Church Horse Show

Event Will Be Held Today at Upperville and Will Feature a Costume Pageant in Three Divisions; Many Entries

By Grace Brooks.

Society people from Middleburg, Upperville and Warrenton are taking an active interest in the Trinity Church horse show and costume pageant, which will be held on Grafton Farm, the Upperville show grounds, today, beginning at 9 o'clock. The feature of the event, which is given for the benefit of the century-old Trinity Church, will be the competitive pageant, which will be called at 3:30 p. m. This pageant, which is expected to attract a large crowd of entries, all of which will be made at the post, is divided into three parts—smart turn outs, humorous turn outs and old-time turn outs.

The smart turn outs will be judged on horses, appointments and accuracy of detailed fulfillment of the period attempted; the humorous turn outs on the ensemble's comic appeal, and the old-time turn-outs on that wistful quality of recalling the atmosphere of days, which, though now gone, are familiar through memory, hearsay or books.

Mrs. Robert Winmill, of Warrenton, has promised two entries for the pageant; Mr. Taylor Scott Hardin, who is secretary of the event, will enter his handsome coach and four, which has won a number of blue ribbons; Mrs. Nina Carter Tabb will exhibit her famous covered wagon, which is complete as in the time when this was the only mode of travel. Mrs. Tabb will have in her wagon society girls of Middleburg and Leesburg dressed in period costumes. Mrs. H. Rozier Dulany, of Upperville, has promised three entries for this event.

Among other horse owners of this section, who will make entries in the pageant or the 12 horse show classes on the program, are Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Mrs. Arthur White, Miss Bettina Belmont, Mr. George Robert Slater, Mr. Waugh Glascock, Dr. A. C. Randolph, Mrs. D. N. Lee, Mrs. Turner Wiltshire, Miss Charlotte H. Noland, Mr. Raymond Guest and Mr. Paul Mellon.

A variety of interesting horse show numbers on the program includes the men in side saddles, family group, brood mares, road hacks, 3-year-olds, half-bred hunters, bona-fide hunters, modified Corinthian, fault-and-out, pairs of hunters, ladies' hunters and thoroughbred hunters.

In addition to the sporting numbers, an attractive part of the day's outing will be the plate luncheon, which the Trinity Guild will serve on the grounds. This luncheon will include all the delicacies of the season and the entire proceeds will go to the church.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

ALICE HUGHES.

WE'RE BEING unusually blessed in the matter of big football games here this fall, the local schools having decided for the sake of the dear old boxoffice to tear off exceptionally large bites. Since I don't have to get in there and take the drubbings, I'm happy about it, for I don't know any more fun than squatting in the grandstand with the proper gent on a nipping Saturday afternoon and bending eye on 22 beefy youths tearing each other limb from limb.

Last week, for instance, the Kaydets came down from West Point and mingled with the earnest stalwarts of Columbia, and there's nothing more spectacular than a parade of the lads at game time.

The early season games, as far as my style-scouting eye has been able to detect, have shown some pretty fancy things in the way of clothes. The sharks tell us that if we are going to go black and dignified on the street, at sports events we are entitled to go color-mad and many of the girls are doing just that, justifiably and with exciting results. Replacing the classic knitted suit as this autumn's leader is the suede suit. I saw two beauties at the Army-Columbia game—one in copper and one in purple.

• • • •

Knit may come and suede may go, but the dear old chrysanthemum goes on forever. It may be that the very greatest thrill in a young girl's life comes when her kid cavalier presents her with her first Saturday-afternoon 'mum and marches her off to the game. Of course, I can't remember back so far.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, the hamlet now has its air of smart and brittle British sophistication, for Noel Coward is in our midst again—about to shoot a long selection of short plays at us, and living down in the old Alec Woollcott place on the East River. By the way, what has become of Alec? Frank Sullivan has been hiding coyly in Saratoga of late months, Alex seems to have entered a monastery or something, and the ranks of our Front-Line Wits are slightly thin. But the arrival of Coward, for so many years the Boy Genius, adds a certain zest to first-night chatter and lobby-ogling! . . .

• • • •

When a movie company decides to welcome stars to town—especially those on a honeymoon—they certainly do a job of it. The racket staged for Joan Blondell and Dick Powell set a new high for down-the-bay activity, according to veteran harbor-loafers. At least a dozen tugs, all bearing bands and slogans, played tag with the honeymoon ship at quarantine and planes chased each other's tails overhead. It was really worth seeing, if only to stress the delightful daffiness of the mighty motion picture industry, which really doesn't need stressing at this late date . . .

• • • •

One of the biggest personal successes of the current autumn in the theater has been scored by lovely Kitty Carlisle, once of the films, in the leading feminine role of "White Horse Inn." That huge operetta is a regular personality smotherer and talent drowner, and the highest compliment that can be paid La Carlisle is to say that she pokes her lovely head and shoulders far above the throng of merry villagers . . .

• • • •

I dropped into "21" after the "White Horse Inn" opening, and was immediately immersed in a welter of what this town calls "celebs." Imagine the sight, all in a half hour, of Katharine Cornell, Beatrice Lillie, the Carlisle girl, Helen Hayes—and this is cute—Mr. and Mrs. George S. Kaufman. On second thought, don't bother imagining. It was just a crowd of people, after all, looking pretty darned bored!

• • • •

It came as a great shock to me to find that my favorite street, Madison avenue, was only 100 years old. They've just finished celebrating its centenary, with the mayor cutting a ribbon, flags out, fancy windows, and all that.

Suits That Can Go to Business or Parties or Travel Abroad

Suits Indispensable This Year; Are Versatile Part of Wardrobe

Costumes Much More Complicated and Are Styled for Various Times of Day or Night; Sheer Wool Frock Popular.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

SUITS can go anywhere with fashion assurance this season. A smart suit, well-made and fashioned of good material, will prove one of the most important and practical pieces of the wardrobe. As a basic costume, with appropriate changes of blouses, sweaters, gilets and the like, one suit, if chosen with discrimination, could serve a multitude of purposes. Today tailored, tomorrow dressed up for afternoon.

For the business woman the suit is indispensable; always fashion correct, in good taste and extremely versatile by the way of accessory changes. Suits have become almost a "must" for any kind of traveling. A short-jacketed suit is right for now and can be worn with equal smartness during the winter under the heavy topcoat.

Formerly a suit meant just one thing, a skirt and jacket, and the costume was generally regarded as a typically street ensemble. Suits this year are much more complicated and are styled for various daytime occasions, formal afternoon, formal and semi-formal evening. The materials employed in their construction are also as diversified as the styling.

Two, three and four piece suits; those of monotone versions and suits with contrast in the coat and skirt; simple suits, and those lavishly trimmed with fur are available in the stores and shops this fall, your choice depending on individual preference and the function the suit is to perform in the wardrobe. The same is true of color. There are the popular blacks, browns, greens (especially the deep, ink green), wine tones, beige, new blues and a number of interesting gray tones. Solid colors, plaids and mixtures are also of equal importance in the fall and winter march of suits.

An extremely popular type of suit this season is the sheer wool frock topped by a seven-eighth coat of the same tone in heavier fabric. The coat may be worn with other frocks, or a two-piece suit of different tone for interesting change, versatile and practical. The two-piece suit with short jacket accompanied by a long coat of the same or different material and color is another tops in the realm of current suit lore; this suit-coat also leads a dual life.

The afternoon suit of black broadcloth with Persian fox or galyack collar is chic and adapts itself well to personality changes to meet varied occasions worn with a lame, velvet or satin blouse, it is dressy with a tailored blouse or sweater, it is smart for business. Evening suits go to dinner, the theater, concert and formal dancing affairs. For semiformal occasions the short jacket is an integral part of the costume; in the formal suit consisting of the evening gown and tailored long or short coat, the latter is merely a wrap to wear en route to the formal function.

Parents Urged To Guard Talk Before Child

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"WHAT a sweet baby!"

"Isn't she too cute? Do you know what she did the other day?" And then follows the story of some bit of naughtiness on the child's part.

The subject of such a conversation may be only 15 months old and unable to talk, but that is no proof that she is unable to understand most of what is said in her hearing, or at least to grasp the general intent of the conversation.

By 4 years old she may not be able to spell, but she will know perfectly what her mother means when she rapidly spells out words like "candy" or exclaims, "Isn't she s-m-a-r-t?" The self-conscious smirk on the youngster's face should be a sufficient warning to her mother.

Parents seldom realize how much of what is said in the presence of an apparently unconscious child is understood and registered in the little brain. When Mrs. X talks over intimate family matters in the room where 4-year-old Tommy is playing in the corner, Tommy probably hears and understands far more than is good for him; and Mary, listening to her mother's guests gossiping at the bridge or tea table, is picking up tid-bits not meant for her.

To talk and to spell come later than understanding speech and spelling. How soon a child first knows what is being said varies, and no one can tell the exact time when it begins. Moreover, long before he fully understands what is being discussed in his presence, he can sense atmospheres and general trends of conversation.

From the attitude which many parents take one might suppose that children were deaf and dumb and feeble-minded up to the moment when they burst into speech.

Little pitchers have disproportionately long ears, and it is best to go on the assumption that they hear and understand everything.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Widow of 40 Wonders if She Would Find Happiness in Marrying Widower; Both Have Children.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 40 years of age and have been a widow for ten years. Since last June I have been going with a widower who is 12 years my senior. I have a daughter 13, who has been everything to me, but at times I grew lonely for the companionship of someone older. I have sisters, but they have their own families and have very little time even to talk to me.

• • • •

This widower is a man of good morals, and has two children, a boy 11 and a girl in college. Although he makes a very good salary, it takes a good part of it for the daughter's education. I have been working all these years and have just managed to keep things going, buying a home and having few pleasures.

• • • •

Could there be happiness in a second marriage where there are children on both sides? Have you ever known them to be successful? Please answer soon, as I shall be watchin' the paper every day for your reply. Sincerely PUZZLED.

• • • •

DEAR PUZZLED: There could be happiness in such a marriage if all the individuals concerned are well bred, considerate, appreciative, generous, kindly persons. But if the children should be rude, selfish, possessive, demanding, jealous and exacting; and if the parents perchance should be afflicted with the same shotcomings, the relationship might rapidly become a purgatory for five.

• • • •

There is a possibility the widower's children might be jealous of the affection he would give to a wife, after having been long accustomed to the idea that they are the only apples of his eye. There is a possibility you might resent his affection for them, and that he might even show himself fonder of them than of your daughter. There is a possibility he might suspect you of catering to your child at the expense of his children and himself. Where five persons' temperaments must be considered in a newly-minted marriage, the two contracting parties are running a great risk of finding their mated state worse than the loneliness which they sought to escape.

• • • •

But as I say, happiness can be found in such marriages if all the individuals concerned are essentially compatible and essentially fine. Whether or not they are in this case is a question which you can answer better than I. You know your child, you know yourself, you know the widower, and it is to be supposed that you also know his children and can surmise their reaction to you, both as father's current sweetheart and as his possible future wife. M. H.

Girl's Love Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: At the present I am a wreck of nerves. My problem is this: I have been going with this boy who showed me he cared, until three weeks ago. He told me he was tired of my company and of all girls' company. A week after we quarreled I got a job as cashier in a tourist camp. The first week I was there he would come out nearly every night and act smart. He usually brought another boy along to back up his statements about his dates and girls. It hurt me, but I acted as though I didn't care and talked to the other fellows. Did I do right?

• • • •

Last week he stayed away until Sunday. Then he came with two girls, but I wasn't there. Since he has been staying away I have had only one date. I just can't go with other boys and feel anything but bored. I have even tried going to the movies with other girls, but I am miserable during the whole show.

• • • •

Please don't tell me to forget him. I never will. I worry continuously, fearing he won't come back. I just can't write asking him to come back. My pride won't let me. I believe I will go insane. Do you think he is just trying me out? Or is he entirely through with me?

• • •

He has given me some gifts which I have offered to return. But he won't accept them. Should I insist on returning them? I can go to a dance this week-end, but I am afraid my evening will be spoiled. I guess he will be there trying to show off. Should I go? WAITING.

A Village Lout.

DEAR WAITING: I think your ex-beau is a vulgar young man who doesn't deserve a second thought or glance. I don't know whether or not he is through with you. I don't suppose he knows himself. As you say, he is simply "acting smart." He hasn't progressed beyond the elementary stage of human behavior.

• • • •

Such a youth could never make any girl happy. He can only cause her pain, humiliation and embarrassment. My advice to you is to have done with him at once. Send him back his gifts, without asking his permission to do so. Go to the dance this week-end and avoid him as you would a gartersnake. If he comes to your place of work, be quietly civil to him as you would to any customer, but don't show the slightest interest in what he says or does. Treat his companions the same way. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

There is no structure of the body which makes us more disease conscious than the skin. It is a barometer registering with great accuracy the state of the body as a whole. We recognize a schoolgirl complexion as an indication of buoyant health, and physicians are able to distinguish between the "peaches and cream" of good health and the flush of disease.

One of the most disfiguring disorders is known as acne, although it is commonly referred to as "pimples and blackheads." As a rule it appears in both sexes during the period of adolescence, at which time the victim is quite sensitive to his or her personal appearance. Despite a large amount of research, mystery still surrounds the cause. Nevertheless we recognize many contributing factors which bring on the disorder, continue it, or make it worse. In some instances it is possible by combating these to prevent the disease or at least to ameliorate the symptoms.

We have heard a good deal about the role of the endocrine glands and it is possible, in fact probable, that a temporary disturbance in the sex glands is responsible for a lowered state of nutrition of the skin which is followed by infection—acne. This is true particularly in those young persons in whom the epidermis is unusually oily or of the coarse grained type. Low vitality from any cause, especially if it is accompanied by constipation, anemia, or a diet too high in carbohydrates (sugars and starches), adds to the severity of the situation. Many of these youngsters do not get sufficient outdoor exercise and sunshine, and not a few have septic tonsils and bad teeth.

Curiously enough, the trouble disappears about the age of 25, although sometimes it leaves permanent scars. We can aid greatly in checking this plague of youth by giving proper attention to the toilet of the face. At the same time we must not forget that the general health must receive scrupulous supervision. Every greasy skin should be washed several times daily with some mild soap, and dried thoroughly with a rough towel. Sulphur soap has been recommended. When this is used the lather is allowed to remain on for a few minutes. Hard water is as irritating to some skins as a poison and, whenever required, some softening powder or a little ammonia may be used in the water.

If dandruff is present, olive oil should be rubbed into the scalp at night and washed out in the morning. Massage of the face and scalp is advised.

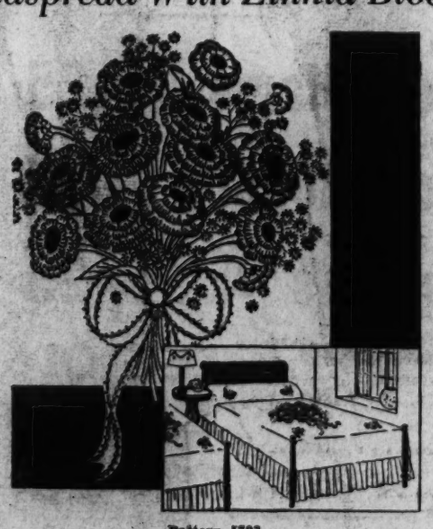
Blanket-Stitch Used to Dress Bedspread With Zinnia Blooms



Pattern 5703.

By Alice Brooks.

WHEN WAS stitchery ever so lovely as this! Don't these glorious zinnia blooms inspire you to embroider a bedspread, or even two, with their handsome but simple motif? Blanket-stitch and French knots make the life-like zinnias, with lazy-daisy and outline stitch to complete the design. The corner motifs may adorn scarfs, towels, or refreshment linens. Choose floss to match your room's color scheme. In pattern 5703 you will find a transfer pattern of a motif 17 x 18¾ inches and two reverse motifs 3¾ x 4¼ inches; material requirements; color suggestions; illustrations of all stitches needed.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY HAVE the prettiest little white colonial cottage with a bright blue roof and blue shutters, and during the right seasons she has tall hollyhocks in bloom all around the house. It looks like a picture postcard house! Now they're putting a white picket fence all around the yard to keep their little boy and his dog within bounds . . . they'll have an arched gate that is going to look very nice too.

Inside the house is as fresh and crisp looking as it is on the outside . . . with a good many of the same colors. White walls with maple furniture. In the living room and dining room they have bright blue woodwork, curtains in yellow theatrical gauze, braided oval rugs and furniture coverings in hollyhock reds and pinks.

Their little boy's room has the same yellow curtains with white walls, but his furniture is painted yellow, too, and there is plain blue linoleum on the floor. The main bedroom of the house has ample furniture, too—white walls, a yellow curtains, a yellow bedspread and a rug of an old-time all-over figured design (something like a Brussels carpet of days gone by).

But the kitchen is the cutest room of all. It's white with yellow curtains, a green linoleum, green linings for the shelves, green pots and pans, white pottery with a green scenic design. And here and there a piece of pottery in tangerine color (some of that Pacific Coast pottery that's so jolly).

Autumn Creates Zest for Tastier Meals in Home

Condiments Recommended to Keep Foods Equal to Livelier Appetite.

RED LEAVES on the trees and a nip in the air mean autumn and a renewed interest in food. Summertime lethargy vanishes and appetites that seemed gone for good are back on the job as keen as ever. Bigger and better meals are in order; the oven and broiler and the cook must get back into action.

This is a good time of year to make a resolution about the daily meals. You may not need to serve bigger meals, but in many households they can be better. They can be planned more carefully not only so that cost and waste are cut down but so flavor and tastiness are increased.

Cooking gets to be a humdrum performance in the average home after the first few weeks of renewed autumn interest. Very soon women grumble at the monotony of the task, and the family mutters about the lack of interest and variety in what is put on the table. It need not be so, for food preparation can be eternally fascinating even if we have no more than a dozen basic menus.

Condiments Helpful.

By means of spices and condiments we can so change the flavor overtones of meats, fish, salads and desserts that the variety is endless and the staple foods never pall. If you are an experimenter, increase your number of recipes by trying out some of those constantly being developed by home economists. If you are imaginative, work out new flavor and food combinations of your own. You will enjoy your kitchen duties more and your family will approach the table in a spirit of delightful anticipation instead of doleful apathy.

The recipes below are tasty adaptations of family standbys. They show you how the addition of different seasonings can, in Aladdin's language, give you "new lamps for old."

Ham Pot Pie.

2 cups diced ham
1 can corn
2 large potatoes, diced
1 small onion
¼ teaspoon mustard
¼ teaspoon paprika
1¾ cups white sauce

Combine all ingredients and bake in a casserole for about 30 minutes. Then cover with baking powder biscuits and bake for 15 minutes more. Serves 6.

French Beef Roll.

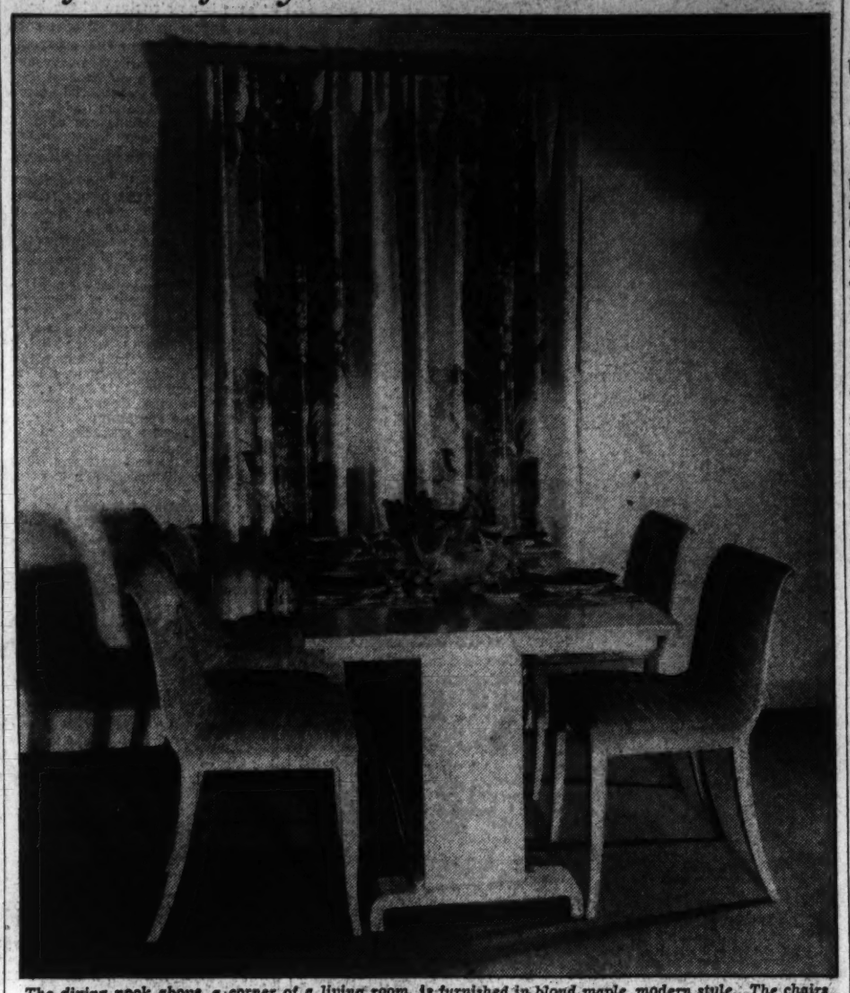
2 pounds flank steak
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
½ cup sausage meat
¼ cup celery
3 cups bread crumbs
1 teaspoon sage
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 can vegetable soup

Rub steak with flour, salt and pepper. Brown the sausage meat and celery, add the crumbs and sage. Mix well, then spread the dressing over the surface of the steak. Roll lengthwise, fasten with string or toothpicks. Rub the roll with the melted butter and sear in a hot oven until all sides are brown. Add the soup and an equal amount of water and bake in a moderate oven for 1½ hours. Serves six.

New Wall Colors.

Is this your turn with the painters and paperhangers? If so, you're probably in a quandary right now about color selections. Let Miss Boykin's new bulletin help you—it includes sample colors along with suggested ensembles to go with them. Ask for "How to Select New Colors for Your Walls." It will be sent to you on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope . . . it is five pages long.

Living Room Dining Alcove Smart If Carefully Planned and Furnished



The dining nook above, a corner of a living room, is furnished in blond maple, modern style. The chairs are upholstered in green and yellow rough-textured fabric; chintz curtains, giving the illusion of a window, are of a French contemporary pattern. Photo courtesy W. & J. Sloane, New York.

May Be Decorative Spot, or It May Be Just 'Cluttered;' Table and Chairs Can Be Used for Bridge; Harmony Requisite.

By Marianne Butler.

WITH SPACE at such a premium in the modern apartment, a popular note in interior decorating is the dining alcove, which is set apart in one corner of the living room. It not only facilitates dining when entertaining guests informally, but, if well planned, is a decorative spot for the entire room. Another interesting feature is that the same table and chairs serve for the bridge games, afterward.

A requisite when planning such a room is that the dining alcove should be of the same period or general character as the rest of the room. Harmony in furniture and color scheme is necessary, otherwise the alcove is a "sore spot" in the general plan, detracting rather than enhancing the room.

This double-purpose living-dining room may be large or small, according to the space available, and may be either directly a part of the entire room, or if it is large enough, a definite alcove, sometimes with steps leading up to the tiny room. In the last mentioned instance, it may be dramatized by draperies at the entrance, and made the highlight of the general scene.

If the apartment is the type where the living room must serve for living and dining room by day, and bedroom by night, it is even more important that the dining alcove or "nook" be carefully planned and decorated. These all-purpose, one room apartments can be either very smart, or just cluttered, with no definite scheme or plan apparent, and decidedly uninteresting and unattractive.

While the idea is linked with moderne decorating, and the majority of such nooks are of this style, any period room (or combinations of periods) may be utilized in this fashion. Even a living room composed entirely of antique furniture can be smartly arranged with a dining alcove or nook; the old in furnishings combined with ultra-modern ideas. For a room in Regency, for instance, the entrance to the dining alcove could be marked by pedestals in this period, at either side, making a most distinctive arrangement.

If you wish to go traditional, in your interior decorating, a lovely combination is Sheraton and Chippendale, with mahogany furniture. The moderne room in this classification, according to the latest dictates of the mode, uses the smart and popular blonde maple. With this style as the choice there are possibilities for unique and smart color schemes. The wood lends itself well to the accompaniment of rough-textured fabrics, both for the upholstering and the overdraperies. A room in a number of the lovely fall tones would be a chic and very livable color theme.

It is more interesting, when possible, to plan the dining "nook" near a window. At one end of the table is an excellent place, the curtains and overdraperies, if they are part of the plan, furnishing a more delightful background than a plain wall. If a window is not available, then improvise one by means of fabrics. The two-colored walls (two sides of the room one color and the remaining two, a different tone) is a grand method of giving the illusion of space to an all-purpose room. It is also considered as smart and modern as it is decidedly practical.

Household Hints

Before placing a can of anything in the refrigerator to chill be sure to remove the paper wrapper or label. The paper acts as an insulator and retards the chilling of the can's contents.

Jelly which turns to sugar makes a delicious sirup for waffles or pancakes by adding one-half glass of water to one glass of jelly and heating just enough to dissolve.

A delicious and fitting salad for a main luncheon dish is a glorified potato salad that consists of potatoes, string beans, beets, peas and any salad green.

Double boilers frequently boil dry. Place a jar lid in the water container and when more water is needed the lid will rattle.

Custards will not curdle so readily if a tablespoon of flour mixed with sugar is added.

Sliced almonds added to chicken salad are guaranteed to give it a zest it often lacks.

Herb Brewing Is Coming Back In Cooks' Favor

Use of Savory Sprigs Adds Zest to Most Common Table Foods.

HERB BREWING is fast coming back into vogue. The most recent advocate of herbs in cooking is Miss Gertrude Conant, Arkansas extension service nutritionist. According to Miss Conant, the real magic of herbs lies in the palate bewitching effects of savory dishes.

"The judicious use of herbs will turn many indifferent dishes into food over which the epicure will rave," Miss Conant is quoted as saying by the Associated Press.

Common taste-titillaters are dill, mint, parsley and sage. Ones that are just as easily cultivated are the more uncommon chives, chervil, sweet basil, sweet marjoram, summer savory and thyme. Most of these can be grown in the backyard garden.

Miss Conant points out that two tablespoons of chopped parsley and sweet basil in equal parts make prosaic scrambled eggs something to write home about.

"An omelet begins to go places when it includes a mixture of finely chopped basil, chives, savory and thyme," she says. "String beans are hardly recognizable when two tablespoons of chopped basil are dropped in the pot."

We are perfectly proper in associating dill with pickles, but, according to Miss Canont, few of us know that its chopped leaves will make creamed chicken, shrimp or lobster taste entirely unusual.

Broiled lamb chops, or fried fish, with a sprinkling of dill leaves on each piece, and a little hot melted butter poured over them to bring out the flavor, will hardly be recognized as common food.

These herbs are in season only a short while each year, but may be dried for winter use.

By Patcie Ellicott.

TO GOOD Kentuckians, turtle soup ranks next in epicurean attractiveness to Kentucky Burgoo, the famous stew served in the Blue-grass State on Derby Day.

Naturally, therefore, guests at the hospitable table of Mrs. Ollie James, widow of the Senator from that State often rejoice when the first course is "Turtle Soup," made as only a cook from that section of the country can make it, provided the turtle can be found on the Washington markets.

MRS. OLLIE JAMES.

The late Speaker of the House Champ Clark, who was born in Kentucky, although his political affiliations were with Missouri, was particularly fond of turtle soup, too.

Kentucky turtle soup is made from the following recipe:

2 pounds veal bones, 2 carrots, 2 onions, 1 ounce butter, 3 tablespoons flour, 2 quarts beef stock or water, 1 small can tomatoes, 1 small can tomato puree, salt and paper, whole cloves, ½ cup sherry, 2 cups boiled fresh turtle meat, 1 lemon, 2 hardboiled eggs.

Roast the bones and vegetables with the butter until brown. Add flour and brown again. Add water or beef stock, tomatoes and tomato puree, salt, black pepper to taste, and a few whole cloves. Boil for two hours. Add sherry wine. Strain the soup through cheese cloth. Then add boiled fresh turtle meat cut in small squares, lemon, and eggs, also cut in small squares, boil up quickly and serve.

Low Temperature Stops Shrinkage In Cooking Bacon

BACON, because it is so easily and quickly prepared, frequently receives little attention in the cooking and, consequently, the temperature is allowed to become hotter and hotter, with the result that the kitchen is filled with smoke and the bacon shrinks to a mere shadow of its former self.

In order to minimize shrinkage in cooking bacon, a low temperature is necessary. The fat should never be allowed to smoke. Smoking fat is really burning fat, which means that the temperature is much too high.

Best results are obtained by panbroiling bacon; by placing a single layer in a cold skillet, turning the heat on low, and allowing it to cook slowly until the bacon is crisp and golden brown. The fat is poured off as it accumulates so that the bacon will panbroil, not fry.

Red-headed RUTH

IF I'D KNOWN MARRIED LIFE WAS LIKE THIS! MORE SHIRTS TO DO, MORE SHEETS, MORE SOCKS—AND MY BACKS ABOUT BROKEN!
GIVE ME ANOTHER CRACK AT HER, BROTHER! I'LL WRECK HER AND HER CLOTHES, TOO!
HA HA! AND WAIT'LL YOU SEE WHAT I'VE DONE TO YOUR HANDS!
NEXT MORNING
MY MOTHER NEVER FADED SHIRTS AND FRAYED 'EM LIKE THIS! THEY LASTED FOR YEARS—BUT YOU...
WELL THEN, SEND 'EM TO HER TO DO! I'M SICK AND TIRED OF SCRUBBING CLOTHES—AND LOOK AT MY HANDS!

NEXT DAY
OH YES—AND SOME LAUNDRY SOAP—IT GOES SO FAST IN OUR HOUSE.
WELL, MRS. REID, MY WIFE SAYS OXYDOL GOES FARTHER THAN MOST—MAKES EVERYTHING LOOK BETTER AND LAST LONGER, TOO.
NEW SAFE NO-SCRUB SOAP OXYDOL
YES, MRS. REID—IT SOAKS OUT DIRT. NO SCRUBBING. NO BOILING—AND NO FADING! EVERYBODY'S ASKING FOR IT LATELY.
NEXT WASHDAY
GOODNESS—LOOK AT THOSE SHEETS! WHITE AS CAN BE—AFTER JUST 15 MINUTES' SOAKING, AND I NEVER TOUCHED THEM TO THE WASHBOARD!
THAT NIGHT
WHAT—DINNER AT HOME? DIDN'T YOU WASH TODAY? WHY HONEY—YOU'RE MORE LIKE YOUR OLD SELF AGAIN!
YOU BET I DID—AND A BIG ONE, TOO! BUT WITH MY NEW SOAP, OXYDOL, I WAS THROUGH BY 12—AND WAIT'LL YOU SEE YOUR SHIRTS THIS TIME!

MY LANDS, RUTH—ALL THIS PEP AFTER YOUR BIG WASHING? I'D BE TIRED OUT!
I TOLD YOU I'D MARRIED THE SMARTEST GIRL IN THE WORLD! AND THE BEST LOOKING, TOO!

HAVE YOU TRIED IT YET?

This New "No-Scrub, No-Boil" Soap Soaks Out Dirt! Faster Washing, Shades Whiter Washing —Safe for Hands, Colors, Fabrics.

Why let washday "get you down" when this amazing new soap invention makes washing so easy! Today millions of women are quitting old-fashioned back-breaking washing methods for this easier, far whiter-washing way!

OXYDOL is an utterly new kind of laundry soap, perfected by the makers of gentle Ivory. It is the result of a patented process which makes soap much faster acting, yet keeps it safe . . . a formula that makes it 2 to 3 times whiter washing than less modern soaps, by actual test. Just 15 minutes' soaking to the tubful . . . no scrubbing, no boiling . . . and your white things come so white it will amaze you! Yet OXYDOL works with safety to your clothes and hands. Even sheerest cotton prints washed 100 consecutive times in OXYDOL suds, showed no perceptible sign of fading. With OXYDOL you get thick 3-inch suds—even in hard water. Suds that go to work on grease, dirt, and stains, 2 to 3 times faster than less modern soaps.

No wonder women everywhere are switching to this marvelous new laundry soap, and discarding old-fashioned bar soaps, chips, and flakes.

Clothery Real Saver of Steps For Housewife

Bright, Cheery Room Can Be Made Center of Many Daily Activities.

HOW MANY extra steps do you take a day? How much do time and energy mean to you? Do you run downstairs to get something or to rinse out some little thing, and run up stairs to take a stitch-in-time, or to put something away?

Of course you do, if you are the natural housekeeper. Why not save all of these steps and your precious time by having a "clothery?"

A "clothery" is a combination laundry and sewing room. Not every woman can build a house to suit her own needs, but she can easily turn a room into a "clothery," be it on the first floor, second floor or in the basement.

Color is important in a room of this kind, since much of the household work is to be done in it. It has every right to be convenient, pleasant and attractive. Paint the walls a light yellow to reflect the light, or some pastel shade that you prefer. Choose floor linoleum that reflects this basic color in its design. Chairs, work tables and woodwork should be painted a contrasting color. Rust or gray furnishings would be smart with a lemon yellow wall.

Something very gay and gorgeous should be used for the window curtains and chair covering. Select something that you like, regardless of the opinions of the rest of the family. If it is true that a woman should have "a room of her own," a clothery is a perfect one for the housewife.

Lighting is an important consideration. If there is not proper natural light, have plenty of duplex outlets at 36 inches from the floor to eliminate tiresome stooping and reaching for electrical connections. As there are three main working areas—washing, sewing and ironing—there should be ceiling lights concentrated on each of these places.

Salvage an old wicker chair. Smarten it up with a coat of fresh paint and give it a place next to the sewing center, and mend in comfort while your washer does its work.

A washing machine, a net sink, a storage hamper and supply shelves are necessities for the washing center. This corner of the room may be made as attractive as any other with the new styled equipment.

Corsets Matching Coloring of Gown

Practice of Making Underwear Harmonize Returns.

The practice of matching underwear with costumes is returning. Some women are carrying this idea to the extent of matching the color of their corsets to the color of the evening gowns worn over them. The vogue for black daytime ensembles has brought black slips and black panties into demand. Satin crepe and taffeta slips are being sold in brown, navy, wine green and rust shades to match dresses.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

Pattern 132.

WITH THAT smart tam to set off her tailored frock, she might be college girl, business woman, or young matron out for a quick trip to market. Ready for any daytime engagement, this noble shirt-waister puts up a good buttoned front, squares its shoulders with smooth yoke-sleeves and achieves a perfect fit by means of clever darts. Superbly casual lines are these, and super-simple to cut, too, for aided by the Detailed Sewing Guide which accompanies this pattern, both the expert and novice at sewing can quickly turn out chic equal to this. Can't you just see this in a corduroy, jersey or wool crepe?

Pattern 132 is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2¼ yards 54 inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins or stamps (preferably coins) for this pattern. Write clearly name, address, style number and size. Send orders to The Washington Post, Pattern Department, 70 Fifth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Halloween Season Entertaining Requires Spiciest Food of Year

Spicy mince pies with pussy cat crusts, made of economical dry mince meat, make a properly spooky centerpiece and finishing delicacy for a Halloween buffet supper. They are especially fitting for autumn celebrations served with savory cheese soup, a main dish of shrimp wiggle, a colorful salad and coffee.

Buffet Suppers Have Especial Appeal for Celebrations; Hot Soups Recommended to Keep 'Spooky Witches' Out of Parties.

WHEN CATS and hobgoblins frolicked on Halloween and the witches hurried moonward on their broomsticks, it was customary for good friends to gather together by the fireside to celebrate their safety from evil spirits by feasting. The carnival spirit of this famous festival is still the year's best for informal entertaining.

Most anything can happen on this particular evening of October 31, but the ghosts and what not like to eat; and if they are well fed, do the natives no harm. So it is essential to carry out the idea accepted at the present time and serve foods to please them.

A buffet supper is an excellent way for adults to entertain in any season but especially this one, as a fall supper may be made so attractive with the use of bright autumn colors, and as there are so many interesting foods now in season that go to compose such a meal. These fall decorations may be used throughout the entire season when entertaining after the races, games or any fall outings.

Also, since Halloween is on Saturday this year, you will probably be going to a football game in the afternoon and won't it be fun to have the crowd in your home after the game to a surprise feast? Of course, you won't have time to prepare a formal meal after the game, so let your guests save you time and trouble by helping themselves. The informality will add to the fun.

Your Halloween party may be a kitchen raid, for these days clever hosts and hostesses enjoy kitchen entertaining when friends roll up their sleeves, don aprons and smocks and help to produce the eats. Your kitchen may be decorated. Grotesque-looking Jack O'Lanters will furnish light from cupboard tops and window sills. Cornstalks will add decoration to corners, if the kitchen is a large one, and black goblins and witches to the ceilings and walls.

Gay Decorations.

Gay paper napkins and doilies matching the bright yellow-checked kitchen curtains furnish a cheerful background. For a table centerpiece use a wooden bowl filled with bright-colored vegetables. Ears of corn may be made into candle holders.

In considering the choice of food to serve, keep in mind that a hot bouillon will help dispel the shivery feeling of spooks. Canned bouillon or consumme are convenient to get ready for the party as nothing needs to be done except heat the constituents of the can.

Squeamish names add much charm to such a Halloween occasion. Canned frankfurters or the tiny canned sausages heated and served between small hot buns would be good, especially if they were given a name like spider buns. Deviled eggs, with cavair or sardines added to the filling would be good.

A salad made with canned peach halves and stuffed prunes would give a good color combination and, of course, a good flavor. The prunes might be stuffed with cheese, or shredded raw carrots (called witches' teeth).

If you have electric table cooking appliances, you may serve creamed dishes or sauces cooked at the table. Entertaining this modern way means more time to spend with the guests. With a toaster or sandwich grill and condiment dishes filled with spreads and relishes all sorts of crisp, crunchy sandwiches may be toasted. Waffles may be served the same way.

Cheese Soup.
Shrimp Wiggle Toast
Sweet Pickled Apricots
Peach and Prune Salad
Deviled Hams and Potato Chips
Halloween Mince Pie
Coffee.

Shrimp Wiggle.

3 No. 1 cans shrimp
1 No. 2 can peas
1 quart medium white sauce well seasoned
4 tablespoons sherry

Clean the shrimp, drain the peas. Add fish and peas to the white sauce. Heat thoroughly in a double boiler. Add the sherry, a little at a time and stir it in thoroughly. Do not add the sherry until almost ready to serve. Serve 8.

Serve the shrimp wiggle from a casserole or chafing dish. Serve a sweet pickled apricot on each plate. Oysters, crab, salmon or tuna fish, may be substituted for shimp, if desired.

Deviled Ham Potato Chips.

Two 5-ounce cans deviled ham, ¼ cup well seasoned mayonnaise, 1 cup cottage cheese, potato chips. Cream the deviled ham, mayonnaise and cottage cheese thoroughly. Arrange in a mound and allow each guest to scoop up this mixture with the potato chips. Each ham chip makes a savory bite to accompany the salad.

Mince pie with pussy cat crust makes a properly spooky centerpiece as well as a spicy delicacy to wind up the feast.

Halloween Mince Pie.

1 package (9 oz.) dry mince meat.
1½ cup water.
3 tablespoons sugar.

Break the dry mince meat into pieces. Add cold water. Place over heat and stir until all lumps are thoroughly broken up. Add sugar. Bring to a brisk boil; continue boiling for 3 minutes, or until mixture is practically dry. Cool. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry and fill with mince meat mixture. Cut pastry into the shape of a witch's cat and place on top of mince meat filling. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 35 minutes.

Mrs. Blanchard Tells of Faults With Suffrage

Describes Shattered Illusions of Women After 16 Years With the Ballot.

AFTER SIXTEEN years of suffrage for women the odds are still 95 to 5 against women getting political recognition. Their political illusions have been shattered, they are political drudges, and they realize now that they have never worked with the men, but for them, if they have been allowed to work at all.

Thus Edith Blanchard views "This Ballot Box Business" in the current Independent Woman, official organ of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Blanchard speaks from experience, for she has been secretary to four different mayors of Brockton, Mass.; she was a member of the State Republican committee of Massachusett for seven years; chairman of the women's Republican committee of the Fourteenth Senatorial District; vice chairman of the Republican city committee, and one of the founders of the Women's Republican Club of Massschusetts.

The 50-50 deal which women expected never materialized, according to her. In her home city approximately 750 men have been elected and appointed to office since 1920, and not a single woman until January, of last year, when a young woman won a place on the board of assessors.

"All this seems terribly unfair," according to the writer. "There are women in almost every community who would be highly qualified for certain positions, and many of these women have worked unceasingly for 15 years for the election of a practically all-male ticket.

"When a man decides to run for public office, his first thought is to get the women's vote. He calls up a long list of representative women and asks them with suave compliments to help him. And they always have. But if a woman wants to run for office, she gets only diplomatic discouragement and from that moment is booked for the shelf.

"As long as she keeps working (for the men) and asks nothing, she is 'indispensable to the party.' But when she begins to entertain political ambition for herself, she is disposed of as soon as decency allows.

"Of course, there are a few women now holding public office who are doing splendid things and making history, but their number is pitifully small. There should be more women in our town, city and state government, and more in Washington."

Suede Important For Sports Wear

Suede is becoming increasingly important in sports wear. It appears in bright autumn shades with skirt and jacket to match or contrast. Or, a suede jacket may be combined with a tweed skirt and have revers and lining of tweed. Many three-length suede coats in chaudron or bright colors are appearing on college campuses. Suede coats are warmly lined and frequently have fur collars.

Embroidered Boutonniere.

London—Flowers are embroidered on dresses and ensembles in place of a boutonniere. An embroidered flower on a suit-coat lapel has a matching flower on the blouse beneath.

Practical English

When we heard that 200 sets of those "Practical English and Effective Speech" booklets that were circulated through the Department of Agriculture last week had been sold in a single day, we thought we'd investigate this sudden interest in better speech.

The booklets are being sold at $1.85 for a set of 15 by the Welfare Association, but A. M. Day, the president, was out of town, and Carrie M. Davis, the secretary, didn't know whose idea the whole business was. Elsewhere, we learned that during the summer an agent of the company putting out the booklets sold Dr. W. W. Stockberger, director of personnel, on how nice it would be to improve the letter-writing technique, telephone and dictation voices of Agriculture employes.

The "practical English and effective speech" crusade has already borne fruit. Yesterday, the purchaser of one of the sets called the attention of the Welfare Association to the fact that the circular advertising the booklets violated the rules of pronunciations laid down in the booklets.

We don't like to throw a damper on uplift efforts, but we're willing to bet that most of the 200 persons who bought sets never get past booklet number one which starts with a quotation from Nichols Murray Butler. Probably in a year or two most of them will find themselves in the position of Miss Davis, who bought a set the other day only to learn that it was identical with a set of better speech booklets she had purchased a year ago through the Business and Professional Women's Club. Miss Davis never did get past lesson three with set number 1.

Henry C. Iler, new national organizer of the A. F. G. E., is a good long-shot bet as a future president of the organization.

Zoo Visit

We visited the National Zoo for the first time yesterday to prepare ourselves for the Office of Education-Smithsonian Institution broadcast at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow about the Zoo. Our advice is to listen to the broadcast and then go out to the Zoo in the afternoon.

Although the leaves on the trees are beginning to show autumn's colors, none of the birds or animals have been moved into their winter quarters yet. At that only a small proportion of the Zoo specimens, like the tropical pelicans, and the rare monkey-eating eagle, are taken inside when the frosts begin, Dr. William Mann, the Zoo director, explained.

The diets of the Zoo inhabitants are changed with the winter, not so much because of the cold as because certain foods are cheapest in the summer, while others reach their low in the winter. Economy is always a prime consideration in selecting Zoo foods and, as Dr. Mann puts it, "we get the finest second-quality foods available." Dr. Mann has been trying to stimulate the appetite of the animals for sugar beets—the reason being that the Zoo gets 20 tons daily for nothing from the Arlington farm.

Off-size carrots and potatoes, second grade meats, fish of whatever type is being caught in greatest quantities, and a special tough-crusted Zoo-made bread known as "bear bread," form the other staples for the animals. The Zoo also purchases quantities of bread-loaf scraps and cast-off slices. Whenever slices of raisin bread are included in the lot, special care is taken to see that the monkeys, chimpanzees and orang-outangs get them—for the anthropoids take particular delight in picking out and munching the raisins individually.

The noisiest spot in the Zoo is the birdhouse, which sounded as if several hundred enthusiastic school children were chasing each shouting at one another. However the strangest noise emitted by any animal was that of the white-lipped peccary, whose jaws click like castanets. And so if, during tomorrow's breadcast, you hear castanets click, don't smirk or wisecrack about the Zoo going Spanish—for it will be a good imitation.

Aid to Architect Fired, D.C. Withholds Record

Bennett Says Inquiry Led Him to Believe He Was Cleared.

Makes Public Charges He Gave Preference to Contractors.

CHARLES BENNETT.

Charles A. Bennett, who was summarily dismissed yesterday by the District Commissioners from his post of chief of the mechanical division of the municipal architect's office, last night disclosed the 18 charges made against him, together with his answer, after District officials had clamped down on all records in the case.

Bennett, who was not officially informed of the Commissioners' action, but was told by a newspaper reporter, appeared dumbfounded at the action, as he said he had been assured by an investigation committee that "there was nothing to the charges."

Not only did the Commissioners leave the District Building before their secretary released the ouster order, but all other District aids having knowledge of the case refused to comment or to disclose any of the records. The file that customarily accompanies a Commission order was withdrawn before the order was given to the press.

Bennett, who has been in the District service seven years and who has a high efficiency rating, indicated he will fight the ouster order by every legal means.

Favoritism Charged.

The charges, some of which date back five years, were presumably made by salesmen for mechanical equipment manufacturers. They alleged Bennett had favored certain contractors over others and had drawn up specifications so that they would have an advantage in competitive bidding.

Bennett, insisting he is innocent, asserted the attacks on him had been instigated by a "disgruntled" salesman for a Boston concern. This salesman, he said, had lined up other salesmen who had failed to obtain various District contracts, and the group filed the charges through an attorney.

W. Gwynn Gardiner, a former District Commissioner, who successfully defended John D. Oehmann, District building inspector, almost a year ago in a similar case, was employed by Bennett to conduct his defense.

Asks Public Hearing.

Gardiner disclosed that he had written a letter asking the Commissioners to grant his client a public hearing before acting on the case, but he said he had received no answer up until the time of Bennett's abrupt dismissal.

The charges have been under investigation since early last August by a special committee comprising Walter Fowler, assistant corporation counsel; Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, assistant engineer commissioner, and A. R. Pilkerton, assistant auditor.

Bennett was given a hearing before the committee after he had answered each of the 18 charges in detail. He said he was led to believe that the committee's recommendations would be favorable to him.

Citing his 24 years' experience in mechanical and electrical engineering, Bennett stated in his answer that he came to the District from the construction division of the Quartermaster General's Office.

Defends Specifications.

He asserted his sole purpose in drafting specifications for mechanical and electrical equipment for the District has been to protect the taxpayers from being defrauded by inferior equipment.

Gardiner said that his client's bank account and other personal possessions are available for inspection to prove he has not been living beyond the style a salary of $4,600 a year would entitle him to.

Bennett in the course of his defense asserted an employe in his office had "unethically removed" correspondence and shown it to the persons who sought his removal.

"This whole controversy," he said, "has been beclouded by certain employes, not mechanically trained, who have repeatedly questioned my authority and judgment in engineering matters pertaining to the work of the office, motivated more, I believe, from personal animosity than sincerity of purpose."

Charges in 2 Divisions.

The charges are in two divisions. The first cite instances in which Bennett is alleged to have shown favoritism in the preparation and interpretation of specifications. Equipment for the Brown school, the Anacostia Junior High School, the Woodrow Wilson High School, the Alice Deal Junior High School, the Roosevelt High School, and specifications for fire alarm boxes were involved in the ten charges.

Under the second classification, covered by eight charges, Bennett is alleged to have shown favoritism to contractors by using favored equipment.

The Children's Tuberculosis ospital at Glenn Dale, Woodrow Wilson High School, the Phelps Vocational School, and the Rose Lee Hardy School were involved.

The charges stated that:

"Representatives of Standard Electric Time Co., Bull Dog Electric Products Co., and the Herman-Nelson Corporation, whose equipment is uniformly favored by Bennett, have confidential conversations with Bennett and access to the drawing room before and during preparation of specifications for buildings in which equipment by these companies might properly be used, these courtesies being denied to competing companies."

Bennett denied he had shown any discrimination in this release. However, he said he believed it the duty of a District engineer handling such matters to become acquainted with representatives of manufacturing companies and their products.

Three Injured By Cars in D. C.; One Near Death

Two Drivers Exonerated in Two Fatalities by Coroner's Jury.

George W. Smith, age and address undetermined, was in critical condition at Sibley Hospital last night after being struck by an automobile driven by Robert L. Taylor, of Riverdale, Md., at New Jersey avenue and L street northwest.

Physicians said Smith's right lung was punctured, his right arm and leg and skull fractured, and several of his ribs broken. They held slight hope for his recovery. Taylor was detained pending outcome of Smith's injuries.

Skull injuries were suffered last night by Clyde Henderson, 47, of No. 2 Wylie court, when he was knocked down by an automobile driven by Wade I. Brinley, 24, of 1221 Thirteenth street northwest. He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital.

Fred Hart, 52, of 334 F street northeast, suffered skull injuries and cuts of his right ear when he was struck by an automobile driven by Lacey L. Aldred, 33, of 812 New Jersey avenue, as he was crossing the street in front of 445 O street northwest.

Woman Dies of Injuries.

Mrs. Anastasia Quay, 73, of 5502 Thirteenth street northwest, died early yesterday of injuries suffered October 11, when she was struck by a Sixth Precinct scout car near her home. The car was manned by Privates J. H. Hasty and C. S. Price. Witnesses said Mrs. Quay walked into the path of the car.

Five-year-old Patton Timmons, of 1825 A street southeast, suffered skull injuries when he fell from a truck driven by Clifton M. Dandridge, of 1654 Kraemmer street northeast.

The boy, police said, lost his balance and was thrown to the street when a door of the truck flew open as the vehicle was making a turn at Eighth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Two Men Exonerated.

Meanwhile, a coroner's jury exonerated two men of blame for traffic fatalities.

Walter J. Michael, 17, of 4731 Georgia avenue northwest, was exonerated by a jury for the death of Nan Patterson, 47, colored, of 1347 S street northwest, who died October 12, in Freedmen's Hospital. The accident occurred at Georgia avenue and Gallatin street northwest.

Charles Milton, 27, colored, 2803 N street southwest, was freed in the death of Russell Harrigan, 52, colored, of 329 Fifty-sixth street northeast, who was injured October 7 on Benning road near the viaduct. He died October 12.

Police Seek Identity Of Man Found in Daze

Police are seeking to establish the identity of a 30-year-old, well-dressed man, apparently suffering from amnesia. He was found yesterday wandering in the 4400 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest.

He was taken to Gallinger Hospital. He is about 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing 110 pounds and has black hair and brown eyes.

Board Adopts Girls' School Cottage Plan

Also Agrees to Merger of Institutions Under U. S. Proposal.

The board of public welfare yesterday adopted a compromise proposal in its dispute with the Budget Bureau regarding the size of cottages to be built at the National Training School for Girls and indicated at the same time its willingness to accept a consolidation of correctional institutions as proposed by the Federal agency.

The plan as to the cottages, now expected to be approved by the District Commissioners, is to build one of the 25 single rooms and one of 12.

Formerly the Welfare Board had insisted upon two 12-room cottages, while the Budget Bureau demanded 25-room dormitories. Elwood Street, director of public welfare, explained yesterday, however, the board was unaware of the bureau's attitude when plans were drawn for the 12-room cottages.

Transfers Considered.

The board decided to give further study to the social aspects of the problem of eliminating the Industrial Home School and transferring the girl and boy inmates to the National Training School for Boys and the National Training School for Girls, respectively.

Nevertheless, a report released earlier in the day by the Commissioners disclosed that the Welfare Board had accepted the Budget Bureau's view as to consolidation.

It expressed a willingness to assume jurisdiction of the National Training School for Boys, now under the Justice Department, but proposed that the number of Federal wards at the school be reduced to make room for District boys to be transferred from the Industrial Home School.

Additional funds will be necessary, the board stated, to provide more foster homes for the more tender children if the merger plan is put into effect.

Street said that the board had recognized the social dangers inherent in the mixing of children from the Industrial Home School with those at the National Training Schools, but that it was believed that highly individualized treatment might remove the hazards.

Separation Provided.

As for the cottage plan compromise he said that provision would be made for the separating of the more hardened girls from the more tender even in the 25-room cottage.

The board in its report suggested that the Children's Receiving Home at 816½ Potomac avenue southeast, which it labeled "a disgrace to the District," might be eliminated in case of the consolidation and that small detention units might be established at the two training schools.

It was pointed out that legislation must be enacted before any of the mergers can be effected. This task is up to the Commissioners, it was indicated, although the Welfare Board stands ready to offer recommendations.

The Welfare Board decided to ask the Commissioners to forward estimates to the Budget Bureau for construction of a gymnasium at the National Training School for Girls. If the money is made immediately available, it was said, the construction my proceed along with the building of the cottages in early spring.

Burroughs Citizens Elect R. M. Furniss

Robert M. Furniss last night was elected president of the Burroughs Citizens Association at its meeting in the Burroughs School.

Other officers chosen included Louis F. Kreek, vice president; Warren H. Willner, secretary; Mrs. Helen Willner, assistant secretary; Wilbur S. Finch, treasurer; Frederick J. Roy, financial secretary, and David Babp and Finch, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The association recommended allocation of additional PWA funds to provide for the grading and seeding of Taft Park.

Farnsworth's Trial Nov. 16; Plea Is Voided

Date Set Late to Allow Government to Call Distant Witnesses.

Proctor Holds 'Conspiracy With Self' Argument Is Not Valid.

John S. Farnsworth, former lieutenant commander in the United States Navy, will be called upon November 16 to face trial in District court on indictments charging him with conspiring to sell secret Naval information to two officers of the Japanese Imperial Navy, and with actually selling the information to a Japanese agent.

Justice James M. Proctor fixed the date yesterday, shortly after he had overruled Farnsworth's attacks on the two indictments. Assistant United States Attorney Samuel F. Beach suggested the date because, he explained, the Government will be required to bring witnesss from California, Florida and other distant points.

Advancing the novel legal proposition that the indictment against Farnsworth, charging conspiracy with two Japanese officers, could not be held valid because the alleged co-conspirators were beyond jurisdiction of the United States courts, Defense Attorneys William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, jr., told Justice Proctor the presentment virtually charged Farnsworth with conspiring with himself.

Espionage Act Cited.

They pointed out that the espionage act of 1917, under which Farnsworth's alleged offenses are predicated, provide that duly accredited foreign diplomats are immune from criminal punishment. Thus, they said, the two officers, now understood to be in Japan, could not be prosecuted.

That being so, Justice Proctor pointed out, a citizen of the United States could secure immunity for himself by "conspiring" only with diplomats. While admitting the point was novel, the jurist said he did not believe it the intent of Congress to create such a situation.

The other indictment accused Farnsworth of actually selling information contained in the confidential publication, Service of Supply and Information, 1922."

Indictment Held Inexplicit.

His attorneys claimed the indictment was not sufficiently explicit in that it failed to state whether the whole book was sold, whether only portions were sold, or whether the information was merely orally passed along.

They also asked that the indictment be clarified by a "bill of particulars," actually naming the agents who dealt with Farnsworth. Both suggestions were adopted by Justice Proctor, who ordered the Government to furnish the information.

In addition to his decisions, Justice Proctor notified attorneys they would have only until Monday to make any further attacks on the indictment, thus paving the way for the hearing next month.

D. C. Jeweler Held On Larceny Charge

Charged with grand larceny on a bench warrant from New York, Bernard Livingston, 40, local jeweler, of 3220 Walbridge place northwest, yesterday was placed on $1,500 bond and an extradition hearing set for November 16 by Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey.

Livingston was taken into custody by Detective Sergt. R. J. Cox and Joseph Sincovitz on a fugitive warrant charging him with the theft of a $2,800 ring from Michael F. McTigue, former light-heavyweight boxer. He was placed on $3,000 bond, later reduced in Police Court.

He pleaded not guilty and demanded 30 days' postponement of the extradition hearing. A notation attached to Livingston's warrant said he accepted the ring from McTigue and failed to return it.

Wife Wins Divorce From Curtis' Son

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Beatrice Elliot Curtis, 35, wife of Attorney Harry K. Curtis, of Washington, son of the late Vice President Charles Curtis, received a divorce today from Superior Judge John C. Lewe.

The decree was granted on grounds of desertion. Mrs. Curtis charging her husband left her February 10, 1934. They were married November 5, 1923, in Washington, while the late Vice President was serving as United States Senator from Kansas.

'Box-Car' Alferi's 1-Track Mind Shunts From Bonus to Pension

Sergt. John ("Box Car") Alferi, of Los Angeles, blew into Washington again yesterday, and definitely exploded the idea that he had a single-track mind. Alferi used to be known as the "One-man Bonus Army." Traveling in box cars, he made six transcontinental trips to Washington to urge payment of the soldiers' bonus. The bonus was all he ever talked about.

But yesterday, though his eyes were still on the Treasury, Sergt. Alferi had a new idea.

"We want pensions," he said. "I guess $60 a month ought to hold us at first. Sure, that'll cost a lot of money, but make the big guys give until it hurts—that's what I say. Tax 'em till it hurts, and then they won't want any more war. Pensions for peace! Get it?"

Sergt. Alferi, who was an engineer with the A. E. F., first came to Washington with the "Bonus Army" in 1931. He was driven away in the riots of 1932. The next year he came back alone as the "One-man Bonus Army," and began lobbying for the bill. He has been coming back every year since. Last year he was arrested when he jumped on the runningboard of President Roosevelt's automobile at the Capitol and yelled "Bonus!"

When the pay-off came in June, Alferi drew $756.32. He bought three suits of clothes and two pairs of shoes, and went fishing and swimming at Long Beach. He also paid off a lot of debts.

He had $50 left when he hit town yesterday. Strolling through the flop-house area, he gave $4 of this away to panhandlers. Thus he was somewhat concerned about the future when he came into The Post city room last night and reluctantly submitted to an interview.

"Yes, sir," he said, "pensions are coming. Sixty bucks a month for life. Tax the big guys, make 'em give till it hurts—that's what I say. Mademoiselle from Armentiers, P. r-lay Voo, Mademoiselle from Armentiers, Parlay Voo——."

Sergt. Alferi, now the "One-man Pension Army," marched away, promising to come back by box-car when Congress convenes in January.

Young Idea Learns to Vote

Centrist Party of G. W. U. Union Claims Landslide Campus Vote

The Left's candidate, Charles Kiefer, jr., took 30 seats and Bennett Willis, standard bearer for the Right, claimed 23 of the total of 101 seats. Count of the votes revealed that the Center took 566 votes, the Left 350 and the Right 268 of the 1,184 votes cast.

Two voting machines which were loaned to the university by a Jamestown, N. Y., voting machine manufacturer with the aim of instructing students in the use of the machines, were kept busy during the voting of yesterday and Wednesday. Although student feeling was said to have run high, the only approach to election violence was the alleged tearing down of election posters.

The Student Union is a body comparable to the United States Senate in which the students gather to discuss and vote upon national and international issues, but has no vested power in campus affairs.

RedCross Drive Closes, Quota Within Sight

Officials Expect Today's Belated Returns to Pass 65,000-Member Goal.

Mounting sharply in a record enrollment day that saw hundreds of workers trek into campaign headquarters in spite of the rain, Red Cross membership at midnight last night, closing hour of the drive, stood at 63,591, only 1,409 less than the quota of the three-week solicitation.

Throughout the day a torrent of enrollments poured into the H street office, matching the downpour of rain outside, and at closing time last night, workers emerged from great piles of cards and enrollment blanks with the word that although complete returns so far show the drive slightly below its goal, returns expected today will certainly put it over the top.

Early in the day it became apparent that the Government unit, of which Gen. Fred W. Boschen is chairman, would pass its goal, and by closing time the division had accomplished this, with an enrollment of 43,412 members. Gen. Boschen, advised of his success last night, predicted that when all returns are in, the total membership in the Government would exceed 45,000 members.

His committee yesterday turned in by far its best return of the campaign, topping even the best total daily campaign enrollment to date. The aggregate report amounted to 6,755.

Likewise, the drive as a whole made the best daily enrollment of the past three weeks. Urged the day before by Lloyd B. Wilson, campaign chairman, to report all possible memberships by midnight last night, solicitors, keymen and division chairmen were in and out of the campaign office all day. At midnight the day's returns totaled 9,537 members.

Takoma Park Bus Service Is Proposed

Transit Company Asks All-Day Express on Third Street.

Substitution of bus service for street cars in another suburban area, Takoma Park, was proposed yesterday by the Capital Transit Co. in a petition filed with the Public Utilities Commission.

The transit company proposed to establish an all-day express bus line to replace the Third and Kennedy street car service and to inaugurate a shuttle bus service from Takoma to Fourteenth street and Colorado avenue.

The plan includes removal of the street car tracks from Takoma down Third street and west on Kennedy street to Fourteenth street. The Georgia avenue-Takoma line would be continued, however.

Another phase of the proposal is the rerouting of the present bus service to Chillum Heights from downtown.

During the day the buses would run along Sherman, Florida and Vermont avenue without touching Sixteenth street. These day buses would run on an express schedule between Park road and Massachusetts avenue. After the afternoon rush period, the buses would follow a local service schedule and would be routed along Sixteenth street to Harvard, a route all but the express rush-hour buses now follow.

The proposals are the outgrowth of months of study and conferences between representatives of the Transit Co. and civic leaders in Takoma and adjacent areas.

Riley Elgen, chairman of the commission, said that unless there was some objection to the company's plan it probably would be approved without public hearing or any major changes.

E. D. Merrill, general manager of the company, said the proposal was made because of the "evident popularity of the express bus service now rendered between the Takoma Park area and the business center."

Institution of the bus service would necessitate the purchase of 16 additional 40-passenger buses at an aggregate cost of $180,000.

The all-day bus service to be substituted for the street cars would continue the 10-cent cash or $1.25 weekly pass rate of fare now used on the rush-hour Takoma express service. The fare on the shuttle buses would be the street car token or transfer.

The Takoma express service would not permit passenger stops between New Hampshire avenue and Park road and Massachusetts avenue and Thirteenth street.

Birthday Bill At the Earle Is Gay Affair

By Nelson B. Bell.

"STAGE STRUCK." First National picturization of a story by Robert Lord, adapted to the screen by Tom Buckingham and Pat C. Flick, with music and lyrics by E. Y. Harburg and Harold Arlen, costarring Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, with Warren William, Frank McHugh, Jeanne Madden, Carol Hughes, Craig Reynolds, Hobart Cavanaugh, Johnnie Arthur, Spring Byington Andrew Tombes, Lilulu McConnell, Val and Ernie Stanton, Edward Gargan, Libby Taylor, Mary Gordon and the Yacht Club Boys. Directed by Busby Berkeley. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

The screen and stage bill assembled at the Earle Theater this week for the sixth anniversary celebration of the establishment of the present house policy is a diverting symposium of gay items dedicated to the proposition that the playhouse primarily is a place of entertainment, rather than education, uplift or propaganda. Yesterday's capacity crowds very obviously had the time of their lives!

BELL.

The major screen feature, "Stage Struck," follows a fairly trite formula that has been used many times before in the fabrication of backstage romances, but, even so, contrives, from time to time, to introduce novel touches that lift the film well out of the ruck of mediocrity.

In the first place, it has the courage to kid itself no end; it makes no bones about being hugely satirical with regard to the precise sort of thing that it itself is doing; it is gorgeously staged and it introduces a new and vibrant personality in Jeanne Madden, a youngster with presence, charm, grace and a delightful voice.

Those Boys Are in Again!

In addition to all this, there are the Yacht Club Boys to add zest to the goings-on in two of their trickiest songs—"Income Tax" and "The Body Beautiful." When the Yacht Club Boys put on numbers they are more than merely songs; they are musical recitations of complete and rounded narratives that tell humorous and high-powered topical stories. Their contributions to "Stage Struck" would almost engage the interest of Gilbert and Sullivan by the cleverness of their design. "The Body Beautiful" is a particularly complex and lunatic creation in which the boys divest themseves of a vast amount of sheer idiocy. But what fun!

Getting back to the basic structure of "Stage Struck," it is not far away from the design of "The King of Burlesque," in which Warner Baxter and Alice Faye bore the brunt of the burden. There are the same difficulties in getting the show whipped into shape, the same financial handicaps and the same temperamental stars with whom to battle. Even the plainclothes men get in near the end, as usual. But over and above all these familiar ingredients, this subject possesses a freshness and a brittle sort of humor that place it among the foremost of the lighter musical productions which always have mustered a fine public support.

Dick Powell and Joan Blondell are cast in the roles of a famous dance director and a temperamental heiress who thinks she can sing and act. They begin on a basis of hatred which Warren William, by an adroit muddling of all the Freudian theories, manages to convert into love on the part of Miss Blondell—greatly to Mr. Powell's discomfiture, since Jeanne Madden is the one to whom he figuratively sings "Did I Remember?"

Powell sings a little less than usual, although he still sings, and Miss Blondell makes it plain again that she is one of the most versatile of the cinema's comediennes.

Frank McHugh and Warren William pull many loose scenes out of the fire by the resourcefulness that long experience has given them and Miss Madden makes a wholly charming impression in a role that is pretty big for a beginner.

The Gala Stage Bill.

On the stage, Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears are the major attraction, although during the course of the elaborate vaudeville program numerous other specialists of the first rank appear.

For this occasion the orchestra pit has been abolished and the stage extends fairly into the laps of the first row customers, making for more intimacy than usual, as well as an increased floor area for the staging of colorful stage pictures.

Miss Hutton is the only conductor of whom I am aware who makes dancing one of the vital factors of orchestral direction. Ina Ray conducts with every fiber of her body. Then, as if to make sure that the gyrator preliminaries have been nothing more than tuning-up exercises, toward the end of the act she puts on a dance that practically knocks the pewholders dizzy. It seems to this memory that Miss Hutton is on stage rather less than usual on this visit. That is accounted for by the fact that she has to make so many costume changes. Every time she bobs up she has on a different gown—if that is what they are—each a little more provocative than its predecessor.

The Winsted Trio and the Trado Twins, to all intents and purposes, stop the show with their cleverness, and Margie Palm is an acrobatic dancer of no mean caliber. That two-in-one finish of the Trado act always slays this reporter. The Winsted Trio—two guitarist-vocalists and a girl singer—have made an art of "swing." They could tone down a little from their incessant fortissimos to advantage, but still they are "hot." The 24 Bill Powers Dancers add no little to the brilliance of the birthday bill.

Metropolitan

"MURDER WITH PICTURES." Paramount picturization of a story by George Harmon Coxe, with screen play by John Moffitt and Sidney Salkow, featuring Lew Ayres, Gail Patrick and Joyce Compton, supported by Ernest Cossart, Paul Kelly, Joseph Sawyer, Onslow Stevens, Benny Baker, Irving Bacon, Don Rowan, Frank Sheridan, Purnell Pratt and Christian Rub. Directed by Charles Barton. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

With an accidentally exposed negative as the major "witness" in a perplexing murder mystery, with the plot sufficiently complicated to cast suspicion on a large number of people and with the whole rather logically contrived, "Murder With Pictures" will afford the followers of this type of entertainment their money's worth.

Lew Ayres depicts a newspaper photographer with a highly developed sense of ratiocination, who with the help of dumbish Benny Baker, his assistant, solves the murder of Ernest Cossart, a lawyer, and a number of others, as well as freeing Gail Patrick from suspicion.

While none of the performers offers more than good journeyman "acting," "Murder With Pictures" is a sufficiently interesting yarn to keep the spectator absorbed in the narrative developments, letting the chips of actorial finesse fall where they may.

Mr. Ayres Matures.

For those who have followed the career of Mr. Ayres, as well as for other interested parties, it may be said that the "nice boy" of the screen is growing up, physically as well as histrionically, and here reveals a maturity of performance not heretofore exhibited.

The supplementary program is interesting, although "Rush Hour Rhapsody," a musical comedy, showing how to bolster subway patronage through furnishing patrons with entertainment, is a little attenuated. "Logging Along" is a pleasing commentary on the forestry aspects of the lumber industry, and the combined releases of the Paramount and Universal newsreels offer the day's salient events.

Palace

"DIMPLES." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Arthur Sheekman and Nat Perrin, starring Shirley Temple, supported by Frank Morgan, Helen Westley, Robert Kent and Astrid Allwyn. Directed by William Setter. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

They're trying to make a Garbo out of Temple—or maybe it's a Hepburn. May they never succeed in either.

This is really pretty much of a shame. Shirley's last picture, "Poor Little Rich Girl," wasn't any too strong on story but it was excellent, blithe entertainment. "Dimples" is a terrible letdown.

For all of its gay title, it concentrates on long, slow doses of tears, Shirley running her miniature gamut of emotions, Shirley sobbing, Shirley bravely not sobbing, Shirley singing about her sorrows, and finally the climax of climaxes—Shirley playing "Little Eva's" death bed scene, but not flying to heaven on a wire!

A Story of 1850.

The weak little thread of plot, intended to hold this bit of Temple exploitation together, has to do with one Dimples, a talented little ragamuffin, who lives with a not-too-honest but very lovable grandfather. A rich lady, who has disinherited her nephew because of his interest in the theater, wants to adopt Shirley. The money she pays the grandfather for the child keeps the nephew's show running. And yes, his show is "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and the year of the picture is 1850, when Uncle Tom and pore lil' Miss Eva were taken seriously. They are harder to take today.

We felt considerably sorrier for Shirley than for Eva. As sweet and attractive and talented as ever, the little girl just can't push the heavy, silly, stupid affair on. She dances a bit and sings a bit—both nicely—but cries a lot more.

Mickey Hits Again.

Such excellent people as Frank Morgan, who wears a nice, silky wig for Shirley to stroke and cry into; Helen Westley and the promising Robert Kent are entirely wasted in the picture's utter inanity. Morgan is the most put upon.

But the Palace does have an entertainment gem on its program in a new Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy. "Alpine Climbers." On their way up the peaks, Mickey, Donald Duck and Bruno, the Dog, have marvelous adventures and meet wonderful creatures. Best of all is the nobly-jowled, Red Cross St. Bernard. His tipsy duet with Bruno is one for the memory books.

There is a routine Charley Chase comedy, "Neighborhood House," and a newsreel notable for splendid naval shots in honor of Navy Day, to complete a bill which proves above all else that Shirley Temple needs some one to write a story for her.

RKO-Keith's

"MY MAN GODFREY." Universal picturization of the novel by Eric Hatch, adapted to the screen by Mr. Hatch and Morris Ryskind, co-starring Carole Lombard and William Powell, with Alice Brady, Eugene Pallette, Gail Patrick, Mischa Auer, Alan Mowbray, Jean Dixon, Robert Light, Franklin Pangborn, Grady Sutton, Ed Gargan, James Flavin and Pat Flaherty. Directed by Gregory Cava. Reviewed Friday afternoon (second week) by Sally Stroud.

It might be that the idiotic charm of this dippy farce is due to the skillful writing of the Ryskind-Hatch team, which hatched in the character of Irene Bullock a quite new type of movie heroine. Embodied in Carole Lombard, Irene is a petted, rich urchin, given to temperamental rages and enthusiasms, who has the rapt stare and high-falsetto ability of a Katharine Hepburn.

Irene discovers Godfrey (William Powell) in the city dump, sponsors him as butler for her mad, irresponsible family. There is a horse in the library, pixies in the bedroom, hilariously stupid remarks from her mother (Alice Brady), a protege who eats carnivorously and gives gorilla imitations (Mischa Aver), a snooty elder sister (Gail Patrick) and a harried outnumbered father (Eugene Pallette). To all of this, to all of them, comes Godfrey, the polite butler, who is really a Boston aristocrat. The plot may or may not be given meaning and depth by his statement that the difference between a man and a derelict is a job. But he does his job well.

The March of Time, with its customary clarity and timeliness, deals with C. I. O.-American Federation of Labor troubles, the tithe war in England and America's problem of subsidizing college football players.

Columbia

"THE GREAT ZIEGFELD." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by William Anthony McGuire, starring William Powell, supported by Louise Rainier, Myrna Loy, Frank Morgan, Fannie Brice, Ray Bolger, Harriet Hoctor, Nat Pendleton, Virginia Bruce and Ernest Cossart. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Having already played a notable engagement as a road show attraction at the National, followed by an equally distinguished popular-priced engagement at the Palace, "The Great Ziegfeld" now moves on the Loew's Columbia Theater to continue its triumphant course.

Staged with a magnitude and magnificence that no other film musical ever has been able to boast and interpreted by a cast of the first order, this subject deserves all of the handsome things that have been written and said of it.

To be sure, William Powell is no whit like Flo Ziegfeld, Luise Rainer is a far cry from Anna Held and Myrna Loy is no more like Billie Burke than you are, but these are minor considerations in the final appraisal of a picture that possesses so much of artistic merit, beauty of music, splendor of scene and distinction of personnel as to place it in a class by itself as superlative entertainment.

Not to have seen "The Great Ziegfeld" is a confession of indifference to the best the cinema has to offer.

A New Face on the Silver Sheet

Theatergoers who attend the Earle this week to participate in the sixth anniversary celebration of the present house policy will be charmed by a new personality introduced in a major role in "Stage Struck," the screen feature for the week, costarring Dick Powell and Joan Blondell. This new personality will be that of Jeanne Madden, who makes her cinema debut practically at the top. Miss Madden's likeness appears above, but gives no hint of the ingenuousness with which she imbues her role or the beauty of her voice.

'Ramona' Wins Praise for Its Natural Color

Famous Romance Filmed in Technicolor With Ace Cast at Capitol.

"RAMONA." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the novel by Helen Hunt Jackson, adapted to the screen by Lamar Trotti, featuring Loretta Young and Don Ameche, with Kent Taylor, Pauline Frederick, Jane Darwell, Katherine De Mille, Victor Kilian, John Carradine, J. Carroll Naish, Pedro de Cordoba, Claire DuBrey, Russell Simpson, William Benedict, Robert Spindola and Chief Thunder Cloud. Directed by Henry King. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

Romance unlimited is offered in "Ramona," now gracing the screen at the Capitol. While the story is in the 1870 manner, the producers doing very little fooling with the famous novel of Helen Hunt Jackson—modern Technicolor places the picture among the most interesting of the season.

The blazing golds and greens of the California valley, the vivid ranch life of the far West under the old Spanish dominance, offer a particularly fine field for Technicolor. The tanned gold of great wheat fields and the motion and color of a Latin fiesta are brought to the screen in their own natural fire and glow.

"Ramona" was Helen Hunt Jackson's successful feat of duplicating Harriet Beecher Stowe's working of the racial theme into a best-seller. It is an Indian version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with a beautiful half-breed girl as the heroine and Americans, in general, figuring as Legrees who drove the simple Red Men from their homesteads, using government red tape instead of blacksnake whips.

A Big, Black Wig.

Loretta Young, tender, young and appealing in the title role, would probably have pleased Helen Hunt Jackson herself. Her interpretation is in the ultra-romantic vein of the novel. But may we suggest that the terrific black wig she wears is more an Egyptian than Indian effect?

Don Ameche, comparative newcomer to the screen, is a puzzling quantity. As Ramona's Indian lover, he is, properly, the gentle aborigine, who gets such low-down treatment from the predatory citizens of los Estados Unidos. His meekness seems just a little out of character. May we hazard the thought Don Ameche probably will develop a great deal in his future pictures, and thus insure his staying on top of the heap.

To those who know their movies from away back, a great thrill of the picture will be the appearance of Pauline Frederick as a stiff-backed senora, very Castilian. Miss Frederick should presently be in great demand as a movie grande dame. Most character players add a great deal to a picture, but the usually splendied Jane Darwell goes right overboard with a characterization only to be described as oleaginous. John Carradine makes his small part stand out like a tree in a corn field.

The shorts include a picturization of the Virgin Islands and a newsreel that gives the audience ample opportunity for the popular sport of cheering and hissing the Presidential candidates.

Sir Al and Lady Yukons.

Sir Al Trahan and Lady Yukona Cameron present that top act of theirs with great aplomb and success. They have added a Romeo and Juliet bit this time, but, for the rest, Al just bangs the daylights out of the piano and Lady Yukona reaches enthusiastically for those high notes. It is an act that is hilarious and enjoyable, even if you've seen it before, and not to be missed on any account if you have not seen it.

Roye and Maye offer "Park Avenue Fantasy," a dance novelty adeptly staged and really telling a story.

Tito Guizar, the handsome young man from Mexico and the radio, registers his usual triumph. His initial number in Spanish was rather beautiful and he also brought back some of his old successes, including "Siboney" and "La Cucaracha."

Phil Lampkin (a bit worn out after that last strenuous week of his "Varieties," we venture) and his boys take it a bit easy with an overture composed of gleanings from Sigmund Romberg's lovely music.

Rialto

"THE THIN MAN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by Dashiell Hammett, with screen play by Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich, starring William Powell and Myrna Loy, supported by Mina Gombell, Maurine O'Sullivan and Nat Pendleton. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Reviewed (revival, second week), by W. A. Whitney.

Since it was released a number of years ago, no murder-mystery comedy-drama has quite hit the public fancy as the screen version of Dashiell Hammett's yarn of a peripatetic detective and his wife into whose ken comes a baffling homicide.

How, between cocktails, the mystery is solved is probably public property, yet knowledge of the modus operandi hardly lessens the effectiveness of the brilliant dialogue and the forthright performances not only of William Powell and Myrna Loy, but of the supporting cast as well.

The picture, will be on view through next Wednesday, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer then withdrawing all prints, due to the imminence of its sequel, "After the Thin Man."

The supporting program is composed of "Musical Memories," a color cartoon; "Grand Slam Opera," a Buster Keaton comedy; the Paramount News, and, on certain performances, a revival of the famed "Killing the Killer."

National Advertising Shows Marked Gain

New York, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—National advertising in newspapers was 26.6 per cent higher in September than in the same month of 1935, Editor and Publisher reported tonight.

Figures included newspapers in 52 leading cities.

Total newspaper advertising, the magazine said, was 12.9 per cent higher in September than in the same month of 1935.

"For the first time this year," Editor and Publisher said, "total newspaper lineage was practically as high as that in the corresponding period of 1931."

The Black Automatic

By William Byron Mowery.

SYNOPSIS.

Inspector Noel, of the Canadian Mounted, dynamites the hideout of Frank Rocco, master criminal, not knowing two women were with him. Noel is discharged, disgraced, while Rocco becomes a glorified legend. Noel receives a midnight call in his Winnipeg apartment from an engaging young stranger, who calls himself Jimmy, and asks Noel to be his partner in a secret prosperous venture and to help him outwit the gang who are pursuing him. While they are talking Jimmy is shot dead. Noel and his friend, Berst, Spencer, search for clews as to Jimmy's identity, but find none except a small picture of a beautiful girl who looks like him. Noel is suspected of implication. He sets out to clear his name and avenge Jimmy's murder. He learns the lad was a flyer and finds his monoplane, and that he was recently in Port McMurray. Noel flies the plane there, hoping to trap and learn the identity of the murder gang. At the outpost Noel introduces himself as Lanier, a prospector. He learns Jimmy's headquarters were at Manitou. Noel meets Harla De Long, a research worker for the Indian bureau, and realizes she is Jimmy's sister. Noel reluctantly agrees to fly her to Manitou. She obviously knows nothing of her brother's death. An indirect attack by the gang is made on Noel's life. Harla recognises the plane as Jimmy's and grows suspicious of Noel. Noel fears that Harla, who is a crack shot, would impulsively go gunning for the gang if he tells her the truth. On the trip to Manitou they are attacked by a mysterious monoplane and forced to land near a rocky inlet where they take refuge. Their plane is set on fire and the enemy guard against their escape.

CHAPTER 12.

When Harla calmed herself and looked out again, in the purple twilight of 10:30, four of those men were clambering out of the gray plane, with rifles and paddles, and getting into the canoes, two men to each.

As the canoes pushed away from the ship she reached for her rifle, thinking that they were going to skirl in and attack, in the failing light. But instead of coming any nearer, they started to make a wide circle around the islet, one canoe going east and the other west; and with a gasp of dismay she realized that they intended to patrol the island during the brief half-dark and see that their prisoners did not escape.

"Cowards!" she flung at them. "Six of you, with a machine gun, and you're too yellow to face one man and a girl!"

A few minutes later Noel stirred and sat up. "Hello. How's everything been on the western front?" Through the "door" of their boulder niche he caught a glimpse of the patroling canoes. The sight of them did not seem to daunt him the slightest. "Humph! All they'll get out of that is exercise and mosquito bites. We're going to leave this place, girl."

His assurance, as firm and hard as the granite rock that she leaned against, lifted Harla a little from her despair. Danger, to this companion of hers, seemed part of the day's work. The shadow of death seemed an old acquaintance of his.

Noel crept outside cautiously for juniper bark and lichen, came back, replenished their smudge.

As a piece of bark flared into tiny flame, lighting up the lean jaw and gray, unfathomable eyes of her companion, Harla found herself, for the hundredth time that day, trying to pierce the hard silence that clothed him. Who was he? No knock-about prospector, as he purported to be. Versatile and smooth, he played the role not badly, but he simply was not of the tribe. Essentially he was a city person.

A strange background it must have taken to produce so case-hardened a man—calmly sleeping when a machine gun was trained upon him. He must have run a gamut of experiences that ordinary people never even dreamed about. He had lived dangerously, on some strange frontier of life. There were frontiers in the cities. Dark and little-known frontiers. Wild lands in the hearts of men. And there this companion of hers had lived.

From his face her eyes went to the blackened skeleton of the Diomede, yonder; and an unbearable harassment welled up in her. She would never know, now, whether that ship had been Jimmy's own. Unless this man told her. And he would not speak

"Noel?"—Her anxiety and suspicions came breaking out. All day she had fought to keep her thoughts to herself, but she could no longer fight them back

"What, Harla?" He leaned forward, solicitous, toward her, and the little flame lit up his features clearly "What's the trouble, girl?"

"You!" she flashed at him "Why don't you try telling me the truth about yourself and these men? I've got a right to know. I'm into this fix as deep as you are"

"The truth?" he echoed, frowning as though perplexed. His face was a picture of bewilderment. "I don't get you."

"You do, you do get me! You lied to me about yourself. A prospector, you? You're a million miles from being one. And this feud between yourself and these men—don't tell me again that it's 'just a little bad blood over a claims dispute.' It's a war, a vicious and brutal war; and you're party to it!"

She paused for breath, then stormed on: "You haven't told me one truthful word about yourself. Won't your business in this country bear daylight? Are you afraid for your real name to be known? That's what I think. You wouldn't be hiding your name and business if you didn't have to! I've been trying to believe well of you, but I can't. You may have brains and class and all that, but I'd rather associate with an honest person, like Strap."

He winced at that. It surprised Harla that her words could cut him so deeply, when he was proof against nearly everything else. As he stirred uneasily under the lash of her charges, she was contrite for her outbreak. Into her mind came the memory of how Noel had shielded her with his own body that morning as they raced across the landwash through the spray of bullets, and of how he dashed outside that afternoon and brought her a drink of water at risk of death from that machine gun.

To her amazement Noel did not say a word in his own defense. After a few moments he said quietly: "I'm sorry you think me a liar and worse, Harla. But let it go. For the present, at least, let's try to be friends. We're in the same boat, we're into some bad white water; and we've got to go down through it together. Let's save our lives, if we can, and then"—he forced a smile—"then we can quarrel."

It was on her lips to demand point blank: "That Diomede was my brother's, and how did you get it?" But she kept silent, not mortally sure about the plane. And wariness cautioned her not to throw down all her cards. Though she could not quite believe it, there was a chance that this stony--silent companion of hers might be one of Jemmy's enemies. Might even be their superbly capable leader, whom Jimmy had mentioned.

That Diomede—there was the heart of the question. If the ship really had been her brother's, then this man was one of those enemies. He had to be. Jimmy had had no friend, no partner.

As she looked at Noel, across the little flame, knowing positively that he had lied to her about himself and his feud with these men, she felt all but certain that he was lying about the plane, too. When she thought about the fears in Jimmy's last letter and about his ominous silence since then, a shudder went through her at the memory of how she had danced last night with this man . . .

The sun finally inched out of sight, but its beautiful orange afterglow lingered. Harla turned her wrist watch to the tiny glow. On this break-away she was tacitly taking the lead, because of her bush-loping experience.

"Eleven o'clock; we ought to be leaving," she said to Noel, trying hard to be matter of fact with him. As he had said, they were in the same boat, the same desperate plight; and she had to accept partnership with him whether she liked it or not. "Before we go we'll fix a smudge that will last several hours. As long as those men see a good smudge going they'll think we're still here."

Noel slipped outside for reeds and bark and wet moss. After mixing the dry stuff with the damp sphagnum Harla arranged the material in a little, long ridge and lighted one end of it.

Reluctantly they abandoned Harla's rifle. On the dark gantlet ahead it would be too heavy a drag. They dared take nothing but two wire weaves from the blanket roll.

Glad to leave their cramped, hot prison, they crept out of the rock nest and down to the last small boulder on the west landwash.

The afterglow had faded from the high clouds, and the major stars were out. The gray plane was invisible, and the canoe patrolling that west side was only a dim mottle on the water.

While Harla unlaced her boots and slipped off her outer clothes she listened to the slapping of the nearest muskrats and beavers and fixed the direction in mind—straight toward red Mars above the western horizon.

They wrapped their boots and clothes and Noel's automatic in the blankets; made a compact little bundle, spindle shaped, so that it would push through the water easily, and laced it tightly with a boot cord.

Bent low, they slipped across the muddy landwash into the shallows.

Democratic Clubs Join As Meeting Sponsors

Frederick, Md., Oct. 16.—Eight Democratic organizations in Frederick County are sponsoring a meeting scheduled in the courthouse Monday night, when Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor is to deliver the principle address.

The sponsoring organizations are State Central Committee, County Central Committee, Young Men's Democratic Club, Young Women's Democratic League, Women's Democratic Club, Jeffersonian Club, Young Democrats and First Voters.

Jimmie Fidler In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, OCT. 17.

I like the cling-togetherness of the Stones. Fred, Dorothy, Paula and Carole are the happiest big family I know and from outward appearances Dorothy's husband, Charles Collins, is a welcome addition. They are original founders of the mutual admiration society; prime users of the motto "One for all and all for one." The moment one of the clan "strikes oil" he calls on the others to sink wells. First it was the stage; under the wing of Papa Stone all the little pebbles flocked to the footlights. Then Fred turned Westward and made good in the movies. Already Paula and Collins have followed, and it is but a question of time before Hollywood will be living in a new Stone age. The same help-one-another spirit has extended to radio; a job for one means a job for two, three or all.

JEAN PARKER.

The late Will Rogers and his family, and Billie Burke Ziegfeld and her daughter, Patricia, are practically members of this same big clan. All stand with hands outstretched to help each other. Now that Will Rogers, jr., has purchased a small newspaper in Beverly Hills, Patricia is a member of his staff, and Fred Stone occasionally writes features for "Editor Will."

Despite reports that young Rogers' heart is riveted to that of a Pasadena society girl, I will not be surprised to see his budding friendship for Patricia ripen into love. The whole lot of them—Stones, Rogers and Ziegfelds—seems more like small-town citizens than movie and stage people.

Published lists of movie salaries as released by tax officials failed to reveal that one full-fledged star until recently received only $75 a week. I refer to Jean Parker. Not long ago she was presented a new contract, but for two years previous she earned a pay check less munificent than many studio secretaries receive. Jean was serving under her original pact which started at $40 a week. Studios customarily replace such agreements with better ones, once a player has made good, but in Miss Parker's case the powers-that-be were "spanking her" for permitting her heart to rule her brain. In plainer language, she was in love and the studio did not approve.

All has been adjusted now. Jean is married, and the studio heads have sighed and forgiven. But while she was in bad favor, there often occurred the situation of the star of a picture (Jean) receiving less salary than every other member of her cast.

Katherine De Mille and Gary Cooper were talking about the many traditions that surround her father, Cecil B. "How about that story that Mr. De Mille uses bathtubs in every picture he makes?" demanded Gary. "It's crazy," Katherine said. "My father uses bathtubs less than half the directors in pictures." Jack Oakie, passing at the moment, paused to murmur, "He must smell elegant!"

All of 'Big 3' Face Tests Today

Army Choice to Defeat Harvard; Penn Threat to Princeton.

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Some of October's finest family arguments are due to sizzle on the collegiate gridiron tomorrow.

Except for the Southern delegates, who will devote a major share of their time and talent to intersectional debate, the principal football disputes this week involve conference rivals or neighbors with a bone to pick.

The old "Big Three," unbeaten thus far, moves into the danger zone simultaneously. Harvard, despite obvious improvement, does not yet appear a match for Army's sharpshooters, but Yale and Princeton rule favorites over Navy and Pennsylvania, respectively.

The well-trained Harvard line, greatly strengthened by this week's shifts, has little fear of the Army's running attack, but it does respect the passing barrages that "Monk" Meyer has set off to keep the Cadets undefeated so far this season.

The Crimson's attack has been gaining headway every week. Coach Dick Harlow has had plenty of time, due to the weak opposition his team was called upon to face in its first two games, to prepare a sound defense for Meyer's dreaded passes and if it functions well and George Roberts matches Meyer's expert kicking, the Crimson may squeeze out another tight victory to match the 14-13 triumph Barry Wood and his mates gained at West Point in 1931.

The Elis look to have more reliable defensive resources than the sailors, plus a passing attack that has so far been among the best in the East. The Navy has yet to justify early season hopes, but may pick Baltimore's Municipal Stadium and Yale as the place and subject for demonstration.

Penn Seen As Threat.

Princeton's 1935 array barely squeezed out a 1-point victory over Pennsylvania. The Tigers have had more chance to settle into their stride in advance of this year's game, but so has Penn. Whether the Quakers rebound from their setback at Yale's hands last Saturday they should test Princeton's prowess fully.

Pittsburgh's powerhouse already pointed for national distinction, cannot afford to take its intercity rival, Duquesne, lightly.

Cornell's sophomores, with two weeks of drill since being walloped by Yale, have at least an even chance to outscore their upstate rival, Syracuse, toppled from the unbeaten ranks last Saturday by Baldwin-Wallace.

Vanderbilt Buys Stock in Pimlico

By a Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 16.—Alfred G. Vanderbilt, wealthy young owner of a large string of race horses, announced today he had purchased an interest in the Maryland Jockey Club, operator of Pimlico, the State's oldest race track.

Vanderbilt, master of Sagamore Farm, near Baltimore, acquired a block of stock from Matthias L. Daiger, for many years secretary of the club and general manager of the Baltimore racing plant.

Daiger, who recently also was made treasurer to succeed the late Francis G. Riggs, referred inquiries about the stock transfer to Vanderbilt. The young sportsman said: "Yes, I have bought Mr. Daiger's stock. I don't know whether I got all of it."

Vanderbilt said he was sure his Pimlico stock acquisition did not represent a majority interest. He said he understood such an interest is held by Robert J. Walden, owner of Bowling Brook Farm, near Middleburg, Md., and vice president of the jockey club.

There were reports that Daiger had turned in his resignation as secretary-treasurer and general manager of the racing plant, but he denied it.

Fictitious Dean Gives Princeton Students Holiday

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 16 (AP).—Princeton University undergraduates were overjoyed at an "official" notice in today's Daily Princetonian which announced that "classes will be suspended tomorrow because of the Penn-Princeton game."

Dean Christian Gauss, whose name was appended to the notice, was puzzled. Hasty investigation by authorities disclosed that some as yet unidentified jokester called the Princetonian office last night, declared himself Dean Gauss, and requested insertion of the notice.

Every attempt has been made to inform the undergraduates by class and bulletin board announcements that classes will be held as usual tomorrow, but college officials expect a marked decrease in attendance, backed up by an airtight alibi.

Favored Terp Team Leaves For Va. Tilt

Accompanied by a 61-piece band, a confident contingent of rooters and President H. C. Byrd, the favored University of Maryland football team will leave Union Station at 8:30 a. m. today aboard a special train bound for its Southern Conference game with the University of Virginia.

The Terps are making their departure in a highly spirited state of mind due the recent convalescence of Billy Guckeyson. The All-Conference backfield star is virtually recovered from the effects of a badly injured hip suffered before the season started and is expected to be in the starting line-up for the first time this year.

Guckeyson's presence inflates the Maryland stock to that of the favorite by a one-touchdown margin. The schools will be resuming a series started in 1898 and resumed ten times since then. Virginia has won four games, Maryland, four, and two have been ties. The Old Liners won last year, 14 to 7.

The game will be the first conference start for Virginia and Maryland's third. The Terrapins lost to North Carolina, but defeated V. M. I. Maryland has beaten St. John's as well as Virginia Tech, while Virginia has also won two games in three starts, though losing to Navy. Hampden-Sydney and William-Mary were the victims.

Virginia will start the same line which started against Navy last week when the Middies won, 35-14.

Northwestern's Line May Upset Ohio State

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—Championship hopes of Ohio State and Northwestern in the Western Conference race rise or fall tomorrow.

The Wildcats and the Buckeyes battle at Evanston before 40,000 spectators in a game that figures to be one of the best of the "Big Ten" season.

Ohio State, with superior man power and a more versatile attack, appears to have a decided edge. The aerial and lateral pass offense which the Buckeyes have is causing fretting among the Northwestern adherents, but the Purple line, good as it appears to be, may snarl the tricky Buckeye formations as the Panthers did.

Every team in the conference will be in action tomorrow, with Wisconsin and Indiana alone going outside for competition. Purdue plays Chicago at Stagg Field; Illinois meets Iowa at Iowa City; Michigan battles Minnesota at Minneapolis, while Indiana goes to Lincoln for a combat with Nebraska, and Wisconsin battles Notre Dame at South Bend.

Michigan, twice beaten, has done nothing to indicate that it can halt the Golden Panthers, who will be striving for their twentieth consecutive victory. The Wolverines will have little but tradition with them as they face the Gophers who have not been defeated since Michigan turned the trick in 1932. The game will be witnessed by 40,000.

Purdue figures to knock over Chicago in the Maroon's initial Western Conference effort of this season.

Iowa and flashy Ozzie Simmons figure to repulse Illinois. The Hawkeyes had a week's rest, following their defeat by Northwestern, while Illinois had a tough time getting over the blasting inflicted by Southern California.

Notre Dame Stadium will be the Arena for the battle of the Horsemen when Wisconsin and Notre Dame engage in their tenth football contest. The game marks the first meeting of the two teams coached by members of the 1924 Four Horsemen backfield, Harry Stuhldreher, quarterback, and Elmer Layden, fullback. Notre Dame appears to pack too much power, but Wisconsin has been improving steadily.

40,000 to See Navy Battle Favored Yale

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 16.—Meeting Yale tomorrow in Baltimore, as a 7-to-5 underdog, the Navy enters the second stage of its 1936 schedule, during which it will clash with six of the Nation's strongest college teams. Not only is the Navy contingent keen to win its first major game, but it remembers the outcome of last year's contest at New Haven, which Yale won, 7 to 6.

Both Sneed Schmidt and Al Hessbert, touchdown scorers for the Navy and Yale last year, will start the game tomorrow. The teams will be closely related along several lines. Frank Case, Navy, and Clint Frank, Yale, are first cousins, from Evanston, Ill., and played on the high school team together. They are regularly the signal callers for their teams, but an injury has kept Case out this week, and he will not start. He is likely to get in the game later.

Bill Ingram, who will call signals in Case's place, was a teammate of Larry Kelley, Yale captain and end, and Dick Miles, at Lawrenceville. Kelley also played high school football at Williamsport, Pa., with Dave Sloan, a Navy guard, and Meridith Scott, Yale tackle, and Bill Mason, Navy change back, are cousins. The game will be quite a gathering of old friends and relations.

Practice Short.

Frank Lynch, towering left tackle, kept off the field for the last ten days by boils as well as Case, took part in the practice this afternoon, but will not start. Lynch's place will be taken by Duke Ferrara, massive New York City youth. Irwin Fike, regular end last year, will be ready to play, but Heber Player will start.

In Case's place at the start will be Art Franks, whose 200 pounds make him the Navy's heaviest back. He was a plebe tackle last year, but was converted to a back during spring practice. He has shown ability in every game this year.

Practice this afternoon was brief and secret. It was indicated, however, that it was about evenly divided between a brushing up of offensive plays which will be used tomorrow for the first time, and defense against forward passes.

Navy Concedes Nothing.

Not only has Yale been picked by most of the experts as a probable winner but it is assumed that its backfield strength is superior to that of the Navy. The Navy does not concede either. It thinks that it will win tomorrow, though Hamilton is noncommittal, and it believes that it easily matches Yale with its backs.

Yale's admittedly fine coterie of backs, Clint Frank, Al Hessberg, Dave Colwell, Charley Ewart, Dick Miles and some others, is not superior, say Navy people, to Sneed Schmidt, Bob Antrim, Frank Case, Bill Ingram, Newell Thomas, Charley Reimann, Art Franks, etc.

Schmidt and Antrim have been deservedly lauded this season, but watch Bob Antrim tomorrow. Navy people think he is about the best all-around football player they have.

Advance sale of tickets has been somewhat disappointing, and a crowd of less than 40,000 is indicated. The demand for seats on the Yale side predominates, but that's not because Yale has more friends. They want a good view of the Middies' card pictures, which can only be seen from the Yale side.

Carnegie Tech's 2d Half Drive Jolts Temple, 7-0

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 16.—Temple University's football team dropped from the ranks of the undefeated tonight when a fighting squad from Carnegie Tech upset the Owls, 7 to 0, before a crowd of 20,000.

The defeat was the first of the season for "Pop" Warner's proteges after they had run through four consecutive victories.

The game—a terrific fight from start to finish—also marked Carnegie's first triumph of the season, the Skibos having previously lost to Notre Dame and Michigan State.

The Skibos took the ball near midfield and, with powerhouse line plunges and tricky end runs, they advanced to Temple's 5-yard line. From there Lehman, right halfback, cracked the Temple line to score the only touchdown of the game. Kopcsack, quarterback, added the extra point.

Hoyas Are Held Choice Over Bucknell

Threatened by poor weather conditions and a burly Bucknell team with a habit of upsetting its host, Georgetown's undefeated gridmen swing into action this afternoon at Griffith Stadium, seeking their third straight victory at Bucknell's expense. The kick-off will be at 2:30 o'clock.

The same starting team, excepting Bob Ferrara, a line-blasting halfback who is out for the season with a broken arm, will take the field for the Hoyas. Joe Keegin, former Eastern High School and Staunton Military Academy star, has been assigned to Ferrara's vacant berth, and if he does half as well as he did against Cincinnati last week there will be no complaints.

Footing May Thwart G. U.

Coach Jack Hagerty's plans for a wide open game featuring a varied assortment of forwards, laterals and razzle-dazzle play may be thwarted by rain and heavy going. But the boys proved they are good muddlers by holding Cincinnati's heavy team scoreless in ankle-deep mud, while exhibiting a powerful drive of their own. With Jack Fleming punting and a steel-tight line defending their goal line the boys have little to fear in this respect, but putting over a score on the Bisons is a horse of another color.

On paper and a dry field Georgetown would be an 8-5 favorite, but with a soggy turf and possibly rain in prospect it will enter the fray no better than 6-5.

Bucknell arrived at 8:30 o'clock last night and is quartered at the New Colonial Hotel, rallying point for the alumni.

Chagrined, putting it mildly, by their unexpected 6-0 defeat at Miami's hands last week, the Pennsylvanians are in no mood to be trifled with, as Georgetown expected. They'll be playing for keeps

Cards Ready For DePaul Gridders

Hopeful of Avenging 9-6 Loss of '35; Foley on Injured List.

A thoroughly chastised and repentent but still powerful Catholic University football team meets the Wildcats of De Paul this afternoon in their own Brookland backyard in a game that either will break or make the Cardinals in 1936 football society. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

The 22-man riot, and it is expected to be a battle royal with no quarters asked and none given, is the brightest football attraction ever staged at Brookland, and an attendance of at least 10,000 is expected if halfway decent weather prevails. On a basis of their performance against La Salle last week and with a soggy field underfoot, the Cards will enter the fray an even-money choice, the first time in two years they have been held so low in wagering.

Catholic is entering the game minus the services of its ace quarterback and punter, "Spec" Foley, who will be out at least ten days with an injured shoulder, but this blow is not as damaging as it first appears. Bob Makofska, southpaw punter and an expert with a wet and heavy ball, and "Irish" Carroll, thriple-threat star, will attend to the punting. "Dixie" Walker, a hard-running and brainy field general, will call the plays. He is experienced and familiar with smart football and should give the team capable guidance.

Cards' Ends Weak.

On the other hand, the team is expected to be bolstered by the return of Ed Dunne and Fred Rogers, ends, who did not play last week because of injuries. Dunne will be ready to step into Capt. Hermie Schmarr's position at any time, and Rogers will replace Zeke Brown at the other flank. LaSalle ran the ends ragged last week and De Paul scouts reported the Cards unusually weak at this department. Thus, the Cats may try a few end runs themselves.

Catholic has been keyed to a pitch bordering on high C for the game, remembering the 9-6 defeat suffered at DePaul's hands last year which turned out to be the only blight on its record. This year the Cardinals are off to another flying start and have taken every precaution to guard against an upset. If it rains and the going is heavy the boys will rely on straight football, but if the footing is halfway good they'll open up with all the magic at their command.

DePaul Looks Tough.

DePaul arrived in town late yesterday afternoon and held a light workout at Brookland and if appearance could win football games this crowd would take the home team like an urchin going for an

Colonials Turn Back Invaders on 1-Yard Line in 4th Quarter

Reeves Takes Aerial From Kaufman to Tie Score; Intercepted Toss Leads to Second Goal; Fumbles Trip Arkansas.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The promise of a winning football team at George Washington University after five years of nervous uncertainty ripened into cheerful reality last night at Griffith Stadium, where a tough little band of Colonials waylaid a party of rangy Arkansas tourists and dealt them a 13-6 defeat that must be reckoned one of the season's major upsets.

A crowd of 17,000 saw the game played in the mud.

George Washington come from behind to tie the score at 6-6 late in the first period on a 13-yard pass from Joey Kaufman to Herb Reeves, after the Passing Porkers previously had assumed one-touchdown lead on Dwight Sloan's flat pass to Jim Benton.

It was the alertness of Al Holt, right end, fading back to guard against a pass that resulted in an interception of one of 32 flung by Sloan and started the Colonials on their victory march. Holt gathered in the ball on his own 45-yard mark and raced another 45 yards to the 12-yard line.

Kaufman and Turner ploughed through the line for a first down on the 1-yard line, and Turner made the rest of the distance with a vicious smash over right guard. Canning place-kicked the extra point.

Little Al Keen, a shifty and smart-running halfback, was the goat of his team's defeat after arranging for trappings for a grand finale that might have had him cast in the hero's role. Keen knifed off-tackle in the last three minutes of play and raced 48 yards to George Washington's 1-yard mark where Jay Turner reached out with a muddy paw and collared him. An Arkansas touchdown seemed imminent.

Fumbles Halt Threat.

But on the very next play the slippery ball skidded through Keen's hands and he was downed for a 5-yard loss. Two plays later, after a pass failed, the little fellow fumbled again, recovering on the 11-yard line as George Washington's fear-stricken supporters eased back into their seats with a sigh of relief.

But the invaders had still another chance and elected to gamble on a pass. It was an easy lob smack down the alley toward Jack Holt, a rangy fullback who crossed over from the right and went high in the air to take the ball. It settled in his outstretched palms like a blimp and slid off as the fans leaped to their feet with a mighty crescendo of cheers, delirious with joy.

With the unsuccessful pass went Arkansas' hope of even a tie, for with less than two minutes of play left the Colonials played a cautious and skillful game, bucking the line as precious seconds ticked away and finally punting outside at midfield.

The game ended there with the Razorbacks still trying to pass, and with Frank Merka intercepting the last as the final whistle sounded.

G. W. Shows Spirit.

But the real story of the ball game was written in the first two periods when George Washington, after getting off to a slow start, fought its way back into a tie with the grim certainty of a threshing machine, and then added another goal to seal the Southwesterners' doom.

A 15-yard penalty for clipping against George Washington paved the way for the Razorbacks' touchdown. This slight infraction of the rules put the ball back on the 6-yard line and Laufman punted out to Rawlings, who returned it 12 yards to the Colonial 30. Two plays failed before Dwight Sloan passed to Ralph Rawlings, who was chased out on the 5-yard line.

Sloan picked up 3½ yards through the line, drawing in George Washington's defense, and then heaved a lengthy pass to Jim Benton into the flat zone bordering left end that was good for a score.

Forney, D. C. Boy, Star As Baylor Frosh Win

Scoring the first touchdown of the year for the Baylor University freshman football team, Jim Forney, former Western High School star, led the yearlings to a 12-0 victory over the Rice Institute freshmen last week, according to Texas papers.

Forney led a 68-yard drive which resulted in the first touchdown when he went over from the 4-yard line. Although a star end for Western, Forney is now playing fullback for the Baylor team.

Nebraska Ex-Governors To Cheer TeamTogether

Lincoln, Nebr., Oct. 16 (AP).—From a box in Memorial Stadium tomorrow afternoon all Nebraska's living former Governors except one will lend vocal aid to the Cornhusker football team in the battle with the Hoosiers from Indiana.

With the former chief executives, all guests of Gov. and Mrs. R. L. Cochran for the day, will be their wives and Mrs. Chester Aldrich, widow of the Governor who served from 1911 to 1913. Democrats will outnumber Republicans in the party, but politics will be forgotten as the group roots for a Husker victory.

Bootmaker, at 20-1, Scores Smashing Victory in Laurel Feature

Victor Barely Misses New Record

Time Is 3-5 Second Off Track Mark; Gold Seeker Is 5th.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 16.—The white and green colors of E. R. Bradley, once prominent in Maryland racing, were borne to their second victory of the fall season hereabouts when Bootmaker scored a smashing and surprising victory in the running of the Annapolis purse, today's feature race. With Jockey Joe Renick booting for all he was worth, Bootmaker disposed of Sobriety in the last sixteenth to have a length and a half advantage over the A. G. Vanderbilt hope at the end of the mile and a sixteenth contest. Chasar, half of Mrs. Emil Denemark's entry, was third in the field of nine, two lengths from the place money.

The race was the fastest of the meeting, Bootmaker being only three-fifths of a second off the track record while running the route in 1:44. Despite the fact that a drizzle fell, the track was lightning fast. The crowd of 9,000 installed Gold Seeker, one that could do no better than fifth, in the favorite role with Bootmaker getting only a scattered backing. He paid a $39.50 mutuel.

Sobriety was able to get to the front in the dash to the first turn. Booming Guns was closest to the pace with Bootmaker next. Renick did not ask the Whichone gelding for additional speed until turning for the stretch. The four-length lead enjoyed by Sobriety then melted and Bootmaker went on to draw away.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's Prairie Dog scored a popular victory in the opening race of today's program. The Bull Dog colt was backed into odds-on favoritism and romped away with the test for maiden colts and geldings. Ridden by Jockey Jackie Westrope, Prairie Dog had a little trouble shaking off Mr. Whitehall and then drew out to finish a length and a half ahead of the Glen Riddle Farm's Muscatine. Third money in the field of a dozen went to Walter M. Jeffords' Matey. The winner paid a $3.90 mutuel and ran the six furlongs in 1:13 2-5.

Nose Finish in Chase.

The oddity of a nose finish in a steeplechase event developed in the second race. Vezda, owned by Hugh Bancroft, jr., was given the verdict over Troyer, the property of Mrs. James Park, after the judges had consulted the camera negative. Third money, without a shadow of a doubt, went to F. Ambrose Clark's Sunny Thoughts. The chief battle for the purse was between Vezda and Troyer from the beginning, with the former coming from behind on the flat after being headed by his rival at the final jump. The race was marked by three mishaps. Wrackonite, heavily played, lost rider at the ninth fence. Black Feather fell at the twelfth fence and broke a leg. At the same barrier Budget Boy, which had been running forwardly, also crashed. The winner paid a $7.70 mutuel and ran the 2 miles in 3:58 1-5.

The Millsdale's Stable's Grey Streak came up on the outside to defeat Muggins a head in the third race, a sprint over the third, a half mile course. Saracen was third, a half length away. The camera was again called into action, but the Grey Streak bettors, many of them, were in line before the result was made official. Saracen set the pace to the sixteenth pole, where Grey Streak forged ahead along with Muggins. The last named was off poorly and showed a gallant but futile effort. The winner paid an $11 mutuel and was clocked in 1:12 4-5.

Glad Wings Pays $9.20.

Glad Wings, owned by Mrs. F. A. Carreaud, came through with a stretch drive that accounted for the chief money in the fourth race, which drew a field of 14 juveniles foaled in Maryland. Ridden by Jockey E. Tucker, Glad Wings wore down Balko's Maid to take the verdict by a length. A like margin away came Chalphone to be third. The winner was well played at a $9.20 mutuel and stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:13 1-5.

Aladdin's Dream came from far back to win the sixth race at 1 1-16 miles. Sluggish as usual in the early running and last at the far turn, the Crusader gelding, owned by E. J. Regan, came through with a remarkable drive to defeat Chimney Top by a neck. The latter, which had set a brisk pace from the start, barely lasted to take second money by a head from Xandra. The winner ran the distance in 1:46 1-5 and was heavily supported at a $5.50 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRAIRIE DOG, $3.90, $3.00, $2.80; MUSCATINE, $11.60, $6.80; MATEY, $4.10.

PRAIRIE DOG, rushed to the front at once, was steadied along while running with MR. WHITEHALL, took command after being headed approaching the stretch and easily held sway to the end. MUSCATINE gained steadily throughout the running and closed willingly under a drive. MATEY came with good courage in the closing stages. GREY GOLD tired in the final eighth after racing forwardly. MR. WHITEHALL ran on the outside of PRAIRIE DOG, but tired suddenly midway of the stretch. NOBLE BOY went evenly.

SECOND RACE—About two miles. Purse, $1,000. The Marlboro steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:04½. Off at 2:06. Winner, H. Bancroft, jr.'s ll. b. g. (4), by Zev—Dame. Trained by W. B. Streett. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:58 1-5 (14 jumps).

†P. Mellon-R. E. McConnell entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—VEZDA, $7.70, $5.20, $3.80; TROYER, $8.40, $7.00; SUNNY THOUGHTS, $8.90.

VEZDA, taken in hand after leading to the seventh fence, was reserved off the pace of TROYER and BUDGET BOY, ran head and head with TROYER after being placed to a drive and closed with excellent speed on the flat to be up in the final strides. TROYER, steadied along in front, fought it out willingly after fencing well throughout. SUNNY THOUGHTS worked his way to contention after a mile, but hung. JOHN POINDEXTER could not reach contention at any stage. BILLY BOB and DANGAY were outrun. WRACKONITE lost rider at the ninth fence. BUDGET BOY and BLACK FEATHER fell at the twelfth fence.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:36½. Off at 2:41. Winner, Millsdale Stable's br. or gr. g. (4), by Pompey—Jezebel. Trained by A. Pelletert. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:12 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREY STREAK, $11.00, $6.30, $4.20; MUGGINS, $7.20, $5.30; SARACEN, $4.70.

GREY STREAK, sent to the outside for racing room while within striking distance of the leaders, came with a rush while vigorously handled to win going away. MUGGINS, off poorly, was hard used to gain a contending position, wore down SARACEN, but could not resist the winner. SARACEN gained command after a furlong, shook off challenge of SCUDDER and tired gradually in the late stretch. BOMB GOOD raced wide all the way and closed willingly. COUNT RAE, in trouble repeatedly, could not gain in the stretch. CRUISING went evenly and showed a good effort.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $27.70.

WEATHER, DRIZZLING. TRACK, FAST.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (foaled in Maryland). Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:09. Off at 3:13. Winner, Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's b. f. (2), by Light Brigade or Happy Time—Mary Hume. Trained by C. A. Roles. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLAD WINGS, $9.20, $5.20, $3.10; BALKO'S MAID, $7.10, $3.90; CHALPONE (entry), $2.40.

GLAD WINGS, forwardly placed from the beginning, was steadied along in close pursuit of the pace of BALKO'S MAID entering the stretch and gradually wore down rival to be going away at the end. BALKO'S MAID was rushed to the front after the break, saved ground and finished willingly, but was no match for the winner. CHALPONE, shuffled back after the break, gained with a rush on the swing for the stretch and closed courageously. MAX B. pressed the pace of BALKO'S MAID, but faltered in the early stretch. STORY TIME came up outside to reach contention at the far turn, but could not better position. MAY MUSIC had good early speed.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100. The Annapolis. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:39. Off at 3:39½. Winner, E. R. Bradley's br. g. (3), by Whichone—Battlecrake. Trained by H. J. Thompson. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:12 4-5, 1:37 2-5, 1:44.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOOTMAKER, $39.50, $14.20, $4.90; SOBRIETY, $6.00, $3.80; CHASAR (entry), $3.30.

BOOTMAKER, under steadying restraint while close to the pacesetter, rallied when placed to energetic handling entering the stretch and was drawing clear of SOBRIETY at the end. The latter had speed to go to the front at once, drew out to a long lead, was not given a breathing spell and tired in the final eighth. CHASAR, outrun for a half, went to the outside for racing room and closed smartly. TWO BOB improved his position with a sharp move leaving the backstretch, but hung thereafter. GOLD SEEKER dropped out of it during the early running and made up some ground. NIGHTCAP saved ground and had no excuses. MANTAGNA was in tight quarters along the backstretch and failed to rally. BOOMING GUNS had early speed.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:03. Off at 4:05½. Winner, E. J. Regan's br. g. (6), by Crusader—Pen Rose. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:15 1-5, 1:40, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALADDIN'S DREAM, $5.50, $3.60, $2.70; CHIMNEY TOP, $11.70, $7.50; XANDRA, $3.10.

ALADDIN'S DREAM, allowed to settle into best stride and a trailer to the far turn, came wide for racing room entering the stretch and closed with a belated rush to be up in the final 20 yards. CHIMNEY TOP, into command at the start, and was hard ridden throughout, tiring in the final sixteenth. XANDRA was hard ridden to reach contention, was closest to the pace on the swing for the stretch, and closed willingly under pressure. QUIET PLEASE, close up for a quarter, dropped back and came again. KIEVAN could not threaten at any stage. WATERMAN and GOOD FLAVOR were never factors.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:39. Off at 4:41½. Winner, F. M. Ryan's b. or br. f. (4), by Ariel—Petie. Trained by R. Foster. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 4-5, 1:14, 1:40, 1:44 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SLEEK, $9.90, $5.10, $3.10; MINNA, $50.30, $12.90; SILVERY CLOUD, $2.50.

SLEEK assumed command at once, was steadied along in front and easily held MINNA safe in the final drive. The latter, off slowly, was in tight quarters at the far turn and came with a rush on the inside when clear. SILVERY CLOUD came between horses to reach contention at the far turn, but could not menace. MOON PENNY dropped far out of it and came with a belated rush in the closing stages. GOANTELL could not threaten. QUE GATO was taken up after a half.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:09. Off at 5:09½. Winner, T. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INFERNO LAD, $8.00, $4.90, $3.40; MAD FRUMP, $9.80, $6.00; CREDULOUS, $3.90.

INFERNO LAD, forwardly placed from the start, came around the leaders to go to the front approaching the stretch and had enough left to stave off MAD FRUMP. The latter improved his position with a rush leaving the backstretch, gained steadily in the early stretch, but hung at the end. CREDULOUS raced on the inside throughout, but was tiring at the finish. PEEDEEQUE was hard ridden to take a brief lead and tired gradually. SUN SWEEP dropped out of it slowly after setting the early pace. THE MAULER came between horses to close courageously.

Gonzaga High Eleven Wins From Roosevelt, 14 to 6, in Rain

Purple Takes Early Lead On Fumble

By John R. Vosburgh.

While several hundred hardy spectators defied a steady downpour, Gonzaga High upset a favored Roosevelt High eleven yesterday in Roosevelt Stadium, 14 to 6.

It was Gonzaga's first victory in four starts against the public high schools and stamped Roosevelt as a unanimous choice for last place in the forthcoming interhigh series. Central, Eastern and Tech all have victories over Gonzaga this season.

Of interest chiefly because of the line it was to give on Roosevelt's series prospects, the game brought little of an encouraging nature for Roosevelt supporters. The only Rough Rider touchdown came against Gonzaga's second stringers. Roosevelt defeated Gonzaga, 13 to 6, last year.

Fumble Leads to Score.

Gonzaga scored in the first quarter after Quarterback Kollmyer, of Roosevelt, had fumbled as he tried to kick from his 4-yard line. He recovered the ball, but it was fourth down and Gonzaga took possession. Jim Ellis hit the right side of the line and went over standing up. Frank Fenwick, all-high tackle, place kicked the extra point.

Roosevelt made its big first-half bid in the second period when it went to the Gonzaga 20-yard line after a poor Gonzaga punt, but Ray Frederick dropped a pass and Gonzaga recovered and kicked out of danger.

The second Gonzaga touchdown came in the final quarter when Sonny Hartman, a big worry to Roosevelt all day, cut through the Roosevelt right tackle and slithered 21 yards for the score. Wiles, a freshman, took over the extra point on an end run.

Score Against Subs.

Roosevelt began going places against Gonzaga's second stringers whom Coach Orrel Mitchell was sending in freely. Frederick, a newcomer from the West, where he learned his football, was the big threat and led a 60-yard march, which he culminated with a 25-yard run for a touchdown. Hudson's place-kick was wide.

It was Roosevelt's third defeat in three starts. The Alumni and Bullis Prep took a decision apiece from the Rough Riders.

this afternoon and no Hilltop alumnus can remember the day when Bucknell could be rated a push-over.

Coach Clyde Mylin announced last night that his starting backfield will include at least two and possibly three sophomores. One will be Herb Bowman, ace passer, punter and all-around handy man, who has been out since before the opening game with a broken hand. Lou Tomasetti and Marty Quick, halfbacks, and Bill Lane, quarterback, are the other first year men certain of getting in.

Lateral Pass Nets Gonzaga Gain Against Roosevelt

Jim Ellis (arms extended) has just tossed a lateral pass which will be caught by his fellow backfield man, O'Brien, who is out of the picture, to score a substantial gain for Gonzaga against Roosevelt High yesterday. Such passing was partially responsible for Gonzaga's 14-6 victory over the Rough Riders.

Intercity Pin Circuit Is Organized

John Y. Dennis, former president of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, and now secretary of the Norfolk City Duckpin Association, announces the organization of the Virginia Intercity Duckpin loop. The newly formed loop consists of four teams, two representing Richmond and two Norfolk.

The league consists of the strongest group of bowlers south of the Capital and is scheduled to open activities on Saturday, October 31.

Arrangements are being made to have the winner of the league meet the champion team of the Baltimore-Washington circuit for the Southern Intercity League championship.

Ida Simmons, first ranking feminine bowler of the country, is planning a number of exhibition matches throughout the duckpin centers of the South and is scheduled for an appearance here at the Silver Spring alleys where she will meet Lucile Young, Capital star, in a 20-game match. Following the Oriole Sweepstakes in Baltimore on Saturday, October 24, the Norfolk star will engage Audrey Mullaney, of the Monumental City, in a five-game exhibition match at the Baltimore Recreation runways. She is then scheduled for a trip to Atlanta, Ga., for a week's instruction.

A season record set was chalked up last night in the Ladies Independent League last night at Arcadia which is expected to withstand the challenges of the feminine stars in the league for a longe time. I. Greene, of the Ramblers, achieved the mark when she toppled the maples for a 372 set, aided by a top game of 141. The Ramblers annexed game laurels with 542 and Kann's carried away total pinfall with 1,504.

McNally (Finance) and Hipkins (Secretaries) shared the individual laurels in the Maritime Commission League, shooting a 143 game and 342 set, respectively. Finance's game and set of 573 and 1,579 topped the team efforts.

Langdon Defeated, 12-0, at Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 16.—St. Paul's School football team executed two long runs in the first half to defeat Langdon High of Washington, 12 to 0, this afternoon.

The first touchdown was made midway of the initial period, with Eddie Morse intercepting an alien toss and sprinting 70 yards for the 6 points. Jack Poehlman tallied the second on a 50-yard run after receiving an enemy kick at the start of the second. He dodged through the entire Langdon team in engineering the dash, but was forced to veer to the extreme left side of the field and crossed the goal inches from the side lines. Both tries for conversions were blocked.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Navy-Yale—The Bulldogs have bark, bit and what it takes this season. The Middies will win the pre-game exercises and the between-the-halves show, but Yale figures to win the ball game. Until Navy brushes up on its pass defense, one vote for Yale.

Harvard-Army—Nice people, those Harvards, and doing very well lately, but slightly outclassed today. At press time last night, Monk Meyer was still a bona-fide member of the Army backfield and, because the team with Monk Meyer is the team that usually wins, one fearless ballot for Army.

POVICH.

Penn-Princeton—I am tired of picking set-ups. Princeton looks like the winner on paper, but the game will be played on turf, possibly wet turf. And I have a well-defined hunch that the Tigers are not the potent package they were last season. So, with a prayer—Penn.

Catholic U.-De Paul—C. U. will not be trifling today with the team that last year handed 'em their only blot on their—ah, er, escutcheon. I believe it is called. Neither will De Paul be out for an airing, after a whale of a battle—Catholic U.

Georgetown-Bucknell—Time was when this one would be tough to pick, but not this year. Georgetown is charging on to greater fame and Bucknell teams of late have been patterned on the sports-for-sport's-sake idea. With no hesitation whatsoever it is, then, Georgetown.

Maryland-Virginia—Football at Virginia is picking up smartly, but the Cavaliers started from scratch. Bill Guckeyson will be in Maryland's lineup today, and Virginia will have to catch him. I don't think it can be done—By Virginia. So, Maryland, by acclamation.

Colgate-Tulane—The Red Raiders vs. the Green Wave. Colgate's hocus-pocus and black magic behind the line is no longer the effective novelty. This is no time to hop off a winner, so, with a firm belief in the power of straight football, one confident ballot for Tulane.

Duke-Georgia Tech—Somebody's Rose Bowl dreams will crash here and methinks it will not be Duke's. Yeah, I know all about that 34-0 beating Tech handed Kentucky last week, but they can't intimidate us. With the utmost of confidence in Wallace Wade, one forthright vote for Duke.

Minnesota-Michigan—Barring plague, pestilence, locusts or train wrecks, one nonchalant vote for Minnesota. This is the greatest mismatch of the Big Ten season, and if it were a prizefight the authorities would stop it.

Notre Dame-Wisconsin—This is the stage of the season when Notre Dame teams begin to step out. The Badgers are coming along, but a close score will be a moral victory for 'em. Incidentally, I never vote against Notre Dame.

Northwestern-Ohio State—Here's one I'd like to duck, but whathaell. That power at Ohio State is no myth even if Pitt did knock 'em off. On the inevitable other hand is a tough Northwestern team that knocked over Notre Dame last season. You guessed it—Ohio State.

Chicago-Purdue—Little Butler picked this one for me last week when it held Chicago to a 6-6 tie. On the face of those figures, Chicago has no right in the same arena with Purdue. So, with a boop-boop—Purdue.

Indiana-Nebraska—Any team that can hold Minnesota scoreless is good enough for me, and that's what Nebraska did last week. With a bow to Bo McMillan at Indiana, I am constrained to cast a fearless ballot for the Cornhuskers.

Iowa-Illinois—Here's a tight fit. Even an alumnus would be wary of this one. But I am forgiving Illinois for that awful beating by Southern Cal. Hence, one wobbly vote for the Illini.

Alabama-Tennessee—Another of the selector's delights. Tennessee has beaten only Chattanooga and Alabama hasn't lost a game. This is no time to hop off a winner—Alabama.

Georgia-Rice—Although I remember the 47-7 shellacking L. S. U. dealt Georgia last Saturday night, I'm picking Georgia—hesitantly—chiefly because the Bulldogs always are hard to beat in Athens, and also because I can't get over the fact that Harry Mehre's teams rarely lose two games in a row.

Holy Cross-Manhattan—Don't be misled by the Crusaders' defeat of Dartmouth. Those are tough Irishers from New York they are meeting today. But, nevertheless, one timorous vote for Holy Cross.

California-U. C. L. A.—The Golden Bears didn't fail me last week, and neither did U. C. L. A., for that matter. But I picked the Uclans to lose and it's getting to be a habit.

Washington-Oregon State—Washington, nufced.

Southern California-Washington State—Out of this game will probably emerge the defender of the West's Rose Bowl hopes. Southern Cal. has a habit of emeging as the defender of the West's Rose Bowl hopes. That's who I like.

Results Amaze Priest as Cronin Relies on Prayer, Not Profanity

The story of Joe Cronin's sudden switch from profanity to prayer while his team was having rough going during the past season was told last night by Bill Werber, Red Sox third baseman, at the second report meeting of the Y. M. C. A. membership campaign workers.

JOE CRONIN.

The Red Sox, according to Werber, were playing in Washington, and Cronin had been having trouble at the plate. With two strikeouts behind him, Cronin was standing by the Boston dugout swearing elaborately as his turn came to bat with a man on base.

Sitting in the stands behind Cronin was Father O'Donnell, a priest and personal friend, who overheard some of the remarks of the Boston manager.

"Come here, Joe," the priest called. "You've been swearing all day without results. Let's try a prayer."

Cronin agreed, Werber said, and prayed for a moment with the priest. Then he stepped up to the plate and hit the ball into the leftfield bleachers for a home run.

The priest, an ardent baseball fan, jumped up to watch the ball, and when he saw it carry into the stands, dropped back into his seat exclaiming: "Good Lord!"

Virginia Cubs Tie, 6-6, With Md. Frosh

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 16.—The Cavalier freshman gridders battled a hefty Maryland first-year team to a 6-to-6 tie in a smartly played game here today, passes figuring in both scores despite driving rain.

The Old Line Cubs jumped into the lead early in the second quarter after recovering a fumble on Virginia's 35-yard line. Carliss and Mundorff worked the ball up to the 20, where Carliss unhooked a short pass to Beamer, who slipped over from the 15.

The Cavalier youngsters, aided by Gillette's fine kicking, repelled other Maryland thrusts until a break came their way early in the final period. After a fumble recovery, the Virginians set sail from Maryland's 37. Bob Williams passed to Southall for a 15-yard gain, and then tossed a short one behind the line to Gillette, who sprinted 22 yards for the tying score.

Wilson Downs St. Alban's, 12-0, In Debut

In the shadow of the Cathedral tomb of its namesake, Woodrow Wilson High School made its gridiron debut yesterday against the St. Alban's eleven on the latter's field and came through with a 12-to-0 victory.

The Tigers completely outplayed the crippled but scrappy St. Alban's team in every department.

With Dave Tate and Nick Cokinas carrying the ball, Wilson immediately marched down the field from their own 42-yard line to score the first touchdown. Tate skirted end for the tally.

The home club was forced to take the defensive from the start and held several times when backed nearly to the goal line. In the second period, Stevens, on an end-around play reeled off 20 yards to the St. Alban's 30-yard stripe, but the winners were checked by the line-backing of Fullback Cary Grayson, jr.

Following the third period a punting affair between Tate and Munston, Bill Garland, sub for Spanns, toted the ball to the 2-yard line and first down. But it was four tries later before he succeeded in scoring, so furiously were the light linesmen of the Massachusetts avenue school fighting. He sneaked through a hole at right tackle to make the score 12 to 0. Again the try for conversion was wide.

Central Halts St. John's Prep, 34 to 13

Victors Roll Up 20 Points in First Quarter in Rainy Tune-up.

In a driving rain which failed to drive away some 800 spectators, Central High trounced St. John, 34 to 13, yesterday in Central Stadium for its third win in four starts. It was the final tune-up test for Central before it opens defense of its interhigh title next week against Eastern.

Rolling up a 20-0 lead in the first quarter, Central outclassed St. John's so obviously that Coach Hardy Pearce rushed in his second and third string teams before the half was over.

Bill Wooten, Pearce's triple-threat ace, scored the first touchdown from the 1-yard line after a steady drive from midfield in which Billy Vermillion was the shining light. Desperate attempts of the Johnnies to score in the opening period brought another Central touchdown when Vermillion intercepted a long heave by Rehkopf and raced 70 yards for a touchdown.

Charlie Jones, All-High guard, took another of Rehkopf's passes in the same period and chugged 25 yards for the third touchdown and repeated the performance in the second quarter, stepping 49 yards to score.

St. John's efforts to score brought two touchdowns in the third period against Central's reserves, the first one coming on a pass from Rehkopf to Holland for 35 yards and the second on a pass from Rehkopf to Giebel with which the latter ran 50 yards to score. It was a 35-yard pass.

After watching his bench-warmers yield two touchdowns, Pearce inserted his first-stringers again and it wasn't long before Bill Ickes raced around his own left end for 35 yards and the fifth touchdown.

It was obvious that Central could have rolled up virtually any score it pleased but the school's 95-0 win over Roosevelt some years again has forestalled a re-enactment.

LOU GEHRIG.

Writers Vote Gehrig Most Valuable

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 16.—For the second time in his remarkable career, Lou Gehrig, burly first baseman of the New York Yankees, today was named the American League's "most valuable player" by the Baseball Writers Association.

Leader of one of the most vicious team batting attacks in the history of the game, Gehrig topped the league with 49 homers, batted .354, drove in 152 runs, ran his stretch of consecutive games to 1,941, and led the Yankees to American League and World Series championships.

Luke Appling, brilliant Chicago White Sox shortstop and New American League batting champion, was second in the voting. Earl Averill, Indians, was third, and Charley Gehringer, Tigers, fourth.

Three Others Won Twice.

Only three other players have received the award twice: Mickey Cochrane, Tigers, 1928-1934; Walter Johnson, Senators, 1913-1924, and Jimmie Fox, Red Sox, 1932-1933. Gehrig won the award for the first time in 1927.

The selection was made by a committee of eight writers, one from each city in the American League. Each member of the committee picked his ten best players, the first player on each list getting 10 points, the second 9, the third 8, and so on.

Under this system, Gehrig was first on four of the eight lists and totaled 73 points. Appling was given 48 points and Gehringer, who received the other first place vote, 39.

Following Gehringer on the list were Bill Dickey, Yankee catcher, 29 points; Joe Kuhel, Senators, and Vernon Kennedy, White Sox, 27, and Joe DiMaggio, Yankees, 26.

Others who received five or more votes were Tommy Bridges, Tigers, 25; Hal Trosky, Indians, 19; Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox, 16; Gerald Walker, Tigers, 14; Beau Bell, Browns, 10; Wally Moses, Athletics, 7, and Bob Grove, Red Sox, who won the award in 1931, 5.

Friends Downed By G. U. Prep, 13-0

Georgetown Prep, under the guidance of Coach Ed Hargaden, former Georgetown University athlete, got off to a flying start yesterday by downing Friend's School, 13-0 on a rain-soaked field.

The Georgetown attack was led by its little halfback, Hagan, who wiggled and fought his way through the Friends' line time after time, to account for more than half of Georgetown yardage. He was the main factor in both of the Prep-men's touchdowns.

17,000 Watch G. W. Defeat Arkansas

Colonials' Air Offensive and Defensive Play Brings Victory.

B. A. Owen, who is well versed in the art of adding extra points, came in to try for this one and missed by the width of a city block.

After that, the Colonials took charge.

In actual statistics Arkansas outplayed the downtown school, outgaining it from scrimmage, 118 yards to 99, rolling up 12 first downs to George Washington's nine, but they still haven't gotten around to paying off on statistics. It's a mighty good thing they haven't, too, for in this instance the figures are misleading.

Johnson Winner In Columbia Golf

Harvey Johnson, 18-year-old Georgetown University golf star and defending champion, will meet the veteran Miller B. Stevinson today in the final round of the annual Columbia Country Club championship.

Johnson eliminated L. W. Laudick, 3 and 2, to gain the ultimate round while Stevinson moved into the final by defeating Paul J. Frizzell, 4 and 3.

Third flight—W. B. Putnam defeated D. R. Elmore, 4 and 3; H. G. Nichols defeated O. P. Vogel, 1 up.

Fourth flight—G. H. Mattingly defeated C. D. Bills, 4 and 3; W. S. Hoyt defeated R. W. Fisher, 1 up, in 19 holes.

Fifth flight—R. J. Lindquist defeated M. M. Willis, 1 up; C. S. Abell defeated A. H. Wilson, 3 and 2.

Seventh flight—H. C. Prick defeated E. J. Dowd, 2 and 1; Elmer Plather defeated Dr. A. S. Wolfe, 2 and 1.

Championship consolations—W. W. Hinshaw defeated H. King Cornwell, 3 and 4; Craig McKee defeated E. A. Merkle, 6 and 5.

Business Rise Is Maintained On All Fronts

Auto Outlook and Sharp Retail Trade Gains Favorable Factors.

New York, Oct. 16.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"Weekly business statistics continue highly favorable, with virtually all lines reporting rising trends or less than seasonal declines. Attention is still centered on Detroit, as the automobile manufacturers get under way on 1937 models. The trade is highly optimistic over next year's prospects, and well-posted authorities look for further definite improvement in production and sales. The consensus is that total assemblies in 1937 will show about a 10 per cent increase over 1936, to roughly say 5,000,000 cars or better.

"As the automobile industry plays an important part in determining the level of business generally, the implications of the prospective higher rate of assemblies next year are obvious.

"An encouraging development was the sharp rebound in retail trade in September, with indications that the uptrend has been extended thus far in the current month. Indeed, preliminary reports suggest that Columbus Day business was the best for that date since 1929. The current strong demand provides definite basis for the belief that retail trade will enjoy the most favorable Christmas season since the depression set in.

"Other statistics on business including those on power production, steel activity and freight carloadings continue to reflect a strong underlying uptrend. Movement of freight has reached the highest level in over six years, with weekly loadings holding well above the 800,000 mark. Although loadings will reach their seasonal peak before the end of October, comparisons with year-earlier figures will continue favorable through the rest of 1936."

General Motors Sales Set Overseas Record

New York, Oct. 16.—Sales of General Motors cars and trucks to dealers in the overseas markets during September totaled 23,712 units, representing an increase of 3.5 per cent over the volume in September of last year and a decrease of 5.0 per cent under the volume in August of this year.

In the first nine months of 1936, sales totaled 247,639 units. This total represented the largest volume for the correspouding period of any year in the history of General Motors overseas operations, and was 14.6 per cent over the volume of 216,062 in the first nine months of 1935.

Baldwin Locomotive Orders Twice Year Ago

Philadelphia, Oct. 16 (AP).—The Baldwin Locomotive Works announced today that the dollar value of orders received in September by the company and its subsidiaries was $2,532,734, as compared to $1,140,788 in September, 1935.

The month's bookings brought the total for the first nine months of 1936 to $23,902,050, as compared with $12,827,571 in the same period last year.

Construction Scores Sharp September Rise

Average Tendency for Month Is Decline of 10 Per Cent.

New York, Oct. 16.—Sharp gains in a few large cities in the Middle Atlantic, South Atlantic and East Central sections lifted the September total of building permit values at all cities 6.6 per cent above the August total. The usual change for the period is a decrease of close to 10 per cent.

The volume of permits issued in 215 cities of the United States during September reached the sum of $88,791,762, compared with $83,109,753 in August, and $47,479,944 in September, 1935, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. The increase as compared with September last year amounted to 87.0 per cent.

Permits issued in the five boroughs of New York City had a total value of $17,331,441, as against $12,095,174 in August and $9,227,037 in September, 1935. This represented increases, respectively, of 43.3 and 87.8 per cent.

In the 214 cities outside of the Metropolis, permit values for September aggregated $71,460,321, a gain of 0.6 per cent over the $71,014,579 figure recorded for August, and a rise of 86.8 per cent as compared with the 1935 comparative of $38,252,907.

Curb Prices Rise In Active Bidding

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—With active bidding against an apparent scarcity of stock, numerous industrial specialties shot up 1 to 9 points in the curb market today. The advance was uniform with the trading leaders contributing gains of fractions to around 3 points. Final prices were at minor recession from the top levels.

Royal Typewriter soared up 9 points on odd-lot dealings. Detroit Steel Products rose 4⅛ to 47 and Aluminum Co. of America showed a similar gain at 133.

In the list showing advances of fractions to around 3 points were Newmont, Sherwin-Williams, American Potast and Chemical, New Jersey Zinc, Pepperell, American Cyanamid "B," American Light & Traction, Pan American Airways and Electric Bond & Share. Transactions totaled 466,000 shares against 418,000 yesterday.

$50,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 273-day bills, and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m. on Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance With Broadly Distributed Gains in Active Trading; Wheat Higher.

New York, Oct. 16.—On the largest sales volume of the week, around 2,100,000 shares, the stock market for the first time in several days closed with rising prices. Gains were general if moderate. Bonds also advanced in nearly all sections. December wheat rose half a cent to 116⅝ cents a bushel.

Stocks reached their best prices in the final hour, when the gains were in the majority. Railroad issues finally made an appeal, based on rising car loadings and earnings, which took effect upon the Wall street mind, and most of them moved ahead. Sales volume among the rails was not particularly heavy. Great Northern and Union Pacific rose 1 to 2 points respectively. Central advanced before the close. Baltimore & Ohio preferred recovered a point.

Public utility issues were firmer by good fractions. Some of the preferred were listed 1 to 3 points. Bakery and airplane shares rose to prominence. Since each day adds to the evidence that, come what may, the farmers are going to be protected to the last penny of the taxpayers' money, and no matter how steeply the cost of food rises this winter, more buying turns toward the mail orders and farm implements.

Amusements Attract.

Most attention was given Montgomery Ward. Case weakened a little after an early gain. Deere and Harvester moved up sharply. Speculators tried for turns in the steels, metals, motors and amusement shares. Paramount issues were pushed forward. Warners also were active.

In the steel group the average gain was a point. U. S. Steel preferred, virtually certain to get most of the corporation's net earnings before the end of the year, moved up to the best price in five years. Chrysler set a 2-point pace for the motors. General climbed a point.

In the metal group the silver shares extended their gains by as much as 2 points. Smelters and Cerro reached new high prices. Anaconda and Kennecott were the best of the coppers. Homestake was an exception in a firm gold group and dropped more than 8 points An erratic performance was given by Superior Steel. The stock was sold at a new high price in the early dealings. Then it broke 3 points, later recovering to around its previous closing price.

Individual stock features were Equitable, Anchor Cap, Crosley, Fajardo Sugar (in the gossip for an extra dividend on estimated earning of $7 a share), First National Stores, Libbey-Owens-Ford, Macy, National Supply, Remington Rand, Transue & Williams, White Motor and Worthington.

Everything Under Control.

Foreign exchanges were interesting only to those who are taking part in discussions of the eventual levels at which stabilization will be attempted. Speculation obviously is playing but a small part in the movement of currencies under the control of enormous stabilization funds managed by the governments of the countries concerned, and no rapid change in commercial demand seems to be taking place. A feature of the day's quoted movements was the stopping of the guilder's rise on intervention of the Dutch control fund. Dollars were virtually unchanged against sterling and francs.

Trade Is Maintained.

Week-end business news was about as favorable as it has been for some time, and so far as general trade is concerned it seems doubtful if even an adverse election result could definitely stop the recovery that has been in progress ever since the spring of 1935, when the Supreme Court put a decided end to the worst (and most cherished) part of the New Deal program. Business progress has been continuous from the date of death for NRA, and it has quickened its pace with each succeeding blow to the attempt to upset the country's established economic and monetary customs.

Railroad freight car loadings, as indicated by earlier reports, increased last week to a new top for the year, and to the highest level since 1930. Retail trade also was reported as on the rise. Corporation earnings statements now coming in for the third quarter are proving that the past three months was fully as favorable, with seasonal considerations, as were the preceding periods, and that gains over last year were substantial. Nothing so far has taken place to warrant pessimism over a possible slump in the remainder of the year.

Elusive Bets.

This betting business in Wall Street seems to be a political affair for fair. One well-vouched-for story is that the recently quoted increase to 3 to 1 in the odds on Roosevelt followed the raising of $200,000,000 as a contribution to the Roosevelt campaign fund. The money, it was suggested by the campaign managers, might be better used to wash up the betting odds on the Stock Exchange than in any other manner. Accordingly so-called betting commissioners quoted 3 to 1. Inquiries usually found the bets already covered, just as traders occasionally find "stock ahead of you" when they inquire about a sale. One actual bet of $25,000 was made by a brokerage firm yesterday against $75,000 for Roosevelt. The same firm has had all day yesterday, and still has today, $75,000 more to bet at the same odds, in full or odd lots, but not a penny of Roosevelt money can be found. Betting odds as reported in a section of the press may fool the outlanders, but no one in Wall Street is taken in.

Paramount.

Those traders who coppered the Kennedy report on Paramount have no cause to fear financial depression, even if they have large families to support and the New Deal is returned to power, for some time to come. Paramount common is selling nearly double its price at the time when the Kennedy report was issued, a report which was anything but bullish on the company.

Brokers' Loans.

The fall of $22,000,000 in brokers' loans confirms the reports of brokers, during the rush of trading that followed devaluation of the franc, that many new cash accounts had been opened. Prices have edged forward, but cash buying tends to lower loans. Reduction in loans usually indicates that the speculating public isn't flocking to the market, which gives no great pleasure to those who like to see a great deal of activity; but which nevertheless is reassuring on the ground of price stability.

Seat Sale.

The price of Stock Exchange seats has become fairly well stabilized. A year ago a sale was made at $130,000, which was the price of the last membership transfer until today, when some one paid $2,000 for a seat than was paid last September. On a market rally last February seats reached a high of $174,000, but reacted to profit taking or something, as the Wall Street writers put it.

Preparation.

The Treasury's purchase of $47,000,000 of its own securities last month sets a new high figure for this year, being exceeded only in two months in recent years. In March of this year the Treasury bought for investment of its trust funds $32,700,000 of its own obligations and in June the purchase totaled $30,000,000, acquisitions in other months being small. In September, 1935, $60,000,000 was purchased. The big monthly totals seem to correspond with months in which the Treasury floats new issues. Last month it cannot be said that the bond market needed support from the Treasury.

Freight Loads, 820,195 Cars, Six-Year Peak

Total for October 10 Week Is 11.7 Per Cent Over Year Ago.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended October 10 totaled 820,195 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday, the largest volume in six years. This was an increase of 86,041 cars or 11.7 per cent compared with the corresponding week in 1935, an increase of 183,196 cars or 28.8 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934, but a decrease of 110,910 cars or 11.9 per cent below the corresponding week in 1930. Loading of revenue freight for the week of October 10 was an increase of 1,069 cars or .1 per cent above the preceding week.

Coal loading amounted to 155,714 cars, a decrease of 2,743 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 8,899 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 35,202 cars above the same week in 1934.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 30,058 cars, a decrease of 1,818 cars below the preceding week, 6,956 cars below the corresponding week in 1935, and 575 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western Districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended October 10 totaled 19,670 cars, a decrease of 1,048 cars below the preceding week this year, and a decrease of 5,697 cars below the same week in 1935.

Livestock Increase.

Livestock loading amounted to 21,911 cars, an increase of 1,392 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 816 cars below the same week in 1935, and 9,597 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended October 10 totaled 18,281 cars, an increase of 1,633 cars above the preceding week of this year but a decrease of 198 cars below the same week in 1935.

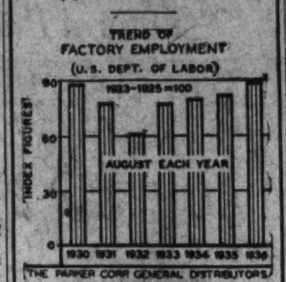
All districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding weeks in 1935 and 1934.

Factory Jobs Rise 51% From 1933 Low



Boston, Mass., Oct. 16.—Factory employment is definitely on the up trend. The August index stood at 8 per cent above a year ago, and 51 per cent above the depression low in the summer of 1933. The largest employment gains over a year ago were made by manufactured iron and steel products, machinery, transportation equipment, and railroad repair shops.

Wheat Advances In Late Trading

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP).—Nervous late jumps of wheat prices in Chicago today more than overcome earelir setbacks. Unexpected strength that developed in the wheat market at Winnipeg was largely responsible for the upward swing here. Rumors of big Canadian exports of wheat current, some indications pointing to at total of 2,000,000 bushels.

Chicago wheat futures closed firm at the day's top, ¼ to ⅝ above yesterday's finish; December, 116⅜ to 116½; May, 115⅛ to 115¼; July, 99⅜ to 99½. Corn, unchanged to 1 cent lower; December, 93⅞ to 94; May, 89⅞; July, 86½. Oats, ⅜ to½ off; December, 40⅝ to 40¾, and rye unchanged to ⅜ down; December, 82¼. In provisions, the outcome varied from 2 cents decline to an equal gain.

Output Gains Faster Than Employment

Increase of Work Week to Normal Length One of Chief Reasons.

New York, Oct. 16.—Production in the country's manufacturing industries increased to a greater extent than employment during the past year, according to the National Industrial Conference Board.

For the manufacturing group of industries as a whole, the conference board points out, production during the first eight months of 1936 averaged 15 per cent below the 1929 level. Employment in the same period averaged 19 per cent below the 1929 level.

One of the principal reasons that production has risen to a greater extent than employment is that many manufacturing firms, previously operating on part time, have been increasing the work week to its normal length. Indicative of this trend is the fact that average hours worked per week by wage earners in manufacturing industry advanced from 36.6 in August, 1935, to 39.4 in August, 1936. This rise has resulted in an increase in the number of man-hours of labor without a corresponding increase in the number of wage earners.

Another factor responsible for production increasing to a greater extent than employment is that during the depression years many manufacturing firms retained a much larger working force than was actually required for the volume of production. Due to this circumstance, a considerable increase in production has been possible without any increase in the number of workers employed.

Dividends Raised; Initial Declared

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Directors of American Chain Co. have declared a dividend of $1 on the common stock, the first distribution on the issue since April, 1931, when 50 cents was paid. Also declared was an initial payment of $1.04166 on the new 5 per cent preferred stock, covering the period from October 1 to December 15.

The Pennroad Corporation today declared a vididend of 25 cents a share, payable December 1 to certificate holders of record October 23. The last dividend was paid in December last year and amounted to 20 cents a share. Priod to that the last one was in September, 1931, with a 20 cents a share disbursement.

Foreign Bond Associates have declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on common stock payable October 23 to stockholders of record October 16. This compares with a dividend of 20 cents paid in the prior quarter.

Directors of Wheeling & Lake Erie Ry. Co., have declared initial quarterly dividends of $1 on the 4 per cent preferred and $1.37½ on the 5½ per cent preferred stocks, both payable November 1 to stock of record October 26.

Business Failures.

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Business failures numbered 164 in the week ended October 8, compared with 147 in the preceding week and 175 in the like 1935 period, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Belgium Backs 3-Power Pact On Armed Help

Asserts Accord Remains in Spite of Leopold's Neutrality View.

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 16.—The Belgian ambassador, Baron Cartier de Marchinene, communicated to Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden tonight assurance that the tri-power defensive alliance between Britain, France and Belgium, concluded after German remilitarization of the Rhineland, stands without reservation.

The ambassador further made clear that general staff agreements between the three powers also remain intact—notwithstanding King Leopold's sensational declaration of neutrality on Wednesday.

He told Eden that Belgium would observe faithfully commitments, including the foregoing, unless they are superseded by others.

Future Obligations.

This was interpreted as meaning that if a new five-power Locarno conference is held, Belgium will do the utmost to restrict her future obligations, shaking off the fetters of foreign entanglements. But should the conference fail to meet or the powers fail to agree on a new treaty, Belgium is ready to continue her reciprocal pledges of armed assistance between herself, Britain and France.

Even the Franco-Belgian military alliance of 1920 survives, according to the Belgian official view, although it was intimated authoritatively tonight that Belgium intends to throw this issue into the melting pot of future negotiations.

Hope for Aid Pact.

Paris, Oct. 16 (AP).—Official France tonight saw in Belgium's expressed intent to adhere to League of Nations obligations a hope for the Franco-Belgian Military Assistance Pact, despite King Leopold's declaration of an independent neutrality policy.

The King's declaration against military alliances with other nations and for an army devoted solely to defense of Belgian borders was interpreted by the French as merely a statment of national policy.

Authoritative quarters, at first quick to term the Belgian pronouncement a new blow to European peace, tonight turned to the view that King Leopold had not repudiated existing treaty obligations.

Consequently, the French cabinet deferred sending a questionnaire to Brussels to seek clarification of the King's speech, made Monday to his cabinet. Instead, the French government decided on informal talks with Belgian spokesmen here and in Brussels.

Trio Is Accused In SEC Act Cases

By the Associated Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday two men in California and a third in Georgia had been taken into custody for violations of the securities act.

Ben R. Bradley, president of the American Bond and Share Corporation, the commission said, surrendered to the United States attorney at Atlanta, where he is under indictment for alleged operation of a scheme the commission said defrauded the public.

The commission said that in California V. L. Schaffer was taken into custody by the United States marshal in San Francisco, while Anton R. Fink was taken in Los Angeles. Both will be held, the commission said, to answer an indictment in Denver charging violation of the securities act in connection with the sale of securities of the North American Bond and Share.

Protesting Artists Stage Own Exhibit

Pittsburgh, Oct. 16 (AP).—A group of American painters, who turned down bids or weren't invited to compete in the 1936 Carnegie International exhibition, matched canvases today with those in the big show.

The 34 "independent" artists sent their paintings to a department store gallery, downtown from the Massive Museum, where the international opened with 323 canvases hung.

Their show started over a matter of $5, more or less, and a controversy over the international's method of getting paintings by invitation, rather than by a "merit" system in which a jury would name exhibitors.

Several eastern organizations of painters resolved last year not to exhibit in museums which refuse to pay to artists a monthly rental fee of one per cent of the presumed value of their canvases. The Carnegie Museum didn't agree to that proposal, so 23 American Painters rejected invitations to the international.

Servant Accused In 2 Poisonings

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Chang Soo Lee, a Korean servant who was said to have resented the presence of strangers in his employer's house, was arrested today and charged with poisoning two guests in the home of Mrs. L. W. Churchill, widow of a wealthy lawyer.

Police asked St. Petersburg (Fla.) officials to investigate the death there last June of Churchill, who first was thought to have succumbed from natural causes. Police said Chang admitted purchasing poison, explaining that he intended to use it to get rid of squirrels.

Last Saturday George Reeves, nephew of Mrs. Churchill, and his wife were in White Plains Hospital suffering from violent stomach pains. Physicians diagnosed their ailment as sugar of lead poisoning.

Reeves had come from Indianapolis to visit Mrs. Churchill.

District Attorney Walter Ferris said Chang apparently had considerable influence over Mrs. Churchill and it was at his suggestion that Churchill's body was cremated. A search of Chang's quarters showed he had $5,000 deposited in 12 banks.

Virginia Press to Hold Fredericksburg Session

Richmond, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—The Virginia Press Association will hold its annual midwinter meeting at Fredericksburg on January 22-23, The executive decided here today.

The committee also discussed plans for establishing a central photoengraving service for members and heard a report from Robert B. Smith, of Newport News, secretary-manager of the association.

Establishment of a publicity-control bureau, enlargement of its news-clipping service, and wider distribution of the association's legal booklet, were among the topics considered by the committee.

On the Air Today

And still the new shows come. Tonight will see the return of that glib and blithe "Broadway Hillbilly," Walter O'Keefe, in a brand-new, full-hour program to be known as the "Saturday Night Party" and advertised as a new-type, gala presentation is "Irvin S. Cobb's Paducah Plantation" with the humorist as the central figure. Locally, Uncle Arthur Godfrey begins his "Get-Together" series with the added attraction of presentation from the Willard Hotel, thereby giving the citizenry an opportunity to attend.

O'Keefe will be supported by a permanent roster of first-rank air stars: Jane Pickens, Walter Cassel, Stuart Churchill and Ferde Grofe and his orchestra. All the details of this extravaganza probably will not be known until air time. Any number of innovations are being planned, notably the introduction of parlor games for the benefit of the listening audience.

You may expect to be greeted with a rousing game of "Coffee Pot," "Twenty Questions" or a musical charade. WRC, at 8.

* * * *

Tonight's premiere of Arthur Godfrey's "Get-Together" brings the popular Sun Dialer to a visible audience for the first time in many months. All the newcomers to the city, who have been barred by the small studio, in which Arthur works each morning, from seeing him in action, will doubtless be on hand at the Willard tonight. And, of course, all the old regulars. If just one-tenth of all the local gentry who have been mentioned on Godfrey's programs in the last year in the interests of lost dogs, birthdays and bingo parties were to appear nothing short of the Griffith Stadium would do the trick.

The piece de resistance of the new series will be a new Godfrey orchestra. Sun Dial listeners have heard this organization at work already as trial numbers were recorded and played for the early morning audiences.

Feature high spot: A girl vocalist winner from open auditions for each of first four weeks, a songstress to be selected from these four for a permanent place in the cast. WJSV, at 7:30.

* * * *

Football for this afternoon: WMAL, Ohio-Northwestern; WJSV, Catholic-DePaul (with Arch McDonald); WRC and WFMD (Frederick), Navy-Yale; WOL, Georgetown-Bucknell.

* * * *

Other features today:

Message from Pope Pius—An appeal to Catholics to support missions, by short wave from Rome, 12 noon, WMAL. To be read by Mgr. Ceslo Constantini, secretary of Congregation Propoganda Fide of Rome.

Shaw Comedy—Backstage activity for Civic Theater's workshop play, "Caesar and Cleopatra," WJSV, at 8.

Helen Broderick—Screen comedienne, guest of Edward Everett Horton in "Chateau," WRC, at 9:30. Also Helen Mayer, Olympic fencing champion.

Be it known that : Tito Guizar, romantic troubadour of the air (and a very grand guy, be it added) is back in the local precincts appearing this week at the Capitol. It was only last spring that Tito did a long and delightful series of programs from N. B. C.'s Washington studios. The girls of the Capital do say he's the "best looking thing" in radio! That's in addition to the fact he sings gloriously . . . Bud Barry has been engaged to do a five-minute sports review for WRC at 5:10 daily, 4:30 Sundays . . . Col. Roscoe Turner has been booked for appearances in "Flying Time," beginning in a month.

John D.'s Home On W. 54th St. Will Be Razed

Landmark to Give Way Before Apartment House or a Museum.

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 16.—The town house of John D. Rockefeller, sr., a landmark for two generations of New Yorkers, is expected to fall before wreckers next year.

This was made known tonight when John D. Rockefeller, jr., who lives in an adjoining house on West Fifty-fourth street, just off Fifth avenue, revealed plans for moving into a Park avenue apartment in the spring and utilizing the two sites for the erection of a modern structure.

Razing of the elder Rockefeller's town house will remove one of the few remaining symbols of the former exclusive neighborhood.

Standing almost alone when it was erected in 1865, the four-story brownstone house is now dwarfed by the towering skyscrapers which almost encircle it. Even the son's town house, which was built 25 years ago and stands next door, rises eight stories.

Behind the houses, hidden from the view of passersby, are broad gardens, utilizing land which today is worth several hundred thousand dollars.

Two possible plans for utilization of the sites are reported under consideration. One is for the erection of an apartment house, while the other is for a museum which would house the more famous pieces of the Rockefeller collections.

1 Slain, 30 Hurt In Paris Disorders

Paris, Oct. 16 (AP).—Violence broke out today as the government stepped in to turn back a new tide of strikes in France.

One person was killed and 30 injured at Chartres in a clash between striking workers in a sugar beet factory and cultivators protesting the walkout.

Police reinforcements were called to separate the factions after the cultivators, leaving a protest meeting, ran headlong into a strikers' parade.

The government attempted to force resumption of work in a Paris factory where a strike held up construction of two new cruisers.

Earlier, government conciliators had announced a settlement of a sailors' strike which had threatened the capital's food supply.

Eyewitness Tells How Loyalists Executed 3 Before Cheering Throng on Barcelona Beach

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona, Spain (by mail to Paris and New York from an eye-witness), Oct. 16.—Six hundred men and women came running down the beach in the gray dawn—to see three men die, Fascist sympathizers arrested by the Catalan government.

Excited . . . laughing . . . jabbering

At 5:30 a. m., just as the sun began to catch sparkling fire on the blue waters of the Mediterranean, a closed truck arrived at the remote beach spot. The driver, a cigarette dangling from his lips, casually strolled to the rear, opened the truck door, pulled out a brown-stained canvas stretcher and leaned it against the side of the truck.

The crowd grew a little quieter.

At 5:47, a passenger bus rumbled up. Three white faces peered out at the murmuring crowd. Blue-uniformed civil guards, with bayonets fixed, led the condemned trio out onto the white beach sands.

The three men did not seem to notice the crowd. Their eyes stared beyond.

A young officer jerked a command. Reluctantly, the prisoners turned their eyes from the sea.

One was a former military judge, short, stocky, tight-lipped—hated by many people here because he prosecuted defendants in a plot against former King Alfonso some years ago. The second was a grizzled, sad-eyed old man. Last of the trio was a tall, darkly handsome young man with a sensitive face . . . lips that fought against a tremble.

A swarthy youth in a militia hat and civilian clothes, pistol in hand, came up.

"Ready."

The former military judge seemed the most spirited. He strode determinedly through the sand, wheeled sharply and faced the squad of 12 riflemen, shoulders erect. The young man stood abjectly at one end. The old man took his place in the middle.

The young officer stepped before them with a piece of paper. He spoke crisply. His words were lost in the wind. The officer stepped back and the firing squad raised rifles.

The crowd hushed.

The former military judge raised his hand and shouted, thumping his chest. He was asking the marksmen to shoot him in the chest.

The young officer strode up. Calmly, he delivered the "coup de grace"—a revolver bullet through the temple—and the crowd closed in.

As this correspondent departed, the people on the surrounding dunes raised clenched firsts with cries of "Viva Espana! Viva la Republica!"

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

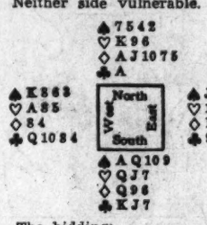
"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher," Ely Culbertson says.

Gullibility.

The mere fact that a finesse appears to be successful does not necessarily mean that it is. Your opponent may have hoped that you would rely on the finesse and make a mistake. Just such an elementary ruse worked the downfall of the gullible declarer in the hand below.

North, dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠ (1)	Pass
2 ♠ (2)	Pass	3 N T (3)	Pass
4 ♠ (4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) Although his distribution is just as well suited to notrump, South properly shows his biddable suit first.

(2) North has but little more than a minimum, but with four trumps and a singleton, easily has the strength necessary to raise.

(3) Offering the choice between game at notrump and at spades.

(4) North prefers that the hand be played at spades.

North's bidding had indicated a short suit. West, therefore, made the excellent opening lead of a low trump. South won with the Queen and laid down the Ace of trumps. When East showed out, South continued with the ten of trumps. West won with the King and returned a trump. South led the Queen of diamonds, and when that was permitted to hold the trick, decided that he needed only to play for extra tricks. He led a small club to the Ace and returned to his hand by leading a small heart to the Queen. West permitted this to hold. Note that this is essentially the same play as East's hold-up with the King of diamonds. Convinced that his opponents were philanthropists, South cashed the King of clubs and took a second diamod finesse.

He had a rude awakening when East won with the King of diamonds and returned a club. The defense hastily gathered in the Queen and ten of clubs, and the Ace of hearts in addition to the King of diamonds.

South should not have relied too much on the apparent success of his diamond finesse. He should have continued with the suit, forgetting entirely about the club King. The club King was not necessary for his contract and it was not safe to cash it until both the King of diamonds and the Ace of hearts had been forced out.

Scouts Pick Savannah.

Beer Sales Keep Fire Department At Hillside, Md.

Fire protection at Hillside, Md., is reckoned in terms of barrels of beer.

The local volunteer fire department is financed almost solely on funds derived from the sale of beer at weekly dances held in the fire house. Tuesday the county board of license commissioners granted the fire company an "on sale" beer permit for the third successive year.

According to Chief William T. Miles approximately $500 a year is earned by the department from the sale of beer. This is pooled with an appropriation from the county commissioners and revenue derived from the sale of Fourth of July fireworks.

The first dance this year will be held October 24.

Slasher Attacks Three Women At Cleveland

4th Knocked to Sidewalk; Police Start Search for Youth.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Oct. 16.—Police Chief George J. Matowitz assigned additional detectives tonight to the East Side district, where three women were slashed with a knife and a fourth knocked to the sidewalk within an hour last night. None was injured seriously.

Miss Sandra Waring, 19, an actress at the Play House, was seized by the shoulder as she approached the theater for her performance. As she turned, she said, an unkempt person of about 17, stabbed her in the hip and ran.

Miss Waring continued on to the Play House and after treatment by a physician, took her part in the show.

Mrs. Pauline Kirby, 40, was slashed as she walked along the street by a youth who first bumped into her and then pushed a knife into her hip.

Mrs. Marguerite Songer, 27, was cut in a similar manner in front of her home in the same neighborhood. Miss Esther Persky, 40, was struck from behind and knocked to the sidewalk.

Both Mrs. Songer and Mrs. Kirby received hospital treatment.

Miss Persky injured her knees falling to the sidewalk, but did not require hospital treatment. She said she heard someone walking fast behind her, but was struck before she could turn.

Maid Off to Collect Novel Winning Prize

New York, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Sally Salminen, kitchen maid who bought a dime-store pad of paper because she wanted to be a writer, prepared to sail for Sweden today after winning a $2,100 prize for the novel she wrote after the dishes were washed.

Without much hope, she entered her novel in a contest conducted by the Finnish publishing house of Holger Schildts. She had been working on the book two years. It won.

"I just didn't decide at one time to write," she said. "Ever since I can remember I wanted to. I was always sort of a cry-baby, feeling sad because I didn't have an education."

Court to Rule Monday In Bette Davis Action

London, Oct. 16 (AP).—Hearings in Warner Bros.' suit to bar blonde Bette Davis from acting in England ended today to the disappointment of a courtroom crowd which had waited in vain to see the Hollywood star on the witness stand.

Justice Branson said he hoped to reach a decision Monday. Bette did not testify.

The More You Wear It, The More You Like It!

RAGLAN
27.50

The Knit-tex topcoat is about the most useful coat a man can own. It is extremely good-looking—soft and luxurious to the touch. It provides ample warmth on all but the coldest days and in mild weather it is never burdensome. It is sturdy and long-wearing and very seldom wrinkles. In addition, it resists moisture and drizzle to a remarkable degree. It is a coat you can wear with equal confidence when you go to business . . . or when traveling . . . or when motoring . . . or at the country club.
